

Census survey begins Monday

Students in Hawaii's public schools, including Mokapu Elementary school, will bring home a federal census survey card Oct. 4.

This annual survey determines the number of federally-connected pupils in the public school system for whom the state receives funds under Public Law 81-874, the Federal Impact Aid program.

Impact aid provides partial reimbursement to the state for educational services rendered to students whose parents live and/or work on federal property.

During the 1981-82 school year,

36,193 students out of a total official enrollment count of 162,534 were found to be federally connected, and the state received a little more than 7.8 million in impact aid. This is less than $220 per federally-connected pupil, as compared with the state's expenditures of approximately $2,800 per pupil.

Parents are urged to complete the survey card for each child attending public school and return them promptly to the school. Failure to respond to the survey results in a significant loss of money for Hawaii's public schools.

The beginning

Blue Angels fly

On June 15, 1946, the Blue Angels flew their flight demonstration to "demonstrate precision techniques of naval aviation to naval personnel and, if directed, to the public." Today, after 36 years, the 1982 Blue Angels accomplish essentially the same mission. However, that mission has taken on new perspectives.

By presenting a faultless display of aerial artistry to what has now exceeded 152 million spectators, the Blue Angels seek to attract talented and qualified youth to join them in the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. This is an important function in an all-volunteer naval force. As "Ambassadors of Goodwill" the Blue Angels take naval aviation to the public as a means of demonstrating the quality of men and equipment comprising the U.S. Naval service. When traveling abroad, this role is expanded as these young men and women represent our country and those who serve it.

Internally, the Flight Demonstration Squadron strives to set a standard of perfection for its contemporaries in naval aviation thus enabling our Navy and Marine Corps to continue to produce the finest aviators in the world.

Sixteen officers and seventy-four enlisted personnel comprise the Navy Flight Demonstration Squadron, the Blue Angels.

Seven of the officers are tactical jet pilots, four of whom fly in the diamond formation, two as solo maximum performance demonstrators and the seventh is the narrator for the aerial demonstration who also provides jet orientation flights for news media representatives. The Events Coordinator is a Naval Flight Officer and is responsible for logistics coordination, and the Public Affairs Officer is responsible for all public affairs matters. The Maintenance Officer is in charge of the enlisted maintenance crew and is responsible for ensuring that the ten aircraft assigned are kept in topnotch condition.

THE SQUADRON'S FLIGHT Surgeon administers to both the physical and psychological needs of the officers and the enlisted personnel, and the Administrative Officer and Supply Officer perform their duties and maintain normal operations while the Blues are on the road. There are also three Marine Corps Transport Pilots and five enlisted crewmen assigned to fly the C-130 support aircraft that carries the necessary equipment and personnel needed to perform demonstrations at show sites. The seventy-four enlisted personnel are specialists in all the aviation roles required to support and maintain the Squadron's maintenance, administrative and public affairs requirements.

Early January finds the "Blues" moving to their winter training home at Naval Air Facility, El Centro, Calif. The Imperial Valley provides the excellent weather conditions and training environment for the Blues to prepare themselves for the upcoming season.

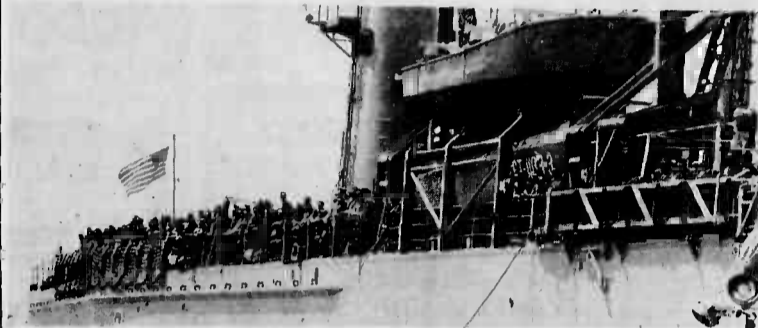

For the next 60 to 70 days all hands devote total concentration to honing flying skills to the fine edge of perfection required to carry on the Blue Angels tradition. The pilots fly twice a day seven days a week, with each day beginning at 5:30 a.m. and ending in the early afternoon with the remainder of the day being occupied with a self-imposed physical fitness program. All emphasis is put on preparing the pilots and crew for the no-nonsense flight operations of the long show season to come. By mid to late March, the Squadron is ready to debut the skills and teamwork which they have worked so diligently to perfect. Anticipation is felt throughout the unit to "get on the road." The Blue Angels are once again groomed for the new season.

