'Hammerheads,' 'Ugly Angels' return from Asia

Marine Heavy Helicopter squadrons 366 and 362 returned to MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, recently after a month-long deployment to New Delhi, India, and Dhaka, Bangladesh.

The "Hammerheads" of HMH-366 and the HMH-362 "Ugly Angels" deployed on short notice to support Marine Helicopter Squadron 1 during President William J. Clinton's trip to the two countries.

The Ugly Angels flew missions in support of HMX-1 in and around New Delhi, and the Hammerheads remained in Dhaka.

According to Lt. Col. Mark Franklin, HMH-366 executive officer, the president's flight from Dhaka to Joypura in Bangladesh was cancelled due to security concerns.

The cancelled flight meant a cancelled mission, but the deployment wasn't a complete loss.

"With short notice (one week), our Marines hroke down five birds for jet transportation, built up four of them in Dhaka in four days and broke them all back down in two days (to return to K-Bay)," said Franklin. "It was a lot of hard work for our maintenance Marines, but they got the job done."

Franklin said in addition to getting to practice deploying as a squadron, and breaking down their CH-53D "Sea Stallions," the Marines got to see a lot of places that they may never have had an opportunity to see otherwise. The Marines visited the American Embassy, the Marine House and the American Mission Country Club during their stay.

"This was good training for the Marines," said Franklin, whose squadron returned Saturday. "Many of the Marines have never deployed outside the United States, and this exposed them to other cultures."

Although the president's flight was cancelled, the Hammerheads still had a chance to fly.

Once the helicopters were put together in Dhaka, Marines had to perform function checks and pilots did rehearsal flights to the sites that the president would have visited.

Franklin said that many of the Marines were disappointed that there was not going to be flying time with HMX-1, but most realized the practice will benefit them on future deployments. In April, the Marines will fly out to the Pacific Missile Range Facility, Kauai, where they will test their skills for an upcoming Marine Corps Combat Readiness Evaluation.

The Ugly Angels flew in support of HMX-1 during their deployment to New Delhi, and returned to MCB Hawaii Wednesday.

K-Bay to launch new base emergency response system

Commander's Proclamation

Cp1. Otto C. Pleil-Muete Combat Correspondent

Residents of MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, will have a new emergency response system Monday, which will drastically reduce response time for all emergencies.

By dialing 257-9111, base residents will be able to reach military police personnel, who will dispatch emergency fire, medical and police units directly.

Off-base residents continue to use 911 as their emergency number.

"This is not a new issue," said Maj. Patrick Scholes, the assistant chief of staff for Base Communication Information System

Department. "It's a serious problem that's been worked on for years."

Currently, residents must remember three different emergency numbers to contact the fire, medical and military police personnel on base.

Additionally, if they dial the standard 911 for an emergency on base, their call for help is handed off from the 911 operator to several emergency response agencies before personnel arrive at the caller's home — a delay Scholes said could be the difference between life and death.

Military Police personnel will monitor the 257-9111 emergency response system 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and will have direct communicatests earlier this year with simulated emergency situations to find out how long emergency response times were with the new system. On average, fire, medical and military police personnel responded in about six minutes — more than three times faster than dialing 911.

"These were true tests of response time because base emergency personnel didn't know the locations of the incidents," said Master Gunnery Sgt. Tony Ramirez Jr., the base communications chief who came up with the new 911 idea late last year. Information flyers will be sent out to the approximately 2,600 housing units on base Monday when the system is set to be fully functional.

"This is a small part of a larger effort to improve emergency communications," added 1st Lt. Frank Calvillo, the operations officer for base communications.

"We want to take care of our Marines, Sailors and their families on base," said Ramirez. "By Monday, we will be the only base on Oahu with this 257-9111 system."

Report, the

One of the most important campaigns to support military families is the campaign against child abuse.

It is the duty of every Marine and Sailor and every parent to prevent this abuse. It is also the duty of every member of our community. We dedicate April 2000 as Child Abuse Prevention Month at MCB Hawaii as part of our year-round commitment to protecting children and building healthy families.

Parenting in today's Marine Corps and Navy is difficult. Frequent deployments and TAD's put increased stress on families, and multiple pressures on youth, both at home and in the community.

We all need to do our part in seeing that our children are safe from abuse and neglect and that their families get the help they need. Our mission depends on it, our duty requires it.

This year's National theme is "Keeping Children Safe at Home" — to which we add "and Safe in the Community." The MCB Hawaii community can make it safer for all children by identifying and reporting suspected abuse or neglect.

The Marine Corps Community Services (MCCS) is a key resource for preventing and treating child abuse and neglect. Make sure you and your Marines and Sailors are fully aware of services that support families. Contact Personal Services at 257-7787, for additional information.

