Project to assess airfield encroachment

Government agencies discuss the McChord Field north clear zone

BY PAMELA KULOKAS

The potential for an aircraft accident is statistically the highest at the end of runways, in the 3,000- by 3,000-foot safety area known as a clear zone. When McChord Field was transferred to the federal government in 1938, knowledge of the clear zone risk didn't exist; neither did the term itself.

According to Bill Adamson, program director of the South Sound Military and Communities Partnership, the Federal Aviation Administration currently requires all commercial and military airfields to comply with clear zone requirements.

Currently, McChord Field's north clear zone is not in compliance with FAA guidelines because several businesses and agencies are operating in the safety area. Some have been there since the 1960s; others are more recent additions.

"I've been told across the U.S., McChord (Field) airfield has the worst encroachment for military airfields," Adamson said, calling it a "multidecade problem."

Mass awareness of the issue began before the last round of Joint Base Lewis-McChord's recent Fire Prevention Week (Saturday through Friday) offered an opportunity to learn more about and highlight fire safety.

Education is making a big difference on base, according to local fire officials. New data released this month for 2015 shows the base had the lowest number of fires in JBLM history, according to Don Lane, JBLM chief fire inspector.

For the sixth year in a row, the installation's child development centers received excellent ratings in no-notice inspections. JBLM also recently received an award as the Installation Management Command West's, Army-level, 2015 Fire Prevention Program of the Year.

"This is a huge feat, and it's due to the entire JBLM team," Lane said, adding everyone on base, from service members to families and fire safety professionals deserve praise for keeping the more than 5,000 housing units on the installation safe. "Everybody's a winner when the numbers are low."

In 2015, JBLM had two reported dormitory fires and one residential fire, for a total of $22,600 in loss. However, one of the fires, the residential house, was in a contracted struc-

Air Force Secretary Deborah Lee James was named an honorary Tuskegee Airman and was presented the Tuskegee Airman red jacket during the Air Force Memorial's 10th anniversary ceremony in Arlington, Va., Oct. 14.

From the White House to Hollywood, the accomplishments of the Tuskegee Airmen and their "Red Tails" have been widely celebrated over the past 70 years.

Though the Red Tails no longer take to the skies, the Airmen who served in the once-segregated 332nd Fighter Group can now be recognized on land by their distinguishable red jackets — an item reserved only for the members of Tuskegee Airmen Inc. and those they appoint as honorary members of their elite group.

LEWIS COMMUNITY SPOUSES' CLUB

Annual market to feature handcrafted holiday gifts

BY RUTH KINGSLAND
Northwest Guardian

With just more than 60 shopping days until Christmas, here's a perfect opportunity to find some handcrafted holiday gifts for the loved ones on your list: The Lewis Community Spouses' Club will hold its annual Holiday Market at the American Lake Conference Center Oct. 28 and 29 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There's a $2 entry fee, and it's free for children 12 and younger. The event also is a food donation opportunity to help the Emergency Food Network. Non-perishable food items donated will earn prize tickets for event giveaways.

Expected items for sale at the event include: handcrafted home decor, candles, jewelry, bath and body products, holiday decorations, clothing, accessories, baked goods and more.

Serena West, ways and means chair for the Lewis Community Spouses' Club, said she is excited to bring items from her online business, West House, as well as items from the club's Cottage Boutique on Lewis Main to sell at the event.

"The Holiday Market is an exciting place to get a flavor of everything available; it's a really great mix of the talents we have in the community," she said.

West said she plans to bring her fall and Christmas line of hand-painted signs and T-shirts as well as Cottage Boutique items, such as Christmas ornaments, dish towels and seasonal items.

The Cottage Boutique, which recently moved to its Lewis Main site next to JBLM's thrift store, generates funds for the Lewis Community Spouses'

One of the vendors expected to hawk their wares at the Holiday Market is Smith Brothers Farms, which offers subscriptions for food and dairy items. LuLaRoe, a popular online clothing line, is another.

There also are expected to be local woodcarvers, jewelry makers and other craft vendors, according to Rikki Goble, a military spouse in charge of this year's Harvest Market.

"There are many more vendors than last year," Goble said. "We've gone from 50 last year to about 80 this year."

She listed a wide variety of products planned to be available at the event, including Native American carvings, organic body lotions, soaps, lip balms and candles.

There's still time to sign up as a vendor at the event. For more information, email: holiday-marketclsc@gmail.com or apply at: lewiscommunityspouses-club.org.

SPECIAL VICTIMS COUNSEL

Giving sex assault victims voice

BY RIO FERNANDES
Northwest Guardian

Joint Base Lewis-McChord service members, and military members in general, are able to access a great many of number of free, beneficial programs. For those that need it, though, one of the most important of these services may be the Special Victims Counsel, which is led by Capt. Douglas Arnett, and aims to offer legal advice to victims of sexual assault.

"We try to provide them what we call a voice and choice," Arnett said. "We try to empower them with a voice through the process and to make sure that their choice is an informed one that sets them up for success."

The program, which began in 2013, has helped countless people. For Arnett, and Tech. Sgt. Katrina Faircloth, Special Victims' Paralegal, the work is challenging but very rewarding. Still, one of the more challenging parts of their job doesn't have anything to with legal work.

"It's been an uphill battle to get awareness about our office out there," Arnett said. "I've still met people that are unaware of what the Special Victims Counsel is, let alone what we do."

The goal of the counsel is to inform service members about all of their options. Each case of sexual assault is different, and it's critical that well-informed decisions are made and Arnett wants to help with that, he said. In the wake of a sexual assault, it's not hard to imagine that a victim has a lot on their mind, so talking through their legal options in the context of the military justice system is crucial.

"It's not so much about comforting them or trying to make them feel better," Arnett said. "It's more about making sure they understand the protections they are afforded and what their options are."