Once the season begins, a pattern of operation is established. The number seven pilot precedes the main body to each show site, by one day, to give a last minute check on the myriad of preparations that they have been completed over several months prior to each demonstration. On the next day the demonstration aircraft and C-130 transport arrive and the pilots get their look at the show site.

WHILE VISITING AT show sites, the Blue Angels visit hospitals and youth organizations, speak to civic clubs and attend school functions in order to provide positive community relations. They also talk to young men and women with potential interests in Navy careers both on campus and at social gatherings sponsored by local Navy and Marine Corps recruiters. In addition, the Blues devote a portion of their time to publicizing the flight demonstration in each city by way of TV appearances, radio and newspaper interviews, as well as having the number seven pilot conduct press rides for a representative of each news media.

By becoming totally involved with the communities wherein they conduct an airshow, the Blue Angels not only achieve their objective as ambassadors of goodwill, but complete their assigned mission as well.

Welcome home

Approximately 1,200 Marines of the 37th Marine Amphibious Unit returned to Pearl Harbor Friday after a six month deployment to the Western Pacific.

Marines from the 3d Battalion, 3d Marines; Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron-165 (Composite); and Marine Amphibious Unit Service Support Group-31, from the 1st Marine Brigade, were deployed aboard three ships of the U. S. Navy. The ships were the USS Peleliu, the USS Cleveland and the USS Peoria.

The Marines visited several countries during their deployment including Australia, the Republic of the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Japan. They made an amphibious landing on Iwo Jima and participated in two multi-national exercises, Cobra Gold-82 in Thailand and Freedom Pennant/Valiant Usher-82 in Australia.

The Marines of the 37th Marine Amphibious Unit have been replaced in the Western Pacific by Marines of the 31st Marine Amphibious Unit.

Accidental find

Bird bones raise new questions

by Sgt Pepper Davis

An accidental find has blossomed into a significant scientific discovery.

Fragmented fossil bird bones, said to be about 125,000 years old have been found on the cliff side of the Ulupau Crater here. This find raises new questions about the abundance and variety of bird life before the Polynesians arrived.

In early August, Gustav Paulay, a graduate student at the University of Washington, was examining a 120,000-year-old layer of fossil shells in the crater when he noticed bird bones in a layer of soil beneath the shells. That indicated that the fossil bones were older than the layer of shells above it.

Paulay had the bird fossils analyzed by Carla Kishinami of the Bishop Museum in Honolulu. She said the bones were possibly those of ducks, crows, geese, hawks, finches and owls. Paulay collected more than 200 samples of the fossils, now on a temporary loan to the museum.

Storrs Olson, a noted paleontologist and ornithologist from the Smithsonian Institution, and his wife/co-researcher Helen James, visited the site Sept. 17 through 20. Before that, Olson and James were on Maui searching for new evidence on bird life in early Hawaii.

UPON VIEWING THE crater site, Olson called the discovery a slice of time. It tells us what was here 120,000 years ago." As for the authentication of the age, Olson said there was no reason for doubt, and it was safe to assume that Paulay's find is the oldest bird fossil ever found in Hawaii. "I don't know of any fossil birds from an oceanic island that are this old," he said.

According to the paleontologist, the fossils were also the first fresh water deposit to be located in the state. He suggested that years ago, the site was once a fresh water environment.

Olson said these fossils add new dimensions to the bird habitation theory of Hawaii. "This find could indicate two things: it can say something (morphological) has changed, and it can say how much of a chance there has been." But he also admitted that there may not have been any changes at all.

He said once the fossils are cleaned and scrutinized further — a process that can range from months to years — they will be able to determine the sizes and shapes of the birds. He said some of the species still exist, and some are totally extinct.

"WE'LL NEVER KNOW the whole story, but this find is one more piece in the puzzle," he said.

According to Diane Drigot, the environmental protection specialist here, to preserve the scientific value of the site, public access will be controlled, and visits to the site will be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Learn not to burn wherever you are

This year commemorates the 60th anniversary of the first Fire Prevention Week. Over the years, Fire Prevention Week has reminded people of the importance of fire safety, particularly through the experiences of some very famous fires, such as the "Great Chicago Fire." From Oct. 7-9, 1871, the Chicago fire claimed 250 lives and destroyed more than 2,150 acres of the city. At the same time, another fire devastated the small lumber town of Peshtigo, Wis. and within 24 hours claimed 800 lives. These two fires accounted for the largest loss-of-life in American fire history.

What was learned, however, was that fire prevention must be practiced. In 1911, the first Fire Prevention Day was initiated by the Fire Marshal's Association of North America, and officially declared by President Woodrow Wilson in 1920. President Warren Harding proclaimed the first Fire Prevention Week in 1922. In Canada and the United States, Fire Prevention Week is always observed during the week in which Oct. 9 falls. This year, Fire Prevention Week is Oct. 3-9.