Join me in a community-wide partnership for prevention. Be a part of an all-star Marine Corps and Navy team to keep kids safe not only at home, but everywhere in our community!

MCB Hawaii active duty Marines, Sailors to be counted

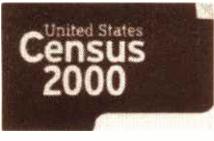

Sgt. Robert Carlson Press Chief

It's census time and MCB Hawaii officials are working closely with U.S. Census Bureau representatives to get an accurate count of all active duty Marines at Marine Forces Pacific and MCB Hawaii.

Marine Corps Base Hawaii is also responsible for counting Sailors attached to Marine units at MCB Hawaii.

Designated unit representatives have been trained and are scheduled to begin gathering statistics Monday.

"Regardless of where they live, every active duty Marine at MarForPac and MCB Hawaii will be enumerated," said Capt. Patrick E. Allen, MCB Hawaii adjudant and base project officer for the census. "If anyone has already filled out a census form at their home or some other place, they will still participate in Census Bureau representatives administered an oath of office to all military personnel who will handle census materials.

Each squadron and battalion has a unit representative who will be responsible for submitting an accurate personnel list, and ensuring each person on that list com-

"It's really a painless process if everyone cooperates and fills out the forms," said Allen. "It's simple, it's important, and it really does affect everyone."

Parenting begins with patience, love

Doreen Peasley Personal Support Counselor

Picture your children 25 years from now. What do you want for them? How do you want their lives to be?

Think of someone you admire. What qualities or characteristics does this person have?

Are these qualities you would like your children to have when they are adults?

Successful parenting is more than clothing, feeding, and sheltering our children (although some days that's about all we can manage).

Successful parenting is contributing to the kind of persons our children become.

Our children's feelings and beliefs about themselves are the foundation of their success. As parents, we play the most vital role in our children's selfesteem.

Do your children show signs of high self-esteem today? Are you worried they might have low self-esteem?

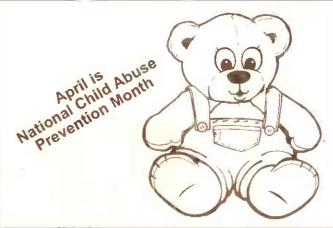

Do you think that without meaning to, you have said or done things that made your children think less of themselves?

All of us parents have done this. None of us will ever be perfect parents, and we can always learn and improve.

Following are some suggestions to help your children learn to feel good about themselves:

Work On Your Self-Esteem — How we view and think about ourselves plays a huge role in how we view our children and relate with them. — If we can accept our own imperfections, it will be much easier to accept and be patient with theirs.

Understand and appreciate each child as an individual. —Help each child find something the others don't do well, something only he or she is good at.

Provide opportunities to feel success. Most of us are so busy and rushed due to lack of time that we end up doing things for our children that they could do for themselves. Teaching kids takes time and effort.

Allow your children to make decisions. — Once children can make decisions, they are more responsible and independent and have higher self-esteem.

When correction is needed, do it in a positive way. — All children make mistakes. When correcting them, be aware of not attacking them personally. If we lecture them, they usually tune us out. Practice quick words and make it brief and to the point. Take three deep breaths before reacting when they have done something wrong.

> Help your children to feel loveable and capable. Set aside times just for them. Enjoy them. Play with them. Read to them. Spend a special 15 minutes with each child every day.

> Establish effective communication. Listen as much as you talk — Give your children the same attention and respect you give your best friend. If possible, stop what you're doing and focus on your child. If it isn't possible, explain that, and set aside a definite time when you can pay attention. Catch them being good. We get so used to correcting our kids when they are misbehaving, that when they are behaving, we just expect it and ignore it until we have to correct them again. Remember, your children do more right things than wrong.

Most importantly, remember, as a parent, you have the right to not be perfect.

Being patient and nurturing yourself will help you handle the most challenging and rewarding job of all — parenting.

For further information or help and support, free parenting classes are offered on an ongoing basis through Personal Services. Call 257-7787 for information.

SERGEANT MAJOR'S CORNER

Battle of Iwo Jima veterans gave Corps its legacy

Sgt. Maj. Robert W. Holub Marine Forces Pacific Sergeant Majo

I had the great honor and privilege of accompanying the Marine Forces Pacific Commanding General, Lt. Gen. Frank Libutti, to the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific (The Punchbowl) here March 16 for a wreath-laying ceremony honoring those who fought and died in the epic World War II Battle of Iwo Jima. This week, I would like to talk to you about the battle and the spirit of the men who fought there.