Everything that takes place in the office is confidential until the victim makes a choice. While there are options they may pursue that leads to officially needing to be informed, that process won't begin until the victim opts to go down that path. The office will also never push the victim toward a choice, only provide information about options, Arnett said. He added that while his job isn't about encouraging, he will provide people the information about counseling or any other means to help the victim.

Arnett

People visiting the center should also take comfort in knowing that the Special Victims Counsel is completely separate from the prosecution department. This means that their focus is solely on informing victims about what their options are, not pursuing charges or anything along those lines.

"This is a great program," Arnett said. "We can provide you with information about all the options that are available. The informed choice is the correct choice."

JBLM FAMILY AND MORALE, WELFARE AND RECREATION

It's time to do the 'Monster Mash'

BY RUTH KINGSLAND
Northwest Guardian

Don't be frightened by the name; there's nothing monstrous about the Joint Base Lewis-McChord Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation's upcoming Monster Mash Family Event.

The family-oriented, nonscary dance is scheduled at the Club at McChord Field Oct. 28 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Cost is $8 for children ages 3 to 12, and $10 for teens and adults.

It's the first time Family and MWR has hosted such an event at the club. The event will be similar to other family dances, such as the springtime father-daughter and mother-son dances, said Erika Scott-Small, special events assistant coordinator for Family and MWR.

"It's another opportunity for the kids to wear their (Halloween) costumes," she said.

If you go

What: Monster Mash Family Event

When: Oct. 28 from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

Where: The Club at McChord Field

Cost: $10 for adults and youths ages 13 and older; $8 for children ages 3 to 12.

The event is for all ages, as long as attendees are well-behaved, Scott-Small said; however, the dance is primarily geared to children ages 12 and younger. Parents and teens are welcome to come, and costumes are optional for parents.

"We're going to have a few games, dancing, light hors d'oeuvres and a costume contest — oh, and lots of candy," Scott-Small said, adding that although there are no specific costume restrictions. "Everything is fine, as long as it is in good taste."

But, wait — before you get out the face paint and prepare to don your otherwise-harmless comic or court jester suit, there is one costuming restriction, she said: "No clowns, please."

Comical costumed fools previously prompted laughter, but they now are sparking screams, Scott-Small said. So, in light of recent scares at hundreds of locations across the country, including a recent lockdown at a Lakewood school where Scott-Small's son attends, no clowns will be admitted to the dance.

"I used to kind of like clowns," she said, "but, we don't want anything that will keep this from being a family fun event."

Country music artist performs at Samuel Adams Brewhouse

Country music recording artist Jerrod Niemann will perform at the Samuel Adams Brewhouse on Lewis Main Wednesday at 5 p.m. Along with the performance, Niemann will be interviewed by Cody Alan, CMT radio host and TV personality. Niemann will also participate in a question-and-answer segment with the people who attend.

Niemann's new single is a duet with his good friend and labelmate Lee Brice, called "A Little More Love."

He is also adding the finishing touches to his forthcoming album on Curb Records which will follow his RIAA Platinum-certified multiweek No. 1 smash, "Drink to That All Night," from his "High Noon" album, on which Niemann co-wrote eight of the 13 tracks. Niemann's chart-topping major-label debut, 2010's "Judge Jerrod & The Hung Jury," produced the No. 1 smash "Lover, Lover," and the Top 5 and single, "What Do You Want." Second release "Free The Music" featured the Top 15 single "Shinin' On Me" and the poignant ballad "Only God Could Love You More."

Niemann has quickly become a fan and industry favorite, earning award nominations from the Academy of Country Music, the Country Music Association and CMT while headlining his own shows and touring with such artists as Dierks Bentley, Brad Paisley and Keith Urban.

The event is free and open to people 21 years old and older who have access to Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

The Brewhouse is located at 2200 South Division Street on Lewis Main.

Day, night artillery training goes on at JBLM through Monday

Joint Base Lewis-McChord will conduct day and night artillery training daily from 6:30 a.m. through 9 p.m. until Monday using M777 155 mm Howitzers.

This readiness training will involve Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 37th Field Artillery Regiment, 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division. This is required training, which allows military members to practice and improve skills necessary to certify them for future combat deployments.

As the U.S. military presence in Iraq and Afghanistan changes after 14 years of near-constant deployments, the Army is becoming more of a U.S.-based force, rather than a deployed one.

The big difference now is that our forces must be ready all the time for a variety of missions, as evidenced by operations in the Middle East, Afghanistan and the Pacific.

Given this increased training tempo at JBLM, JBLM will continue to publicize scheduled nighttime training, as well as major training events that will result in significant noise for the surrounding community.

Air Force issues implementation guidance for transgender Airmen

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Air Force officials released transgender implementation guidance Oct. 7 addressing specific procedures for transitioning and requesting an official change in gender as well as associated guidance in areas ranging from medical and privacy issues to deployments, fitness standards and dress and appearance.

The guidance follows the secretary of defense's announcement in June, which outlined policy allowing service members to transition gender while serving and outlined responsibilities for military services and commanders to develop and implement guidance, training and specific policies.

In addition, the Defense Department created and distributed a commanders' training handbook, medical protocol and guidance for changing a service member's gender in the Defense Eligibility Enrollment System (DEERS). The handbook can be found at defense.gov.

Over the course of the next year, the Air Force will deliver training targeted at various levels to include a module tailored for commanders, supervisors and medical professionals, and a general module designed for all Airmen. The Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness will work with the military services to monitor and oversee these efforts.

No later than July 1, the services will allow transgender individuals to join the armed forces, assuming they meet accession standards.

In addition, an otherwise qualified individual's gender identity will not be considered a bar to admission to a military service academy, participation in ROTC or any other accession program if the individual meets the new criteria.

To support service members, medical professionals and commanders during the implementation period, the DOD has set up a coordination cell that will serve as a central point of contact for technical questions and concerns. The cell is made up of legal experts, policy experts and medical professionals familiar with questions regarding the policy.

Airmen seeking further information or having additional questions or concerns are encouraged to utilize their chain of command.