This year's theme for Fire Prevention Week is Learn Not to Burn Wherever You Are. This title is aimed at you — to remind you to be aware of your surroundings at all times whether at home, at work, at school or at play. Be mindful of your safety from fire wherever you are.

For example, how observant are you of fire hazards? Every room and every person is a potential hazard. In the kitchen, a dangling coffee pot wire could be the cause of a serious scald to an adventurous toddler. Train yourself to keep wires out of the reach of children and to help prevent serious burn injuries to your family. Take a walk through your house, from the basement through to the attic and out to the garage. Make a list of the things that may threaten your life safety and work with your family to correct these hazards.

ARE YOU PREPARED IF A FIRE does occur in your home? You should have an escape plan in mind from whatever room you are in and you should follow the EDITH (Exit Drills In The Home) plan. By practicing your escape, you can learn of any obstacles like jammed windows or doors that might prevent your safe escape. You can correct these obstacles and at the same time train yourself to respond more quickly and correctly to an emergency situation.

Smoke detectors are an essential part of your escape plan. You need to have smoke detectors placed throughout your house to warn you of the presence of smoke or fire. Make sure the detectors are in good working order by checking them once a month. Once outside the house, you can report the fire and go to your meeting place. Wait there for the fire department to arrive.

What if you are in an unfamiliar place... say in a hotel or motel? With so many people traveling these days, whether for vacation or business, it is important that fire safety procedures be followed while away from home, too.

WHEN YOU ARRIVE AT THE hotel or motel, be sure to ask the clerk about the fire safety features of the building. As with any structure you are in, locate the exits, check where they lead to, and see that they are not blocked. Being aware of your new surroundings can only help you, especially if you really do get caught in a fire. The situation can become so disorienting so quickly. Being prepared helped one couple escape safely during the MGM Grand Hotel fire in 1980. They had learned fire safety behaviors from their son who studied Learn Not to Burn in school, and remembering the information he shared with them helped save their lives!

Other places to remember fire safety are at school and at work. Not only should you know your exits from the building, but you should conduct "drills" to make sure that everyone knows the right things to do to escape in case of fire. If you do not have fire and smoke drills at your place of employment, check with your personnel department to see about developing one. Most schools are required by law to conduct drills and many schools are now required to teach fire safety as part of their curriculum as well. Through such programs children are learning how to protect themselves, prevent fires from occurring, and persuade others to practice fire safe habits to help ensure that you and your surroundings will be here tomorrow. So, Learn Not To Burn Wherever You Are.

The world famous Blue Angels precision flying team will come into view in Windward skies Oct. 30 and 31, as they highlight the MCAS Kaneohe Bay Open House.

Statewide pulmonary education commences

Kicking off a series of statewide pulmonary medical education programs, the Hawaii Thoracic Society, medical section of the American Lung Association of Hawaii, will hold its 20th Annual Fireside Conference Monday, Oct. 11, 7 p.m., at the Hale Koa Hotel in Waikiki.

Featured speaker will be Sol Katz, M.D., a highly acclaimed pulmonary expert who is Professor of Medicine in the Pulmonary Division at Georgetown University Hospital. At the Friday evening conference, Dr. Katz will be discussing "Are Chest Roentgenograms Of Any Value?", which will be followed by special case presentations.

Noting that programs such as the Fireside Conference and Statewide Visiting Professorship Program continue to provide Hawaii's medical community with an important learning experience, Rosemary Respcio, HTS Executive Secretary commented, "It is increasingly difficult for medical and paramedical personnel to keep up with the rapidly expanding body of knowledge relating to the diagnosis, treatment, and care of respiratory illness. This upcoming program offers physicians and other medical professionals an excellent opportunity to learn about the very latest in pulmonary care from one of the nation's top medical experts."

Tuesday, Oct. 12, Dr. Katz will give a presentation on "The Many Problems of Pleural Effusion," 12:30 p.m. at Wahiawa General Hospital, and 8 a.m. at Kaiser Medical Center.

Thursday, Oct. 14, 12:15 p.m., he will discuss "Sarcoidosis" at Tripler Medical Center.

Friday, Oct. 15, Dr. Katz will give an 8 a.m.

Monday, Oct. 18, he will fly to Kaula, and speak on "The Many Problems of Pleural Effusion," 12:30 p.m., at G. N. Wilcox Memorial Hospital.

Wednesday, Oct. 20, he will discuss "The Continuing Dilemma of the Solitary Nodule," 7 a.m., on Maui at Maui Memorial Hospital.