The Battle of Iwo Jima

began the morning of Feb. 19, 1945, when the 4th and 5th Marine Divisions stormed ashore on what was to become the bloodiest battle in our Corps' history.

So costly was the battle, Iwo veteran Mr. Bob Schmidt, already a combat veteran from the battle for Saipan, said, "When they buried the dead during the Battle for Saipan, they buried by individual grave. When they buried on Iwo Jima they buried by row - rows of a hundred boys." So many were killed they needed surveyors to mark the grave lines.

Another veteran, a corpsman by the name of Hoopes, said "My uniform was caked in blood and it cracked. It was not my blood."

On the morning of March 23, five Marines and a Navy corpsman raised the American flag atop Mount Suribachi.

When the flag was raised, the ships off the coast blew their whistles and a cheer went up across the battlefield, but it was shortlived because there were many more days of death on Iwo Jima.

Of the men who raised the flag on Mount

Suribachi, Pharmacist Mate John Bradley is the second from the right. Not many people know this, but Mr. Bradley had been awarded the Navy Cross. this nation's second highest decoration for bravery. just two days before the flag raising. He never spoke much of it after the war was over.

Rene Gagnon was the Marine who actually put the pole in the ground in the immortal photo and statue. He was 17 years old and had a picture of his girlfriend in his helmet. He needed the protection because he was scared.

Ira Hayes was the last Marine on the pole. He was the one reaching whose hand can no longer touch the pole as the flag is being raised.

In a letter home from the ship that was taking Hayes to Iwo Jima, he wrote, "These boys are all good men. I would not take a thousand dollars to be separated from them."

Harlon Block was also at the base of the pole. He enlisted in the Marines with all the senior members of his high school football team.

Next to Ira Hayes was Franklin Sousley and behind Mr. Sousley was Mike Strank. When you look at the statue you can see Mr. Strank's hand not on the pole but gripping Sousley's arm.

You see, Mr. Strank was a sergeant and he helped Sousley lift the heavy pole. He was a

Marine noncommissioned officer taking care of his boys.

Three weeks before the battle, his captain wanted to promote him, but he turned it down because the promotion meant he would be transferred and he had, "Promised my boys I'd be there with them." Franklin Sousley was fatherless at the age of nine. He was killed on lwo Jima at the age of 19. When the telegram with the news of his death reached his mother, neighbors who lived a quarter mile away could hear her scream through the night, In all, three of the Marines that raised the flag would be killed at Iwo - Sousley, Strank and Block. Such was the cost.

When the Honorable James Forrestal, then-secretary of the Navy, witnessed the raising of the flag on Mount Suribachi, he remarked, "The raising of the flag on Mount Suribachi means a Marine Corps for the next five hundred years."

These were the men we went to honor at the Punchbowl. I was humbled just to shake the hands of those who were there. I was proud to see so many of today's Marines meet and speak with those magnificent warriors of the Iwo Jima campaign.

"When you start to feel sorry for yourself for where you live or how much money you make, think about the Marines of Iwo, who gave so much and are our legacy in the Corps."

Sgt. Maj. Robert W. Holub Marine Forces Pacific Sergeant Major

> To these veterans, the words service, duty and sacrifice will have a meaning you and I will hopefully never know. They are the legacy of the Corps. If you go to lwo Jima now, in a car it will take you five minutes to travel the length of the fivemile-long island.

In 1945, it took Marines 36 days of slogging, fighting and dying.

The veteran Marines tell the story of Jack Lucas who jumped on the beach of Iwo without a rifle. The reason he didn't have one is because he wasn't supposed to be there. He stowed away to go and fight, and a couple of days after the landing, he jumped on a grenade to save his buddies.

One of the Navy nurses, who served on the medevac flights in and out of Iwo, said, "I will never forget them, it was their spirit. I evacuated boys from other battles that were beaten, but those Marines had esprit de corps.

Those boys were burned. They were bruised. But I never saw a Marine who was beaten."

Marines, we are truly blessed to serve in the United States Marine Corps. We must never. ever forget the past. I have said this many times and I > will go on saying it until I go. Being a Marine must be in your heart. It is not about a nice barracks and a "what's in it for me because I am special" attitude.

> It's not about education or perks - it's about warfighting and the brotherhood of warriors. It is a higher calling to serve this Corps and this nation than any other I can think of. It's about being Marines.

> When you start to feel sorry for yourself or where you live or how much money you make, think about the Marines of Iwo, who gave so much and are our legacy in the Corps. They did what they did so that we could be free, not for personal gain, but because it was their duty. Never forget that, or them.

God bless them all. Semper Fi

Marines help repair Maunawili Falls trail

Lance Cpl. Roman Yurek

Marines went "over the river and through the woods," as the nursery rhyme goes, but they were not on their way to grandma's house.

