PATROL BASE
COURAGE, Iraq - While excited children and delighted parents open their presents Christmas morning across America, many Soldiers in Iraq awoke to business as usual - another day down range.

Though holiday greetings of "Merry Christmas!" are rampant on outlying patrol bases such as Patrol Base Courage, the festivities are subdued and the mission remains first and foremost, said Sgt. 1st Class Matthew Wooten, the patrol base mayor, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 5th Cavalry Regiment, 1st Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division.

"The mission has not changed regardless of (it being) Christmas. We'll try to squeeze Christmas in sometime between missions," said the native of Virginia Beach, Va.

ed north of the Iraqi capital, is to secure their center of operations, which looks almost like a hasty-fighting position, and the surrounding area of Agru Quf, as well, said Wooten, who is deployed for a second tour of duty.

Despite spending the holidays in a remote location, away from friends and family, Soldiers are at least able to celebrate with one another, said Wooten, who has been away from his family during Christmas four times during his military career.

CAMP STRIKER, Iraq - In a city where many of the residents must use candlelight because they have no power, Soldiers from the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 10th Mountain Division (LI) celebrated Christmas by candlelight in Baghdad.

Soldiers of the 2nd "Commando" Brigade and the local community gathered in the 2nd BCT chapel for a Community Candlelight Service Dec. 24 here.

The service was opened with an invocation then members of the choir led the congregation in Christmas carols.

"It was encouraging to take a break from everything and gather with the other believers to celebrate Christmas," said Capt. Scott Carow, a physical therapist and native of Tampa, Fla., serving with the 210th Brigade Support Battalion. Carow, a member of the choir, played the guitar and sang during the service.

Although the Soldiers were unable to be with their families on Christmas Eve, the service offered the warmth of the season.

"The service made me feel like I was at home," said Pfc. Shana Keenan, an intelligence analyst and native of Steubenville, Ohio with the 2nd Brigade Special Troops Battalion. "At home, we do this (attend candlelight services) every year."

While some Soldiers attended the service as part of a home-away-from-home tradition, others rejoiced for the first time.

"This is something different for me," said Sgt. Brendaliz Morales, a 2nd BSTB intelligence analyst and native of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., as she recalled her Christmas family traditions.

"My family would get together and stay up until midnight then open presents. But the service allowed me to be with my family here."

Throughout the ceremony Soldiers united with each other as they lit candles.

"To me, the candlelight service is way of calming down the hustle and bustle of the season and bringing things back to the real meaning," said Spc. Jenna Maravillas, an information systems operator with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd BCT and native of Lake In The Hills, Ill., as she recalled going to candlelight services throughout her childhood.

"It was nice to see so many people show up to take time to remember the real meaning of Christmas."

mander, the best part of spending Christmas on a patrol base is, "being with the boys," who he called a bunch of "great Americans," who serve selflessly.

"We've lost two Soldiers already, but the boys understand we have a mission to do. Everybody understands the mission and we have a motivated company. We're sticking together and we're going to see it through," said Shields, who hails from Brandon, Miss.

In addition to the camaraderie built from experiencing a common challenge, the Soldiers of Patrol Base Courage share a special Christmas meal, compliments of their diligent cooks, Shields said.

For some Soldiers on outlying patrol bases, experiencing Christmas while deployed to Iraq taught them the true meaning of the holiday. That been the case for Pvt. Patrick Ozment, an infantryman with 2nd Bn., 14th Infantry Regt., 2nd BCT, 10th Mountain Div.

Ozment enlisted at 17, deployed after turning 18 and is spending his first Christmas away from his family in western Baghdad. He now calls Patrol Base Gator Swamp home.

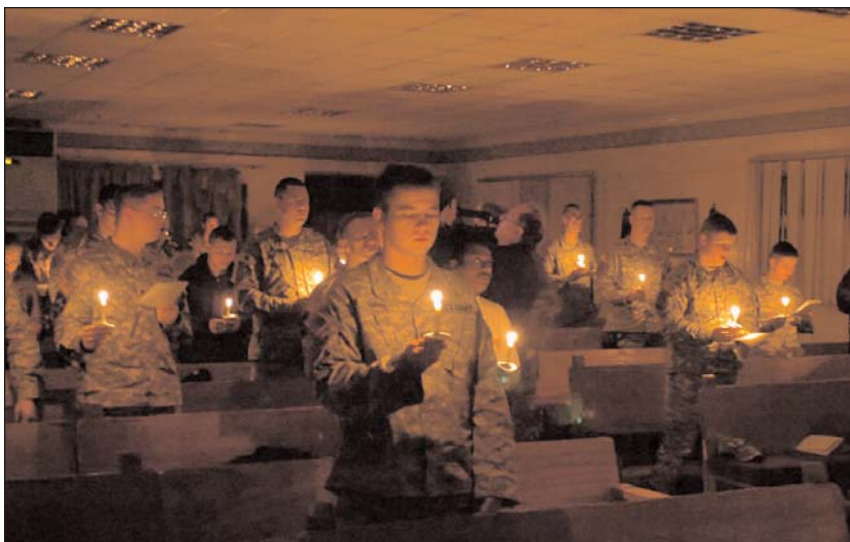

"Now I really know what it's about. It's about family and I miss mine," said the native of Jefferson County, Texas. "Just grasp every single moment you can because it's the most precious thing."