Made possible through Christmas Seal donations, these programs are free and open to physicians and other allied health personnel.

These continuing medical education activities meet the criteria for Category 1 Credits on an hour-for-hour basis for the Physician's Recognition Award of the American Medical Association.

For more information on the Honolulu Conference, contact Rosemary Respcio, 537-5966. For neighbor island information, call (Kauai) Bonnie Matsumura, 245-1142, (Maui) Barbara Meierdiecks, 244-5110, or (Hawaii) Amy Hamane, 935-1206.

CORRODED TERMINALS CAUSE RESISTANCE
Corrosion on battery terminals is a well known problem. Just how that problem effects the voltage regulator is not as readily known. NAPA batteries says voltage regulators do just that: they regulate — holding alternator or generator voltages within a very narrow range. Thus even minimal resistance caused by corroded terminal connections keeps a battery from receiving proper charging current, and it gradually starves. Sooner or later the motorist pays for his neglect with little if any performance from his undercharged, sulfated battery. Corroded contact surfaces should be cleaned bright with a wire brush. NAPA Batteries also suggests greasing terminals with petroleum jelly after connections are completed. This will help maintain clean electrical contact longer.

Visit the MARS station to reach out and touch someone by Sgt Inez J. Stoner

"I don't understand why people aren't beating the door down to use this," said Master Sergeant Bill Riley, Chief Operator of the Military Affiliated Radio System here.

The MARS station is one of the most inexpensive systems available for keeping Marines in touch with their families. With the help of five Marines and a huge antenna, Marines can communicate with their families at home and women can send messages to their deployed Marines in the Western Pacific.

THE MARS STATION offers three different forms of communications, all free of charge. The E-Gram is used to send personal messages to deployed Marines while they are still on ship. E-Grams are sent from the MARS station in building 505, from 7:30 until 11 a.m. and 1 until 7 p.m.

E-Grams may be used to send birthday and anniversary messages, holiday greetings or semi-important messages of a timely nature. For example, if a wife needs extra money in a hurry, while her husband is on ship, she can send her request via an E-Gram. According to Riley, however, "the E-Gram shouldn't be used for extreme emergencies that should be handled through the (American) Red Cross, such as a death or serious illness."

THERE IS LITTLE ABUSE of this free means of communication mainly because very few people use it. "I guess it's just that most of the people don't know that they can use the E-Gram," said Riley. However, abuse does occur when people try to substitute the E-Gram for a letter.

Another service provided by the MARS station is the phone patch. Patches are initiated by the individual Marine while on ship and are transmitted by radio from the ship to anyone of more than 30 MARS stations in the Pacific area. Whichever station happens to be monitoring the frequencies at the time of the ship transmits, receives the transmission and patches it into the telephone system.

IF THE TELEPHONE call is a local one, then the phone patch is free. The only charge occurs when a Marine on ship contacts a MARS station and wants a phone patch to a long-distance number.

In this case, the only charge is for the long-distance collect phone call.

A few things should be remembered about the phone patch. Calls can only be originated from the ship and only at certain times when the ship is allowed to transmit. There are certain areas in the world where, for security reasons, the ship must maintain radio silence. Other than these certain areas, phone patches can be made from ships anywhere in the world. Normally, no more than about 20 phone patches can be completed from a ship in one day.

THE THIRD SERVICE provided by the MARS station is the MARS-Gram. Military personnel, dependents and civilians working on military installations are authorized to use this service that costs 20 cents less than a first class letter. The MARS-gram is similar to the E-Gram but is sent anywhere in the continental United States and to APO and FPO addresses instead of to ships.

A total of five MARS-Grams may be sent to five different people every day and can be used for just about any type of message. Again, Riley cautions that this service shouldn't be used for emergencies that should be handled by the American Red Cross.

"You can say anything on a MARS-Gram," said Riley, "As long as it's not dirty!"

FORMS FOR MARS-GRAMS are found at the MARS Station, and the Marine Corps Exchange, and may be left in the MARS-Gram boxes provided. The messages are picked up daily and sent by radio to the West Coast. There, the messages are put into the MARS teletype system and sent to the MARS station located closest to the address on the MARS-Gram. In most cases, this station is owned and operated by a civilian who provides this free service as a hobby.

"Usually the message is called over the phone and then a courtesy copy of the message is sent out," said Riley.