Instead, Golf Company, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, ventured to the muddy Maunawili Falls trail to assist the Hawaii Department of Land and Natural Resources in finishing some much-needed on the trail.

"Marines use these trails on the weekends and we (G Co.) use them for training," said Capt. Patrick Keane, commanding officer for the company. "We want them to stay like they are for others to use."

The sound of hammers pounding on stakes, gravel pouring out of buckets and axes chopping into the ground, echoed up and down the trail as more than 80 Marines worked diligently to restore the trail.

Armed with shovels, Lance Cpls Donald Phillips and Mike Seats, both of whom use hiking trails on the island, filled buckets with gravel on top of one of the hills.

"This is good. We're making Hawaii look better and conserving the environment," said Phillips.

"It also makes a better name for the Marine Corps, by getting rid of the bad boy image people have for us," added Seats.

Several passers-by showed their gratitude.

"Thank you guys," said one hiker as he passed a group of Marines hammering spikes to hold up the sides of the stairs. There were not many hikers on the trail, so the Marines didn't have to continuously step to the side and let them pass. However, they did have to figure out the best way to transport the buckets from the gravel pile to the stairs.

Sweat dripped off the faces of Marines as they set up a chain to move the buckets up and down the trail. Although working as a group to pass the buckets seemed easier than individually walking each bucket to an area of the trail, soon another challenge fell upon them.

A five-minute downpour of rain made the trails muddler than they were before. Periodically, a Marine would get the wrong footing and fall on his back, losing all of the gravel in his bucket. The Marines of Golf Co. adapted to and overcame the situation. They accomplished their mission of building the stairs.

After a day of sliding down muddy trails, getting stuck by thorns and sweating profusely, the Marines returned to base.

"I think we are all more aware of the environment and the fact that it needs to be taken care of," said Lance Cpl. Daniel Cassinelli, a rifleman with the company. "The unit tries as often as possible to help out the community in projects like this."

Riflemen from MCB Hawaii were on the mark last week during the 2000 Pacific Division Rifle and Pistol matches at Pu'uloa Training Facility.

Scoring well during the weeklong competition advanced the Marine shooters one step closer towards competing on the All-Marine Corps rifle team.

"The competition was very good," said Gunnery Sgt. Dwight B. Hall, the Commandant of the Marine Corps representative for the shooting matches. "Some of the best I've ever seen."

The Marines prepared for the matches during the two weeks prior by firing on the range. The Marines' hard work paid off with high scores including a new Pacific Division Match record, Hall said. Chief Warrant Officer 2 Edward R. Sobieranski, the officer in charge of Pu'uloa Training Facility broke his own record that he set last year for the individual rifle match.

The Division Matches were part of the Marine Corps Competition-in-Arms program, which was

"These Marines end up shooting better than they ever have," said 1st Lt. Christian Broadston, a signal intelligence officer for 1st Radio Battalion. "It takes a lot of discipline. The only thing you can think about is the shot you're about to take."

The Matches allow Marines to have some competitive fun in addition to working on their rifle skills.

"It's a good way to hone your marksmanship skills," said Cpl. John Hartline, a coach with Headquarters and Service Battalion, Camp H.M. Smith, who hopes to participate again next year.

Light Armored Vehicle mechanics from 1st Radio Battalion lent their tools, time and knowledge to the Hawaiian National Guard March 13 - 17.

The Hawaiian National Guard's lone LAV needed its annual preventative maintenance checks as well as service and engine modifications done and looked to the Marines from 1st Radio Bn. for help.

"We have some tools and (personnel) to work on the vehicle, but the Marines are the subject matter experts on the LAV," said Sgt. 1st Class Norman DeMello, noncommissioned officer in charge of the LAV Team for the Counter-Drug Support Program for Hawaii National Guard.

The National Guard's five-man LAV crew took the opportunity to learn as much as possible from the Marines about the vehicle the Guard has only had for about a year.

Two representatives from General Motors Corporation (GM makes the LAV engine) were also present to assist with engine modifications and upgrades to the National Guard's vehicle.

"The Marines cooperation has made our job easier and has been a great help to the National Guard," said George P. Wisniewski, a field service representitive for GM Deisel Division. "We want to thank all the Marines that have helped us the past few days."

Whether changing the fluids in the engine or working on the axles, the National Guard and the Marines worked together to get the LAV up to current operational standards.

Much of the maintenance performed on the LAV proved to be simple.

Fluid changes, new belts and lubrication topped the list of minor maintenance tasks done.

"This gives our crew a chance to hone their skills while a majority of our (LAVs) are currently deployed with the 13th and 15th Marine Expeditionary Units," said Sgt. Micheal Plummer, 1st Radio Bn. LAV chief.