Benjamin Lambertson, a local 10-year-old, was honored as Pilot for a Day by the 4th Airlift Squadron, receiving a hero’s welcome from the moment he arrived at McChord Field Oct. 7.

According to the Air Force Association’s McChord Chapter, which is responsible for funding and child nominations, the purpose of the program is to provide a meaningful, positive experience for a medically challenged child (6 to 14 years old), who has been prohibited from enjoying the normal joys of childhood.

“We really take our jobs here at the AFA very serious,” said Robert Branscomb, AFA’s McChord Chapter’s Pilot for a Day chairman. “Our motto is ‘A special day for our special kids,’ and we truly embrace that here at the chapter.”

After multiple trips to the hospital with complaints of headaches, Ben was diagnosed with a brain aneurysm. After treatment, Ben’s aneurysm is less than half the size it was and is getting better.

To start the tour off, Ben along with his mother, Michelle, father, Paul, and sister, Maddie, Fessel then took Ben and his family back to the 4th AS for a quick meet and greet with members of the squadron and received a brief on their mission for the day. From there, Ben and his family went over to the McChord Field military working dog kennels, where the family had a chance to interact with the canines and observe working dogs doing some obedience training and bite work.

Once they finished up with the military working dog, Ben and his family were shuttled to the McChord Field fire department for a fire demo, then toured the air traffic control tower. The Lambertson family continued with tours of Survival

Evasion Resistance and Escape, and Aircrew Flight Equipment sections.

After finishing up with AFE, the newest 4th AS pilot had lunch with the Air Force Association and members of the 4th AS in the squadron’s heritage room.

From there, the family received a mission brief before heading over to the C-17 flight simulator.

“I really loved the flight simulator,” Ben said. “We got to fly the plane and do a lot of cool stuff. I could have stayed in the simulator all day.”

As a finale to the day, Ben and his family had the opportunity to see an actual C-17 Globemaster III and take photos in the cockpit before heading back to the 4th AS for cake and ice cream.

“I want to thank the 4th Airlift Squadron, not only for what you do on a daily basis of protecting this country, but for doing something special like this for people who really need something special like this,” Paul said. “You guys do something really special here and this day has really touched us. The fact that you guys do this for a lot of people is truly impressive and kind, and we thank you for that. We will remember this day forever.”

PACIFIC PATHWAYS

Army training puts multidomain into action

BY SEAN KIMMONS

Army News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. —

Overseas training is helping groom Army units in the Pacific theater for future missions that may require cross-domain tactics to defeat enemies, according to senior leaders.

One set of exercises, Pacific Pathways, has allowed Army units to broaden their training as they deploy across the region for bilateral and multilateral drills with foreign militaries, while working with their sister services.

“We’re moving toward joint integration where we get out of our service stovepipes and look at all of the domains ... to present multiple dilemmas to an adversary,” said Gen. Robert Brown, commander of U.S. Army Pacific, while speaking at a panel discussion at the Association of the U.S. Army Annual Meeting and Exhibition Oct. 5.

Brown said that a multidomain task force is currently being planned to maneuver land assets that could impact other domains in the region.

“It’s clearly the way of the future,” he said. “It can be very difficult for an enemy to handle multiple domains, and at the same time, it presents multiple options to our commanders and our national command authorities.”

Army leaders kicked off Pacific Pathways in 2014, a three-part training event where a brigade-level unit and its equipment travels by sea and air to three countries back to back to join in large-scale exercises.

Training a combat-ready unit in another country not only improves multinational interoperability, officials said, it also opens up the doors to other nations while showcasing the Army’s strength to potential foes.

“If you want to enhance access, and if you want to provide reassurance to our partners and allies, having that forward presence during an operation is extremely important,” said Lt. Gen. Stephen Lanza, I Corps commanding general at Joint Base Lewis-McChord, during the discussion.

This year, three Pacific Pathway rotations are being carried out. JBLM had two Stryker brigade combat teams take part in rotations in five different countries earlier this year. In the three-month rotations, Lanza said Soldiers stretched their training by working with Marines, special operators and cyber experts, and they honed their skills on ballistic missile defense and aviation assets, including the RQ-11 Raven, a small hand-launched unmanned aerial vehicle.

“We probably get more Raven training on a Pathway than we get at home station,” he said, adding that there’s also training on other UAVs, such as the RQ-7 Shadow and MQ-1C Gray Eagle.

As the exercises continue to build up, he said, more countries have expressed interest in taking part in them.

“Pathways have been instrumental in doing that,” Lanza said of enhancing multinational relationships. “It’s brought other countries into the discussions of where they can embed.”

In upcoming Pathway exercises, Army leaders plan to expand the role of reserve-component forces to increase their readiness. In the past year, at least 70 Guard and Reserve units with about 4,200 Soldiers have been integrated into I Corps’ missions, Lanza said.

“That’s a significant number when you look at total force and you look at how many different elements and units are embedded in the operations of the exercises that we run with USARPAC,” he said.

42ND MILITARY POLICE BRIGADE

Local police departments honored by 42nd MP Bde.

BY RIO FERNANDES

Northwest Guardian

It was a celebration of unity Wednesday inside French Theater as members of the 42nd Military Police Brigade cheered and applauded law enforcement agencies surrounding Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

“We simply want to say thank you for what you do day in and day out,” said Col. Christopher A. Burns, 42nd MP Bde. commander, during his opening remarks. “Over half of our military families reside in your cities and communities. We all understand that the foundation of our partnership doesn’t rest just on training and building a task force, but on friendship and trust.”

Following Burns’ address, representatives from each neighboring police department were called up to be awarded a plaque. They were followed by representatives from local corrections agencies being honored and civilians being awarded the Commander’s Award for Public Service.

Each recipient beamed with pride as they stood on stage in front of a packed crowd. All said they appreciated being honored by JBLM, especially because of how much the civilian departments coordinate with the JBLM law enforcement agencies.