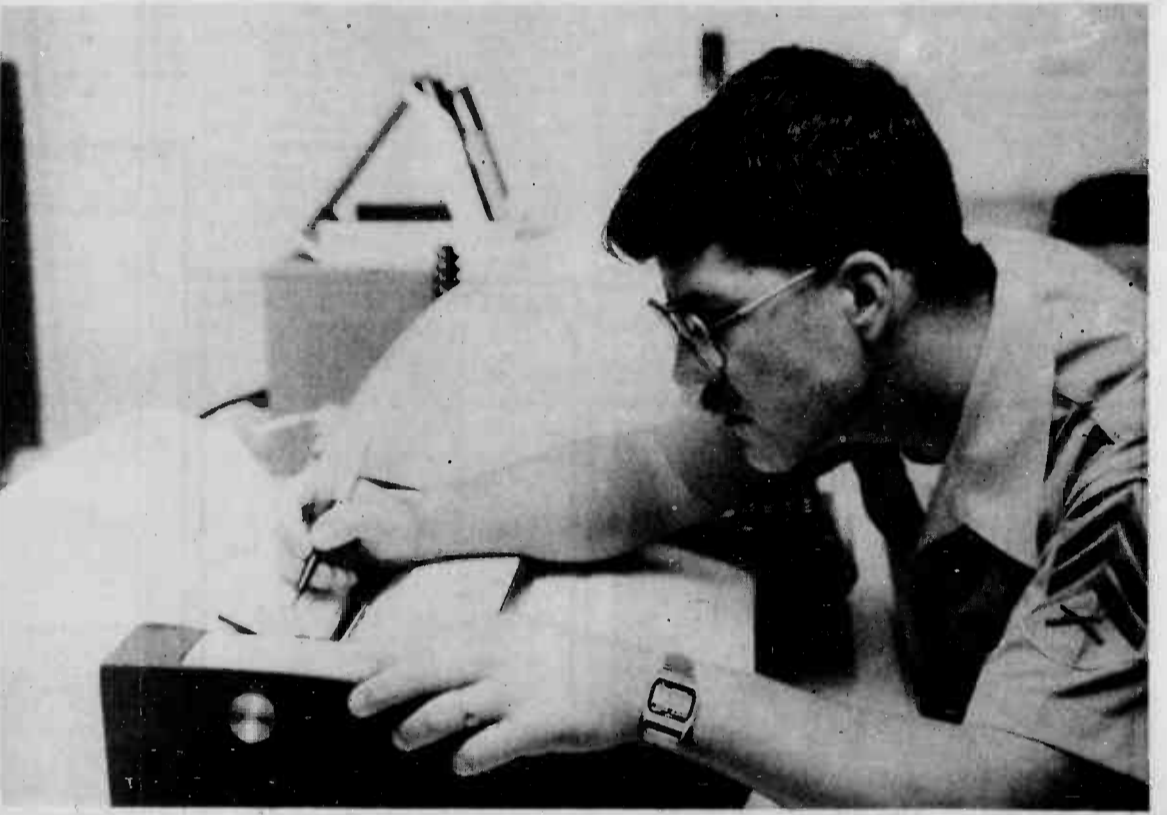

Since this service is free, there is no guarantee that the message will be delivered, however, according to Riley, MARS-Grams have a 96 percent completion rate.

"We have the ability to put out 200 MARS-Grams a day without any problem," he said, "but we put out one, maybe two a day."

"I DON'T KNOW IF people think that MARS is just for military communications or if they just don't know that it's here," said Riley. "But whatever it is, they just don't use it. It baffles me why people aren't lining up to use this service."

Counterintelligence field keeps a secret a secret

EDITORS NOTE: Due to operational procedures the names of the 11th Counterintelligence Team personnel in this article will be referred to as the Team Chief (NCOIC) and Team Leader (OIC).

Hollywood has dramatized counterintelligence agents as shifty-eyed, sneaky characters who wear dark glasses, and overcoats with turned-up collars. They usually lurk in the darkness, waiting for a chance to pilfer enemy secret documents.

The 11th Counterintelligence Team (CIT) chief dismisses the image as bunk. "We're not spies, nor are we cloak and dagger types," he said.

The team's straight-out-of-the-book mission is very elaborate, but the CIT chief simplifies it: "We keep secrets a secret, and people safe."

The CIT, staffed by a handful of Marines, is virtually self-supporting. They have their own vehicles and equipment, and to make up in talent for what they lack in numbers, most of the members are cross-trained in communications, embarkation, motor transport, and supply. "We're almost like a complete unit, only we need assistance with administration and food," said the team chief.

Because of the nature of their work, the team commander commented, "You don't go home and talk to your wife about your job."

The CIT chief describes the team as special, but its members are by no means different from other Marines. "We have to fulfill our Marine requirements, too. We run the PFT, take the EST and go to the range each year," he said.

One team member added that their distinctiveness can be attributed to the caliber of people on the CIT. "As a sergeant or a staff sergeant, you can be called to give briefings to unit commanders, so you have to be sharp. You also have to keep abreast of current events, and keep your ears and eyes open," he commented.