In addition to the minor maintenance and repairs, the Marines helped the Guard with major service such as replacing a broken turbo-charger on the engine.

The turbo-charger increases the power of the Detroit Deisel engine in the LAV and enables it to travel at speeds up to 60 mph.

A call from Wisniewski to his GM office in London, Ontario got the replacement turbo-charger to the crew in three days.

The work on the LAV continued until early March 17 afternoon.

"We didn't expect the Marines to actually turn wrenches," said Staff Sgt. Jose Herrera an LAV operator for the Counter-Drug Support Program "We thought we were just going to borrow the tools and the facilities, but they (Marines) have been right there to help us out with any questions we had or problems we encountered.

Housing offers effective maintenance plans

Residents living in MCB Hawaii family housing units at Kaneohe Bay, Manana and Camp H.M. Smith, can now report any of their maintence problems to the newly centralized Maintenance Customer Service Desk at K-Bay.

"This new procedure will elminate the requirement to rely on (the area housing inspector's) answering machine to handle routine maintenance requests," said Joe Park, the director for the MCB Hawaii Famliy Housing Department.

Previously, residents with maintenance problems had to call their area housing inspector.

If the inspector was out of the office or on another call, the callers would have to leave a message or call another inspector.

Park said that people would end up calling several other inspectors until they finally got to talk to someone in person.

The new system allows them to talk to someone on their first

"The desk will provide a better service. It will tell the caller when the problem will be taken care of and who will fix it," explained Park.

After residents make their calls, they can call back for further questions and check the status of their request. Although the new system has improved the procedures for handling maintenance problems, other improvements will be made to the system to further its efficiency.

The department plans to install a tracking system that will allow maintenance requests to be tracked faster for updates on the status of requests.

The system could replace the current use of a log book to track the requests which can be tedious, according to Park.

Another installment includes a stacker system that provides more people to call at one time to get their work request put into the system faster.

The department also plans on installing a Marine Corps Housing Automated System that will enable touch-tone callers to choose from a directory of services like emergency calls, status checks and plumbing needs.

Anyone with maintenance problems can call the Maintenance Customer Service Desk at 257-0979 from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Japanese soldiers teach Marines to be cold-weather warriors

Gunnery Sgt. Andrew Lynch 31st MEU Public Affairs

HOKKAIDO, Japan — Marines of India Company, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiement, and attachments faced the frozen climate of one of Japan's coldest islands, Hokkaido, during exercise Forest Light 2000.

This annual exercise allows Marines and Sailors to train with the soldiers of the Japanese Ground Self Defense Force and develop interoperability, communications and maneuverability in a cold weather. bilateral combat environment.

Japanese officers and soldiers of 1st Company, 6th Infantry Regiment, 5th Division. Northern Army played host at Camp Bihoro to the three-week event that included various types of infantry training, such as patrol skiing and live weapons firing.

"Training in a cold weather environment was a challenge for those who have never experienced such conditions before," said Staff Sgt. Robert Sipe, Weapons Platoon commander, India Co., 3/2. "The freezing temperatures can cause a Marine more hardships. Not only does he have to survive in combat, but he also has to survive the extreme weather conditions."

Only half of the Marines and Sailors of India Co. have ever received any cold weather training prior to departing their homebase of Camp Lejeune, N.C., according to 2nd Lt. James Dorlon, 3rd Platoon Commander.

"The unit has been to Norway and Bridgeport. Calif., for cold weather training, but that was nine months before we left on our current Unit Deployment Program," explained Dorlan. "In between that time, the unit received an influx of new joins, so they were unable to take advantage of any preparatory training."

Much of the training involved skiing and was mainly conducted by the unit's Japanese counterparts, who have a reputation for being proficient in such skills as combat skiing and surviving in a cold-weather environment.

The American visitors also received training in Skijoring, which is skiing while being towed by a snow vehicle.

Both India Co. and the Japanese soldiers and officers tested their stamina with a sixkilometer night ski march and a grueling 15.5-kilometer endurance march. Training was put on hold for one night while some members of India Co. were invited to visit the homes of some of Bihoro Town's local residents.

"I extremely enjoyed the home visit because it gave me the opportunity to experience the beauty and warmth of the Japanese culture," said Sgt. Justin Hance. platoon sergeant, Headquarters Platoon, India Co., 3/2.

With the conclusion of Forest Light 2000, India Co. has returned to Okinawa and is scheduled to continue training before returning to Camp Lejeune in June.

Cpl. Otto C. Pleil-Muste at Corresponden

Harbored along the bright blue water of Kaneohe Bay, the MCB Hawaii Marina offers servicemembers and their families several opportunities to enjoy a day on the bay.