“The connection with the military touches us in a lot of different ways,” said Dusty Pierpoint, Lacey chief of police. “The city, as a whole, works really hard to work with the military. Quite a few of my officers are ex-military. It’s really nice for the military to recognize the cooperation between law enforcement.”

To really hammer home the message of being stronger together, Burns used an apt metaphor. He described Pierce County, Thurston County and JBLM as a large house. He said each aspect was a different room, and while each room may have differences, the strength of the house comes when all the rooms form a powerful community. He also spoke about a previous Lakewood police chief who spent 30 years with the military before transitioning into a 40-year career in law enforcement.

“He went from green to blue,”

Paul Pastor, left, a Pierce County Sheriff, shakes hands with Col. Christopher A. Burns, commander, 42nd Military Police Brigade, at the law enforcement recognition ceremony at French Theater Wednesday.

Burns said. “He embodied what we want. We (military and police) are smarter and stronger than we were years before, and we will become stronger still.”

Following the ceremony, a reception took place at the fellowship hall of the Lewis Main Chapel behind the theater. While there, service members, law enforcement officials and civilians laughed and talked together.

“What is important about this event is that people understand we are part of a greater regional area, and none of us are individually as effective than as a group,” said Ted Solonar, JBLM police chief. “It’s vital to maintain these relationships and recognize the contributions these departments make to support our troops and our missions in general.”

Workers with disabilities vital to the U.S. economy

Equal Opportunity Office

National Disability Employment Awareness Month is a time to recognize the significant contributions American workers with disability make each and every day. The observations of National Disability Employment Awareness Month is established by Public Law and Presidential Proclamation and is observed during the month of October each year.

Jennifer Sheehy, deputy assistant secretary of labor for Disability Employment Policy said, "Our nation's most successful companies proudly make inclusion a core value. They know that inclusion works. It works for workers, it works for employers, it works for opportunity, and it works for innovation."

This statement helps solidify the reason why Americans need to observe and reaffirm commitment to ensuring equal opportunity for all citizens and so that they may tribute to the accomplishments of men and women with disabilities who contributed, continue to contribute and wish to contribute to making the nation's economy strong.

NDEAM dates back to the return of service members with disabilities from World War II, sparking public interest in the contributions of people with disabilities in the workplace. Provided below are a few interesting facts of the fight for equality among people with disabilities:

- In 1945, former President Harry S. Truman approved a Congressional resolution declaring the first week in October "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week."
- The word "physically" was removed in 1962 to include individuals with all types of disabilities.
- In the 1950s, veterans with disabilities and other people with disabilities began the barrier-free movement. The combined efforts of the U.S. Veterans Administration, the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and the National Easter Seals Society, among others, resulting in the development of national standards for "barrier-free" buildings.

- In 1988, Congress expanded the week to a month and changed the name to "National Disability Employment Awareness Month."

- About 27 million women in the U.S. have disabilities, and the number is growing. More than 50 percent of women older than 65 are living with a disability. The most common cause of disability for women is arthritis or rheumatism.

People with disabilities are a heterogeneous group that includes people with sensory, physical, and mental conditions. Individuals with disabilities cross lines of age, ethnicity, sex, race, sexual orientation and socioeconomic status. Each person brings to a job unique skills and abilities. It is a group anyone can become a member of at any time.

Equity, dignity, respect and cooperation among all individuals are essential values in the Department of Defense work environment. The government recognizes its vital role in advancing disability awareness in the workplace and remains committed to providing every person opportunities for a meaningful career.

WARRIORS 4 LIFE

Vet finds bicycle brotherhood

Veteran bonds with others in Warriors 4 Life

BY SHANNON COLLINS
Department of Defense
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As the veteran climbed the dirt hill on his mountain bike, pumping his legs and ignoring the burning in his quads, his teammates yelled words of encouragement. The heat and humidity beat down on him but he was in his homeland, Puerto Rico, and he wasn't going to let this 50-kilometer race through mud and hills defeat him.

David Camacho, a retired Army master sergeant served for 22 years — from 1985 to 2007 — had been through worse. Now retired, the former Joint Base Lewis-McChord wounded combat veteran still enjoys the camaraderie of being with fellow Soldiers by riding in a nonprofit cycling group, Warriors 4 Life.

The members in the group share a strong bond. Many share stories and history much like Camacho's.

Camacho's first deployment was to the Gulf in 1990. He deployed to Mosul, Iraq, from 2004 to 2005 with the 1st Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division from JBLM. His mission was tactical operation communications for a field artillery battalion.

"I had to make sure the communications were clear between the battalion and the brigade, and to make sure they had the right communications security," he said. "We also had a group of Special Forces that had to have a satellite for so they could communicate with the Pentagon. We also had to make sure the tactical operations center was running clear."

While in Iraq, he would go out on convoys, and would worry about improvised explosive devices and snipers, but he wasn't prepared for what happened to him when the dining facility he was having lunch at was attacked.

"I didn't see it, but there was a guy who dressed himself up like a national guard from Iraq," he said. "We used to be at the same base together when we used to train them. At least 26 people got killed in that dining facility. I got injured. My stomach, my head, my leg; I got shrapnel everywhere. They removed my spleen. They had to fix everything inside of me. They removed stuff in my stomach."

He said he was conscious when he was injured outside the dining facility and thought, "God give me a chance. I don't want to die and leave my wife alone with three kids."

He said he fought through depression, and had trouble sleeping because he would constantly be back in Iraq whenever he closed his eyes. He said the hardest part for him was leaving his guys behind.

"My wife was a big supporter, and friends and people from the chain of command would come visit me, but I felt like I wasn't good enough because my Soldiery were out there," he said. "I was very protective over my guys. I enjoyed being out there with them. They were like part of my family out there, and I felt like I left them out there, and I couldn't go back."

Camacho said before they had all deployed, many of his Soldiers had been over to his house for barbecues, and some of their parents had even told him, "Hey, take care of my kids."