Going into the counter intelligence field in many cases is a smart move, yet it requires some impressive credentials. Candidates are thoroughly screened by the counterintelligence board, which considers every case from many angles. If accepted, a candidate is trained on the job for several months and subsequently sent to the formal school at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

"One unique thing about the school is, even though there is one for enlisted and one for officers, the Marines attend the officer's course. It's much more demanding, and the Marines remain together," explained the team commander.

He further explained that counterintelligence Marines spend a lot of time on temporary additional duty, attending sub-specialty schools throughout their careers.

According to the commander, promotions in the staff noncommissioned officer ranks are pretty good. "And if a Marine is sharp, he also has a good crack at picking up warrant officer," he said.

Pest control is not just another dirty job

by Sgt Ernie Carter and
Sgt Corrina Martell

A cockroach crawls across the counter at home; ants have gathered in a coffee cup at the office, and rodents can be heard scurrying about in the gear closet. At wits end? Have no fear.

Entomologists, or pest controllers, are hard at work aboard the air station to eliminate the annoying pests.

"Most people think pest control is just a dirty job anyone can do," said Ernest Sundborg, a member of the air station's Facilities Department, "but it is a highly scientific skill. I have to know how to mix the chemicals in just the right proportions, and count the amounts of pesticide in parts per thousand."

Sundborg accomplishes this task with the aid of gauges, meters and slide rules.

His work is carefully monitored by the Department of Defense and the Environmental Protection Agency. "I have to re-certify every three years," he said.

Re-certification includes dealing with contractors, a general view of the laws pertaining to pest control and a 150 question examination on all phases of applied entomology.

Sundborg and his associates at the Facilities Department handle all the pest control problems at the air station.

"The airfield is a primary concern," he said. "We use herbicides to keep the grass down so the pilots can see the runway lights. We also keep the grass off our side of the walkway leading from the H-3 Gate to Kailua.

"We routinely provide pest control for 28 establishments on the station, including the 7-Day Store, dining facilities, and the commissary.

"Much of our work is what we call 'crack and crevice.' In the dining facilities, we can't use general spraying so we have to localize."

Sundborg feels that fleas are a big problem on station. "Dog owners keep their pets in their quarters and the animals naturally bring in fleas, which love to get into carpeting."

Shigeru Terasako, Pest Control

foreman, said that rodents are a problem. Rodenticides or mechanical traps are used to eliminate them.

One of the most time-consuming jobs pest controllers encounter is rehabilitation of quarters. "We give the quarters a good general spray for roaches and ants between occupancies," said Sundborg. "Then we look for termites and other pests."

The pesticides used are not particularly hazardous to people, according to Sundborg. "Most are pretty low in toxicity. A measure we take to protect people is to add an emetic to some of the poisons. If these poisons are swallowed, the emetic will force people to regurgitate. The poisons are still effective on rodents since they cannot regurgitate."

Terasako explained that people must leave facilities that are being fumigated until the spray has completely dried.

Very few pest control jobs are contracted to outside companies, except for termite fumigators. "They work on dry wall termites," said Sundborg. "The fumigation process kills the adult, but not the eggs. Naturally the termites need the adults' care, so they die too.

"We are tasked with the supervision of these outside contracts to ensure they are carried out within certain specifications."

Sundborg has learned to identify numerous insects and rodents and knows things about them the average person wouldn't consider. Think like, "Of the 3,500 species of roaches worldwide, only 17 species reside in Hawaii," or, "They were all introduced by visitors to the islands."

Learn seven successful steps to become ideal person

Turn out more work? Beat your deadlines? Of course. Come up with an idea that earns or saves a tidy sum for the organization? No doubt about it — Such accomplishments should help you get a raise. But how do you do it? If you're already doing a good job, how can you do a sufficiently better job to make the big difference? These seven steps, taken in many successful careers, may help.

• Listen with both ears. Speech experts estimate that the average person hears only half of what's said. By getting all the facts the first time around, you avoid costly mistakes and the time-wasting back-tracking. A busy supervisor prizes the employee who has to be told only once.

• Become an idea person. It's easier than many people think. Be observant. Be skeptical that the "tried and true" way is always the best.

Train yourself to pinpoint areas of waste, inefficiency, and needless complications in your daily work routine. Form the brain-storming habit; write down as many solutions as you can think of, drawing on everything you know from your experience and from what you observed.

• Recognize your fallings. It's fine to have faith in your abilities, but it may be equally profitable to understand what traits are blocking your path to success. What does the supervisor most often criticize about your work? Would certain tasks be easier if you were better organized or more highly trained?