The Marina and the Outdoor Recreation Equipment Center work hand-in-hand to offer equipment, classes and a fleet of watercraft to fulfill almost anyone's recreational desires.

build sand castles, set up a net for a to renting out equipment and boats. game of volleyball or go for a swim. To access the sand bar, the Marina rents fishing and pontoon boats, and gives boating lessons along with a tour of the bay.

The recreation equipment center also offers a vast array of rental equipment for guests to enjoy their time on the bay.

"I have the opportunity to help Marines, Sailors, and their families enjoy their time here in Hawaii. There's just so many things to do here.'

Even inexperienced sailboat enthusiasts as young as eight years of age can take sailing classes at the Marina.

"Everything seems readily available

"We have the most beautiful bay in the Hawaiian Islands," said Neil Morgan, the manager for the Marina.

"Many visitors from the mainland experience the highlight of their day at the sand bar and on the bay.'

Unless they're familiar with what the Marine offers, many base residents aren't aware they can rent water craft and go to a two-mile-long sand bar in the middle of the bay, said Karrie Pujalet, the recreation assistant at the Marina.

The sand bar gives boaters a chance to park their vessels and go ashore to Equipment includes volleyball sets, game equipment, and water sports gear such as surf and boogie boards.

"I came out here to Hawaii and did things that most people would pay thousands of dollars for — and I did it for almost nothing," said Paul Murphy, a Marine from Lima Company, 3rd Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, who rented a kayak from the Marina Saturday for a paddling adventure on the bay. Other water vessels offered by the Marina include sailboats, ski boats, canoes, and windsurfers.

"The Marina is unique in that we offer services that they don't offer out in town," said Morgan, as he explained how limited other recreation centers are for what you want," said Curtis Ceaser, a Sailor from 21st Dental Company at K-Bay after getting his boating license from the Marina.

"It's something that everyone should take advantage of.'

The Marina is scheduled to feature a "Day on the Docks" family fishing tournament in early May, and, as always, will rent rods and reels and provide bait for its patrons. The second annual event will also include a bouncy house, boat rides and several games for children.

The Marina is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day with extended hours beginning Memorial Day. For more information, patrons can stop by the Marina, Building 1698, or call 254-7667

Decarlos "D.C." Daniels gets air time as he dominates the rim for a slam dunk.

Sophomore makes all-state team

"D.C. is a dedicated athlete and very advanced for someone of such a young age."

Pete Smith,

Kalaheo Varsity Basketball Coach

Lance Cpl. Roman Yurek

Even after a season-long injury, a 16-year-old Kalaheo High School student overcame the pain and became part of the Hawaii All-State Team for basketball, voted third best player in the state.

Decarlos "D.C." Daniels, shooting guard for Kalaheo, was the only sophomore named to be part of the All-State Team.

"It was shocking," said D.C. Daniels, after leading his high school in points and scoring 79 points in three games of the state tournament.

Decarlos Daniels has been playing basketball since the age of seven. Mostly competing in 3-on-3 tournaments, he never played on an organized team until 7th grade.

"When he started, he was always above the other kids his age," said his father, Gunnery Sgt. Sylvester Daniels, company gunnery sergeant for Weapons Company. 3rd Battalion. 3rd Marine Regiment. "He just had natural talent."

Ever since D.C. started, he said he always tested his skills against better competition. Being born into a Marine Corps family, many of those opponents were Marines.

"D.C. is a dedicated athlete and very advanced for someone of such a young age." said Pete Smith, head coach for the Kalaheo boy's varsity basketball team. "He excels over other athletes. If he is against a six-foot guard, he will jump over him. If it's a 6-foot-6-inch guard, he'll pass by with his speed." Along with being a speed-dribbling, high-flying, dunking sophomore, D.C. says he applies the same dedication inside the classroom.

"Since he started playing, he is more serious with school," said his dad, who has only missed his son's games during deployments. "I told him that if his grades drop he can not play ball. He wants to go to college to play ball, but he is not all wrapped up in making it to professional basketball."

Getting into to college is a goal D.C. has, but earlier this year a knee injury caused him to step off of the court for a few games. "The injury slowed me down, but I came back and finished the season strong. I plan on leading the team to the state finals and winning next year," said the confident D.C.

As confident as D.C. is about his future plans, much of his success he gives to the influences of his parents and coach.

Although the basketball season is over. D.C. can still be found at the Semper Fit Gym, on the basketball court playing against Marines or lifting weights. "I feel I am getting better. I am only a sophomore," said D.C. "Hopefully I will get a full scholarship to play basketball in college and get an education."