"Maybe because of my culture, that's the way I am or

"It's like being back in the armed forces, but at a different level. We enjoy each other. I love it. We speak the same language. It doesn't matter where we're from. Sometimes you find somebody you have served with. Once you're a Soldier, you will always be a Soldier. It's the camaraderie we get as a Soldier."

David Camacho

Retired Army master sergeant because I'm (a noncommissioned officer), that you're responsible for your Soldiers," he said. "You are there for them and they are there for you. We've got to look out for each other."

This mentality carried over as he left the service and found friends in Warriors 4 Life. Camacho said with the Warriors 4 Life group and cycling, he's been able to find the brotherhood he had in the service.

"It's like being back in the armed forces, but at a different level," he said. "We enjoy each other. I love it. We speak the same language. It doesn't matter where we're from. Sometimes you find somebody you have served with. Once you're a Soldier, you will always be a Soldier. It's the camaraderie we get as a Soldier. We always keep it among us, and support each other."

He said the cycling helps him physically and mentally, and he encourages any veteran or active duty member with PTSD to use any sport to get them out of the house.

"Get out of the house and find support, so the PTSD doesn't get higher, and so you're not alone; we can support each other," he said. "Find an activity that works for you. And surround yourself with positive people, so you cannot stay in the past with what happened. And it's hard; it's very hard sometimes, but there's life out there. You've just got to look and have that will to get better and live better."

POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Remaining nonpartisan in public

BY JIM GARAMONE
Department of Defense
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Surveys show Americans respect the U.S. military more than most institutions in the country, in part, because it is viewed as nonpartisan.

Service members and Department of Defense civilians need to keep it that way.

Service members and DOD civilians swear an oath to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. It doesn't matter who is elected or what party that person represents. DOD members will follow the lawful orders of the commander in chief.

There is a long tradition of being apolitical in the American military. No one knew what party General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower belonged to while he served in the military. In 1948, President Harry S. Truman told Eisenhower he would step down if Ike decided to run as a Democrat.

The general waved that offer off, and in 1952, ran and won as a Republican.

In a more recent example, Army Gen. Colin L. Powell waited until he was retired to declare himself a Republican and serve as the secretary of state.

According to DOD Directive 1344.10 and service regulations, active-duty service members may not engage in partisan political activities, and all military personnel should avoid the inference that their political activities imply or appear to imply DOD sponsorship, approval or endorsement of a political candidate, campaign or cause.

Service members on active duty may not campaign for a partisan candidate, engage in partisan fundraising activities, serve as an officer of a partisan club or speak before a partisan gathering.

Active-duty service members may, however, express their personal opinions on political candidates and issues, make monetary contributions to a political campaign or organization, and attend political events as a spectator when not in uniform.

DOD civilians are restricted by law in the types of partisan activities they can engage in. It varies by grade, position and agency.

The governing law is the Hatch Act of 1939. The purpose of the Hatch Act is to ensure that federal programs are administered in a nonpartisan fashion, to protect federal employees from political coercion in the workplace, and to ensure that federal employees are advanced based on merit and not based on political affiliation, according to information on the U.S. Office of Special Counsel's website.

The Hatch Act has been amended several times since first passed in the Roosevelt Administration to cover changing circumstances — the rise of the Internet, for example.

The act defines political activity as "an activity directed toward the success or failure of a political party, candidate for partisan political office or partisan political group."

For civilians, there are two distinct groups. The more restrictive group includes those appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate and individuals serving in noncareer senior executive service positions; and career SES members, contract appeals board members, and all employees of the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency.

The more lenient group applies to all other employees, including Schedule C political appointees.

Those in the first group are expressly prohibited from participating in political activity. They cannot engage in any political activity in concert with a political party, partisan political group or for a candidate for partisan political party. Prohibited activities include soliciting or receiving political contributions.

However, these employees can express their personal opinions, make monetary contributions to a campaign, and attend — but not participate in — campaign events or fundraising functions sponsored by candidates for partisan political office or political parties.

Employees in the second group have a bit more leeway. On their own time, they may volunteer with a political campaign or political organization. Permitted volunteer activities include: organizing political rallies and meetings, making phone calls on behalf of a candidate, serving as a delegate to a party convention, and working for a political party to get out the vote on Election Day.

Federal employees cannot solicit or receive political contributions. No one may participate in any political activities on government time or by using government equipment.

Specifically, an employee may not send or forward political emails, post political messages to a Facebook account or engage in political tweeting on government time or government equipment, or while in a federal building (including when off duty), even if the employee is using a personal smartphone, tablet or computer. Employees should never use government equipment when engaging in political activities.

Social media is ubiquitous these days and the preferred method of communications for many Americans. Personnel may generally express their personal views on public issues or political candidates on social media just as they would be permitted to write a letter to the editor of a newspaper.

But just like a letter, employees and service members must clearly indicate they are not speaking in an official capacity. Any posting must clearly and prominently state that the views expressed are those of the individual only, and not of the Defense Department.

Active-duty military members and civilian employees in the more restricted group are prohibited from participating in partisan political activity. They can "follow" "friend" or "like" a political party or a candidate running for partisan office; they may not "share" or "re-tweet" comments or tweets from the Facebook page or twitter account of a political party or candidate running for partisan office.

QUEST FOR ZERO

'Q4Z' aims to eliminate on-duty fatalities and injuries

BY DARLENE Y. COWSERT
Air Force Safety Center
Public Affairs

KIRTLAND AIR FORCE BASE, N.M. — The new fiscal year brings a renewed emphasis from Air Force occupational safety professionals to the Quest for Zero initiative which sets a goal of zero on-duty injuries and fatalities.

"I'm often asked why we promote Quest for Zero," said Bill Parsons, the Air Force chief of occupational safety. "The answer is two-fold. One, it's a method of protecting resources — both equipment and personnel; and two, protecting these resources is critical to combat readiness."