• Know your supervisor's job so that one day, when he or she moves up to a higher slot, you'll be a logical candidate for the position. Understand the duties of all the other employees, and how their efforts are coordinated — you'll have a clearer perspective of your own job. You'll understand their problems and pressures, and learn how to be most useful.

In short, you will be a more effective employee — the kind who deserves a raise.

• Make the clock work for you. Plan your time as much as possible by using calendar pads, memory-jogging notes, and methodical files. Get into the habit of estimating how long each task should take you then try to save time.

• Learn! Read as widely as possible: trade publications, professional and technical books in your field, and general-interest magazines. That money-making knack of idea-creation depends to a great extent on how much knowledge you can draw upon. Also, seek to acquire skills that will make you more promotable.

• Know what courses of action to avoid. You may earn a promotion as much for what you don't do as for your more positive accomplishments.

Bombarding the supervisor with questions is not a sign of alertness; ask only the questions that are strictly necessary to get the job done and then do it to the best of your ability.

ON THE ROAD — Captain John Bates cycles between 150-200 miles a week training for the Ironman Triathlon. (Photo by Sgt Chris Taylor)

Captain is real 'Iron' man

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

As Captain John Bates starts October's running of the Ironman Triathlon World Championship in Kailua-Kona, he will be at a slight disadvantage compared to the other 850 participants.

Captain Bates has one functional lung.

During his first tour in the Marine Corps as an enlisted man Bates was seriously wounded by Vietnamese machine gun fire. "The round went through the right side of my chest and because I was wearing a flak jacket, I lost a major portion of my lung." The round peppered the jacket and spread pieces into his chest cavity.

Bates was wounded on two other occasions. First, he suffered knee injuries from the shrapnel of a grenade, and secondly, by a punji stick trap which pierced his left foot and severed the nerves in two toes.

Since that tour Bates left the Marine Corps and earned his degrees. Bates attended the University of Central Arkansas and graduated first with a bachelor's degree in Education and his master's in Secondary School Counseling and Rehabilitation Counseling.

After proving to the Marine Corps that he was physically fit to return to active duty, Bates was commissioned and is now the project officer of the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps in the 12th Marine Corps District.

Being stationed at Treasure Island in San Francisco doesn't give the veteran much salt water training for the Ironman's 2.4-mile swim. "The temperature in the bay varies from 53 to 57 degrees throughout the year," stated the captain. "After about 40 minutes of swimming your in danger of over exposure."

But Bates has managed to swim an average of nine to 14 miles weekly in pools since he seriously started training in March. He reduced his running from 70 to 50 miles a week because, "I'm still very cautious of injuries." His cycling amounts to 150 to 200 miles a week.

"I swim and run during the noon hour and cycle for about an hour to an hour and a half at night," said Bates commenting on his training schedule. "I use a hard/soft system. One day I'll swim hard and run soft and the next day I'll swim soft and run hard. Saturday is my catch all day and I try to spend Sundays resting."

Since his first marathon, the 1977 Marine Corps Marathon, the 36-year-old mustang has completed 13 others, always finishing in the top 50 percent of the runners. Bates has also run in this year's U.S. Triathlon Service (1.2-mile swim, 21.7-mile bike and 9.3-mile run) "to get the feel of a triathlon."

Bates doesn't expect to be the top finisher in his age group, but he wants to complete the 140.2-mile course in under 13 hours.

The captain had to prove to the Marine Corps he was physically fit when he returned, and by using the grandfather of triathlons as an example, Bates will prove to the 12th district future officers what is meant by the term, "perseverance personified."

Champions return to defend their titles

The toughest, most exciting Ironman Triathlon yet is shaping up for the Oct. 9 Bud Light Ironman Triathlon World Championship in Kona, Hawaii, as all five previous winners are returning to battle it out for the first-to-finish honors.

Coming back to defend their titles are: Scott Tinley, Feb. 6, winner with a time of 9 hours, 19 minutes and 41 seconds; John Howard, 1981 winner (9:38:39); Dave Scott, 1980 winner (9:24:33); Tom Warren, 1979 winner (11:15:56); and Gordon Haller, 1978 winner (11:46).

In the Women's Division, seven of the top 10 women finishers from the February's race are back, including Kathleen McCartney, 23 who finished in 11:09:40 and Julie Moss, 23, who came in just 29 seconds behind McCartney in an emotion-packed, neck-and-neck finish.

These first place finishers will not have the grueling 140.6-mile course to themselves. Other top finishers returning are Jeff Tinley, Scott's younger brother, who placed third in February with a 9:23:16 and Greg Reddan, from Australia, the first international finisher, who placed seventh overall with a time of 10:13:51.