Hawaii Marines adapt and overcome at Electron Marathon

Cpl. Charles E. Moore Combot Correspondent

Out-numbered, out-powered and outsupplied, Marine Corps Air Facility Marines pulled through against the odds to finish second in the Military category of Hawaii Electric Company's Electron Marathon electric car race Saturday at Ford Island.

The competition in the military category included one entry from each of the military services.

The Marines went in expecting nothing more than to finish the race, but managed to beat the Air Force and Navy teams.

The Marine team put together only one of the two military teams to finish the 10 lap race without breaking down. Coincidentally, they were the team working with the smallest budget.

The race started out strong with the Army taking an early lead. Almost as soon as the race started, the Air Force team began having trouble with their car and soon pulled into the pit for repairs.

According to Lance Cpl. Luke

Telfordwood, driver of the Marine entry, the Air Force and Marines had the same basic car, except the Air Force team bought the car kit brand new and began building on it from there with a funded budget, while the Marine team received a donated car and invested $58 from their own pockets.

The Marine team was following closely behind the Navy car until the fourth lap, when the Navy started having battery problems. The Navy competed in the race last year and used the same car, except they had a year to work out any kinks.

With the câr already built, the Navy team was able to direct their funds to more efficient parts, including graphite tire rims. Telfordwood said he found it kind of ironic when he passed them.

"One rim was 10 times our budget." he said. "I passed them and waved."

After the Navy team dropped out, the Marine and Army teams were the only ones left on the track.

The Marine team continued to press on, but the Army team had too much of a lead. Toward the end of the race, the Air Force team was able to re-enter the race, but they were too far behind to catch up.

"We finished second because we were able to build a car that was durable enough to finish," Telfordwood said. " Next year, we'd like to receive some funding so we can improve on the durability and speed."

"It's a good design," he added. "It just needs to be more efficient."

Telfordwood and Lance Cpl. John Mangus began checking out the competition's entries, both military and high school, for ideas on how to better build next year's car.

"We were watching all the other cars," Telfordwood said. "We've got some really good design ideas."

Gunnery Sgt. Christopher Edwards, their staff noncommissioned officer in charge, said he was proud of what they did.

"They took what little we gave them and turned it into a 2nd place car," he said, adding that they're satisfied with this year's results, but are trying to improve on that for next year.

Early in the race, Telfordwood passes the Air Force's entry.

Marcy Monahan gets advice from her coach Felix Cazares between rounds.

Marine boxing team gets feet wet

Cpl. Charles E. Moore

Boxers from MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, took their punches in the Hawaii State Golden Glove boxing competition Friday at Wahiawa district park

Corporal William Lee and Marcy Monahan, a Navy family member, competed in the amateur matches. Both had little experience.

The best way to get good at anything is just to do it," Lee said. "It goes back to that 'know yourself and seek selfimprovement.

Lee boxed for his first time in competition at the tournament and said he was doing well, but was disqualified due to a technicality he didn't know about.

Lee said he adhered to his coach's advice of starting off slow and taking some punches to feel out the opponent's boxing style before switching to the offense. This strategy proved to be his downfall

In the amateur competition, if a boxer receives too many punches without throwing any, the referee separates the fighters to make sure they're still able to fight. The boxer has eight seconds to prove he is fit to fight by raising a hand.

About 20 seconds into Lee's fight, the referee broke the boxers up for an eight count. After five seconds, Lee rose his hands out of desperation and the referee started the fight again.

Lee continued his strategy and the fight was broken up shortly afterwards for the same reason. The referee started his count again.

"He said, 'Are you alright'," Lee said. "I said, 'Er. Semper Fi. Let's go."

Lee was bewildered as the referee continued to count to eight before disqualifying him. "What?" he shouted. The referee explained the eight-count rule, but it was too late.

While disappointed with the outcome of the match, he said he was happy he got his feet wet and is looking forward to the next chance he'll get to prove himself in the ring.

Monahan faired better, but still lost in a close fight. Coming out with the same strategy for the last fight of the night, she took a lot of punches early on. At the end of the first two-minute round, she regrouped and took some pointers from her coach.

When the bell rang for the final round, she came out swinging.

She dominated the final round, but it wasn't enough. At the end of the match, she lost by one point in a split decision.

"It was a close fight. It just didn't go my way," she said. "It just wasn't my night.'

Monahan has been boxing for a year, and she said this was her second competition. She plans to continue her training for the National Golden Glove competition and said her hopes are high.

Felix Cazares, the coach, expects both boxers to go far. He said he's seen a lot of potential in both of them since they've started.

The boxing team is looking for more competitors. Anyone interested in boxing — competing or just having fun – can contact the Semper Fit Center.