According to Air Force Safety Automated System data, there were 29,713 on-duty mishaps reported during fiscal 2011 through 2015. Those mishaps resulted in 28,651 injuries at a cost of $242 million. The five-year total includes 24 Class A mishaps, the most costly of all mishap categories.

Of those, 17 resulted in fatality, three resulted in total disability and four involved property damage.

"The elimination of on-duty fatalities and a focused effort to reduce all mishaps is an attainable goal, but it requires every one doing our job," said Maj. Gen. Andrew Mueller, the Air Force chief of safety. "Safety is a shared responsibility — from providing the guidance, training, requirements and oversight, to each of us making a personal choice every day to take responsibility for our own safety."

Unlike previous safety awareness initiatives, Q4Z is a year-round effort to reduce on-duty mishaps through methods that include risk management, hazard abatement, communication and continuous training.

"The start of the fiscal year is the right time to restate our goal of zero on-duty injuries and fatalities," Parsons said. "If every Airman embraces Q4Z, we'll not only save lives and money, but we'll also ensure mission success."

The fiscal 2017 Q4Z theme, "Why wait," brings attention to every Airman's responsibility to report or communicate information about observed hazards that pose a potential mishap and to ensure that every required safety measure is used.

SERVICE MEMBER FOR LIFE CAREER TRANSITION SUMMIT

Service members prep for future at summit

BY RIO FERNANDES
Northwest Guardian

Thousands of service members took full advantage and began to prep for their futures at the Service Member For Life Career Transition Summit at Joint Base Lewis-McChord Oct. 12 to 14.

The summit is an annual event to help service members plan for their career when they have completed their commitment to the military.

“The better prepared you are for something, the better off you are,” said Chuck Hodges, Hiring Our Heroes senior director and former JBLM commander. “The more rehearsals and preparation you have, the better results you’ll have on the back end of finding employment. That is the ultimate goal of the summit; we want our service members to go from serving their country in one capacity to serving it in another way immediately.”

Every year, the civilian workforce welcomes around 200,000 service members into the mainstream marketplace, according to fedshirevets.com.

This influx of qualified candidates into the job search only makes finding a well-paying job harder for everyone. The goal of the summit, and of the Service Members for Life program, is to make sure that when a service member is taking that next step in their career, they understand the best way to find the ideal job.

“People are seeking service members because of what they can bring to a job,” said Barbara Farino, JBLM’s transition services manager. “People don’t often get to see the work ethic and dedication that a service member brings to their job.”

The three-day event allowed officials to pack information and services into a short amount of time. The first day events took place at the American Lakes Conference Center and were broken into two portions.

The first part was dedicated to transitioning service members and provided a variety of classes and seminars about preparing to enter the civilian workforce.

Following that was a forum for senior service members aiming to educate them about their career options and the best way to help other service members that might ask for help with transitioning.

around the different theaters at JBLM and focused on educating attendees about various fields in the private sector.

The summit ended Oct. 14 at McChord Field Hangars Nine and 10 with a career fair featuring more than 400 employers eager to hire service members.

Enrico Asuncion Jr., a transitions program specialist, said he knows firsthand how great the summit and the Service Member for Life program can be for people leaving the military for the civilian workforce.

“There are so many opportunities and companies around the state that people need to know about,” Asuncion said, who used the program when he was transitioning out. “Companies want to hire service members. They know that they’ll be there on time and won’t need their hands held to get things done.”

ARMY CONTINUING EDUCATION DIVISION

VIA delivers best tuition assistance fit, value to Soldiers

BY DAVID RUDERMAN
Army News Service

A new online decision support tool is providing Soldiers across the Army information that can save them time and money in the long term, by helping them identify academic programs that most closely align to their interests and goals today.

Known as VIA, indicating a path or course forward, the software package was introduced to the field in December 2015 by U.S. Army Human Resources Command’s Army Continuing Education Division. It is an online system that compiles an inventory of a Soldier’s interests, career goals, educational preferences and capabilities, runs them through a series of analytic matrices and provides recommendations for consideration.

The aim is to help Soldiers take a smart look at their options before electing the pathways that offer the best fit and best value in meeting their professional and personal goals, said Army Continuing Education Division program analyst Ela Karczewska.

“We believe a better informed Soldier will make better decisions,” she said.

Courtesy Photo

Soldiers are briefed on GoArmyEd programs available through their Tuition Assistance benefits.

VIA is now mandatory before electing to request tuition assistance through GoArmyEd. Soldiers enrolled in courses of study may use VIA as a tool to reassess and adjust their programs.

Those who have yet to elect how to apply their tuition assistance benefit can log in and explore to consider options that might work best for them, according to Karczewska.

“We wanted to make sure the information we provided to Soldiers is valid,” she said.

“A lot of times the decision-making process is backward,” said Patti Talbort, Army Continuing Education Division deputy chief. “Left to themselves, Soldiers tend to decide where they want to go to school first, sign up and then open up a course catalog and try to figure out what they are going to study.”

The process can take as little as 20 minutes, but most first-timers spend 30 to 40 minutes inputting information and considering recommendations, Karczewska said. Students, and would-be students, can review, tweak and re-run VIA to compare career goals and the choice of particular schools as they think through their path forward.

And they are not bound to the results, Karczewska said. VIA is a nonbinding, first step in coming to an informed decision.

“VIA is an adjunct to the counseling process,” Karczewska said. “It does not lock them into a particular recommendation. Soldiers can opt out, talk to a counselor, come back to VIA and reconsider their possibilities.”

Once a Soldier has elicited a minimum of three system-generated recommendations, they can compare them, make adjustments and, when they are ready to discuss their proposal with a counselor, submit their plan via GoArmyEd. The counselors have access to the Soldier’s VIA recommendations, which serve as the beginning of a conversation about constructing an academic program with the prospective student, Talbort said.

Once the counselor approves the selection, the Soldier can apply for classes via GoArmyEd. VIA is available for use by Soldiers across all components, active, Reserve and National Guard.