Other athletes in the top 10 in February, who are returning are fifth place finisher Reed Gregerson, sixth place finisher Jeff Jones, and eighth place finisher Kim Bushong.

Two entrants returning in October who did quite well early in previous races but were forced to drop out are Scott Molina and Pat Hines. Molina, 22, was in second place in the 1981 Ironman Triathlon until the last few miles of the marathon when sheer exhaustion and dehydration forced him to drop out. Hines, 28, was one of the first two women out of the water during the swim portion of the February race and was the lead woman by a substantial margin in the bike race. Unfortunately, a hair line fracture in her ankle forced her out of the marathon and she was unable to finish.

Top women finishers returning for this race are Lynn Brooks and Sally Edwards, who both placed third in February in a tie at 11:51:00; Cheryl Lloyd and Claire McCarty, who both placed fifth in a tie at 11:57:58; and Shawn Wilson, who placed tenth with a time of 12:25:34.

Blue Angel catcher, Elizabeth Uvalle, doesn't get the ball in time as Pam Monroe crosses the plate after hitting a two-run in-the-park homerun in the bottom of the fourth to lead the Kuipos to a 3-0 victory. Kuipos won the playoffs Sunday, but the overall women's Slowpitch Softball League winner was Hi Tynz that went though the season undefeated. (Photo by Cpl Charlie Marshall)

SOMS beats Supply

by Cpl Charlie Marshall

Station Operation and Maintenance Squadron won its third consecutive intramural flag football game 10-7 over Supply Company, Brigade Service Support Group Thursday at Station Training Field.

Not only did SOMS return to beat the team that handed them their only defeat of the season, but the win secured them a sole first place in the National Division.

After Supply Company was forced to give up the ball, lating to complete a first down, SOMS's quarterback, First Lieutenant Danny Ball, went straight to the air. Ball hit Corporal Marvin Wright for a 23-yard pass and a first down, then three plays later, found Wright open in the endzone for an early six points. Ball's conversion kick was good and SOMS jumped out to an 7-0 lead.

SOMS's defense forced Supply company to use three quarterbacks to try to get on to the score board, but they all came up short. SOMS picked off four Supply Company passes including the Sergeant Miguel Gonzalez interception on his own two-yard line ending any chance of a Supply Company score.

Ball added a field goal to boost SOMS's lead to 10 points.

Supply's offense performed when the pressure was on moving the ball across mid-field, but when they seemed to be a threat, SOMS's defense stopped them in their tracks.

The closest they came to scoring was the double pass. The quarterback tossed the ball to the halfback out in the flat who, in turn, threw long for the wide open receiver in the endzone. But, the receiver dropped the ball.

WHERE TO RUN — Surrounded by Station Operation and Maintenance Squadron tacklers, the Supply Company, Brigade Service Support Group ball carrier has no place to go but down. (Photo by Sgt Chris Taylor)

The silent killer is not particular about its victims

by Sgt Pepper Davis

It's called "the Silent Killer" and is not particular about who its victims are. It alone accounts for more than 23 thousands deaths each year in the United States. The first answer that probably comes to mind is cancer, but that's incorrect. (Although cancer is deadly), hypertension is the silent killer that strikes without warning. Hypertension, or high blood pressure, is called the silent killer because it affects your body every moment, and you can't feel it. It strikes when it's too late.

Many of us don't pay any attention to hypertension yet 29 percent of all Americans have the disease and don't know it. It usually becomes a problem between the ages of 30 to 50. In actuality, anyone — young or old — can develop hypertension. Blood pressure is the force that pushes against the walls of your blood vessels. The narrower your blood vessels, the harder your heart must work to move the same amount to all parts of your body. Wide arteries mean lower blood pressure while narrow arteries mean the opposite. High blood pressure occurs when something goes wrong with the system that regulates the artery size. Why be concerned about your blood pressure? Because your life could depend on it. If your blood pressure is low, you generally have nothing to worry about. If it is high, you're a candidate for heart failure, a fatal heart attack or a stroke. High blood also endangers your brain and kidneys. The cause of hypertension is unknown, but researchers have many theories that include lifestyle, heredity, excess salt or fat and absence of some substances.

Symptoms of the disease include: breathlessness, nose-bleeds for no apparent reasons, headaches and dizziness. Often no symptoms appear. That's why it's important to keep an eye on your blood pressure. A thorough examination of your eyes, kidneys, blood pressure and heart can tell if you have hypertension and, if so, how far it has progressed. If treatment is prescribed, follow your doctor's advice to the letter. Hypertension cannot be cured, but it can be controlled. The risks of serious complications can be reduced.