Hero's deeds an inspiration to shipmates

Cmdr. Carl F. Cummings Base Chaplai

Fifty-five years ago on 19 March 1945. Father Joseph T. O'Callahan was getting his breakfast in the wardroom of the aircraft carrier USS Franklin. It was a breakfast he never finished. That morning the ship's routine was rudely interrupted by a Japanese dive bomber swooping out of the sky. The ship was rocked by two 500 pound bombs in her hangar bay amid fully gassed and armed aircraft.

The USS Franklin was soon a blazing exploding inferno. Aircraft were thrown together, gas tanks burst open adding fuel to the fire, and then bombs began exploding aboard.

An eye witness said, "To horrified onlookers she was a blur of fire and smoke ... but when the veil lifted, the USS Franklin was still there.

That the USS Franklin remained afloat is attributed to the builders of the ship and the heroism of the crew. According to Buships, it was "the most severe fire survived by any U.S. warship during the course of World War IL." Of the 2,200 man crew, 724 men were killed and another 265 were wounded

Among his heroic crew, the most remarkable person was the Chaplain, Father Joseph T. O'Callahan. He seemed to be everywhere and doing everything. His citation afterwards explains it best "... calmly braving the perilous barriers of flame and twisted metal to aid his men and his ship, he groped his way through smoke filled corridors to the open flight deck and into the midst of violently exploding bombs, shells, rockets, and other armament... he ministered to the wounded and dying, comforting and encouraging men of all faiths; he organized and led fire fighting crews into the blazing inferno on the flight deck; he ordered that the ammunition be jettisoned and the magazine flooded. He manned a hose to cool hot, armed bombs rolling dangerously on the listing deck, continuing his efforts despite searing, suffocating smoke, he inspired the gallant officers and men of the USS Franklin to fight heroically and with profound faith in the force of almost certain death and to return their stricken ship to port.

Rear Adm. Leslie Gehres, the ship's commander said afterwards "He was the bravest man I have ever seen." So it is fitting that Father O'Callahan became the first Chaplain of any faith in U.S. history to be awarded the Medal of Honor.

After the war, Father O'Callahan went back to teach at Holy Cross.

But it wasn't long before he suffered a stroke, and less that 10 years after the attack on the USS Franklin he became so debilitated that he couldn't teach and had to celebrate Mass sitting down.

His nephew Jay O'Callahan described the shock of seeing his former hero and outstanding athlete living in "a 500 year old body."

Jay O'Callahan had many conversations with his uncle

He especially remembers one talk during which he told his uncle, "The way to understand Jesus is to be excited about him." His uncle replied, "For me it's to do the will of God."

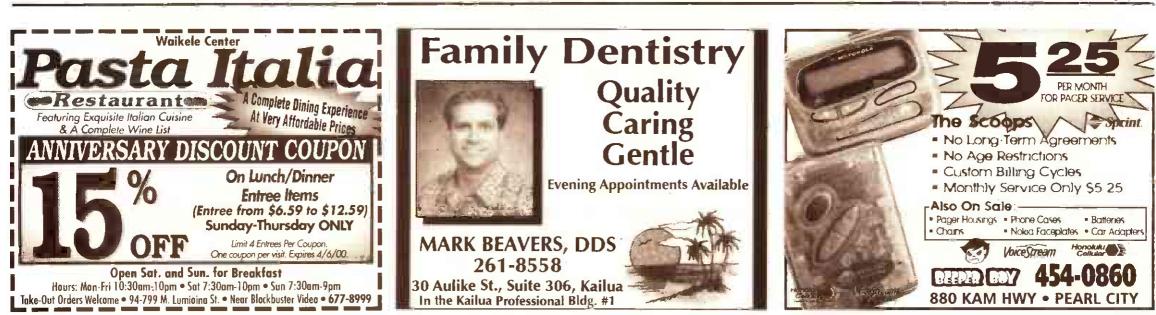

What Father O'Gallahan meant by this remark was that he saw his debilitated physical condition as the permissive will of God.

That is, God allowed this trial since he knew Father O'Callahan could endure it and become a better man for having done so.

That's why he never complained and that's why he was a hero again! Twice a hero. He was a hero in war and peace, in sickness and in health.

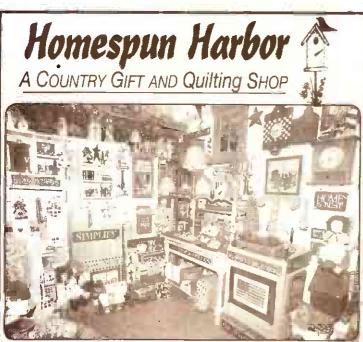

Sooner or later we all run into problems in life. By patiently enduring them and doing the best we can, we can become God's heroes.

We can become saints.