“We were very excited at the data from the first six months of VIA,” said Army Continuing Education Division chief, Dr. Pamela Raymer. “VIA is proving to be a valuable tool for Soldiers in helping them make better choices for degrees and schools.”

Karczewska said there has also been an increase in the selection of programs based in the STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) subjects — with concentrations in the health sciences, information technology and engineering — and away from general studies, business careers and protective careers such as criminal justice, homeland security and law enforcement.

“These are degrees they may not have thought of before VIA, and have higher employment potential when Soldiers are preparing for civilian careers,” she said.

RP6 REFUSE TO LOSE EVENT IN PUYALLUP

RP6 will host a special event, Refuse to Lose, Saturday at the AAH Theater, Arts and Allied Health Building, Pierce College Puyallup Campus, 1601 39th Ave. S.E., Puyallup, Wash., 98374. Join veterans, local organizations and leaders to address the veteran suicide rate and offer hope through discussion and resources. The doors will open at 2 p.m.; film starts at 3 p.m. The film, "Project 22," chronicles the 6,500-mile cross-country mission of two veterans to raise awareness of the high rate of suicide amongst veterans and to demonstrate that there is hope. In the film, the veterans interview researchers, healthcare providers and veterans who have found help and support. The veterans discuss therapies and programs that have assisted them in finding a new mission. The resource fair that takes place at Refuse to Lose prior to the screening will be manned by representatives from local organizations offering programs and support for veterans. Register by visiting eventbrite.com/e/refuse-to-lose-tickets-27712781676. This event is free and open to the public.

PROJECT

Base Realignment and Closure in 2005, he said, which identified urban encroachment in the northern clear zone as the biggest black mark against McCord Field.

Adamson said Lakewood and Pierce County stopped authorizing new construction in the clear zone in 2005 and have restricted any additional remodeling since that time. The last building was approved for construction in 2003, he said. Adamson said the properties operating in the clear zone were valued at more than $55 million in 2006.

The 2015 SSMCP Joint Land Use Study, reaffirmed the magnitude of the clear zone encroachment situation, by making

North Clear Zone Project

By the end of 2016, local leaders and JBLM will have three crucial pieces of information from SSMCP:

- Strategy and plan for resolving encroachment
- Current cost estimate for properties in the clear zone
- Cost estimate for relocating businesses in clear zone

it one the studies highest priority recommendations for resolution, he said.

To solve this long-standing issue, the SSMCP has initiated the first phase of the North Clear Zone project — an initiative to address incompatible land uses in the McCord Field north clear zone. Adamson began meeting with JBLM officials and representatives from Lakewood and Pierce County in April to discuss the path to a cooperative agreement.

According to Adamson, the strategy and eventual plan for resolving the clear zone encroachment will take years to implement. Recent rumors the city of Lakewood is going to swoop in and require condemnation of buildings and properties and move people to new locations is “sensational,” he said.

“We don’t even have the funding right now to do anything beyond the study,” Adamson said. “We can’t go out and buy buildings right now. We’re trying to determine if we need to do that, and if we do, what it will cost.”

The funding source is also in question. One of the studies objectives is to figure out how to pay for the solutions that are yet to be identified. Adamson said SSMCP has a long way to go, but federal, state and local funding sources will be considered.

The SSMCP has hired consultants to help develop a plan of action. A separate appraisal firm will refresh property appraisals and estimate the cost of acquisition and relocation.

The information gathered will be used by SSMCP to develop multiple strategies to bring the clear zone into compliance with FAA regulations in a way that is compatible for all stakeholders. Adamson said this is all being done to reduce risk and improve public and air safety.

“The intention is to eventually clear everything out of there,” Adamson said. “However, solutions have yet to firm up, pending completion of the study.”

Once the SSMCP has the cost information, strategizing can begin to pinpoint criteria for decision making. Multiple stakeholders with different interests, such as viable businesses operating out of the clear zone for more than 40 years, is cause for concern, Adamson said.

Property owners, tenants, entrepreneurs, local jurisdictions and JBLM all have differing points of views and therefore varied objectives. Coming up with interim objectives acceptable to multiple stakeholders is the challenge, Adamson said.

According to FAA regulations, all land in the clear zone should be returned to an agricultural state. No animals, humans or structures should be present in the safety zone, Adamson said.

“To get to that point will take a lot of dollars,” he said. “We’re thinking we’re going to have to phase our outcomes along the available funding we’ve got.”

WALK

pond; however, inclement weather made an indoor site more conducive to the memorial activity.

Madigan’s Walk to Remember is in connection with the national Pregnancy and Infant Loss Remembrance Day held Saturday, which was created after former President Ronald Reagan proclaimed October as National Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month in 1988.

A ceremony in the center’s Letterman Auditorium allowed the families to grieve together over their losses and honor those who died.

“Creator, as we find ourselves in this place that we never would have chosen for ourselves,” said Madigan’s department of ministry and pastoral care Maj. George L. Wallace in a prayer to begin the ceremony. “God, we have gathered here to remember; there is nothing worse than losing the life of a child. Each life is precious and every life, no matter how brief, has a profound impact on our lives.”

“As broken pieces, we come together to walk, to bear witness to the pain that is not just our own,” Wallace said, as an infant in the crowd began to cry — no parent attempting to stifle its poignant vocalization.

This was the second time Capt. Ryan Coker, 4th Attack Reconnaissance Squadron, 6th Cavalry Regiment, 16th Combat Aviation Brigade, and his wife, Megan, from Sumter, S.C., participated in the event.

Last year, shortly after moving to JBLM, their unborn daughter, Edan, was diagnosed with bilateral congenital diaphragmatic hernia, a rare and usually fatal birth defect.

The couple was given options, but they prayed about it and decided to continue the pregnancy, Megan said.

“We were lucky; we spent a lot of time with Edan (during the pregnancy),” she said, adding the baby’s lungs didn’t develop and she died 40 minutes after her birth.

Since grieving for and honoring Edan at last year’s Walk to Remember, the couple has had two miscarriages. Baby Errol died in his mother’s womb six months after his sister passed. Two months later, at a routine doctor’s visit, Megan again found out she was pregnant; however, the couple’s second son, Mason, also didn’t survive the pregnancy.

The couple held three candles at the event, each having a child’s name written on the outer casing. Megan said she was glad to be able to talk with others about their losses.

“Child loss isn’t something people talk about — it’s taboo,” she said. “It’s nice to be given an opportunity to talk and be able to share our loss.”

Sandra Moore, staff nurse and bereavement coordinator at Madigan, said the event is a way for parents to know their child is remembered and honored. There were tears on many faces as each child’s name was read during the ceremony.

“Sarah, Tyson, Michael, ...

Jonah ... Gabriella ... Baby Davis, Edan, Erroll and Mason Coker, Baby Angel, Baby Ramirez,” the names rolled off, as three Madigan staffers alternated reading the long list of babies’ names.

“It’s comforting to know that other people remember and care about your child,” Moore said. “This is a safe environment with no judgment and just support, to remember (each) child.”

FIRE

ture so didn’t count in the IM-COM reported Army loss. That data counted only the two dormitory fires for a total of $15,200 in damages, according to Lane.

“But, either way, it’s the lowest loss in (JBLM) history,” he said.

He credits fire safety education with keeping down the number of base fires.

“Top notch public education is happening,” Lane said.

With that in mind, now is the time — the holiday season, which begins Oct. 31 and runs through New Year’s Day — to be aware of potential risks and put an emphasis on the “triad of inspection,” according to Ed Chavez, JBLM fire inspector.

That’s composed of code enforcement, inspections and education, he said.

“With education being the foundation,” he said. “Whether it be winter, spring, summer or fall, there are unique situations that require an understanding, which we tend to reinforce with seasonal campaigns.”

He listed important steps to take to maintain safety in homes and offices, everything from care in lithium battery storage to replacing smoke detector batteries.

“The key is reminding people that the little things count,” he said.

In addition to individual and battalion safety procedures, heightened use of social media, including newspaper articles and posts on JBLM Facebook pages, is making a difference in fire safety education, Chavez said.

“Making sure everyone is marching in the same direction is the focus of our inspectors and educators,” he said. “Creating and enforcing good prevention habits is our goal.”

JAMES

Tuskegee Airmen, you have been a trailblazer,” said retired Brig. Gen. Leon Johnson, the president of Tuskegee Airmen Inc. “You, like them, have shown that hard work and staying on task results in success.”

“It’s the honor of a lifetime,” James said. “My heart is palpitating and it’s difficult to find words ... I’m just so humbled by this honor and I’m so humbled to be with these gentlemen; they inspire us all.”

To become an honorary Tuskegee Airman, one must help preserve the Red Tails’ heritage and help continue their legacy by introducing youth to aviation and science, technology, engineering and math. According to Johnson, James has done just that.

Under James’ leadership, the spirit of the Tuskegee Airmen units from World War II is alive and well in the hands of active-duty, Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard units, Johnson said.

“Until recently, the 332nd Expeditionary Wing was in Iraq overseeing a constant rotation of personnel who considered themselves the forward deployed bearers of the Tuskegee Airmen legacy,” Johnson said.

In addition to being fantastic role models for the today’s Airmen, the Tuskegee Airmen made huge contributions during World War II, James said.

“They grew up in an America that was different from America of today — where it was legal for businesses to refuse them because of the color of their skin, and a law called ‘separate but equal’ was the law of the land,” James said. “Nonetheless, they came from every corner of the country, and all they asked at that period was the privilege of serving our country.

“It’s crucial we continue to tell these stories; we continue that legacy forward in the Air Force today. We are committed to seeing that the values reflected by these Airmen do carry forward and that we do tell the young Airmen of today about our Tuskegee Airmen.”

Johnson said the Red Tails are dedicated to preserving the heritage and legacy of the Tuskegee Airmen and are working with Air Force leadership on new diversity and inclusion initiatives, including the 13 new initiatives announced in September by James, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. David L. Goldfein and Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force James A. Cody.

“I can tell you my organization stands ready now, just as our Airmen did during World War II, to help and support moving the Air Force to the next level and meeting the diversity and inclusion challenges of the 21st century,” Johnson said. “For all that you have done to support our Airmen, the men and women of Tuskegee Airmen Inc. are proud to recognize you with honorary membership in our organization ... congratulations and welcome.”

5TH ANNUAL USAA CHANGE OF COMMAND CEREMONY

Seahawks pass the 12th Man flag to Navy

Sailors, Marines exchange banner during event at CenturyLink Field

Navy Public Affairs Support Element, Detachment Northwest

SEATTLE — Marine Corps Security Force Battalion-Bangor passed the 12th Man flag to Navy Region Northwest as Sailors and Marines participated in the 5th annual USAA change of command ceremony at CenturyLink Field in Seattle Oct. 11.

The 4th Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division at Joint Base Lewis-

McChord was the first military organization to carry the 12-Man honor in 2012. The unit inactivated in 2014. In 2013, the 4th Bde., 2nd Inf. Div. transferred the 12th Man flag to the 446th Airlift Wing at McChord Field.

Navy Region Northwest succeeded the Marines as the fifth command to carry the Seahawks 12th Man flag into the coming year. The change-of-command occurred during a day of fanfare when service members were given the opportunity to spend time with players and display various aspects of their missions, ranging from explosive ordnance and disposal to military working dog security.

During the main event, a ceremony resembling a classic military change-of-command ceremony, Marine Lt. Col. Scott M. Reed, MCSFBn-Bangor commanding officer, turned over the 12th Man flag to Rear Adm. Gary Mayes, commander, NRRNW.

"I look forward to working with the Seahawks as the year progresses," Mayes said before receiving the flag. "We plan to

Last year's Joint Base Lewis-McChord flag football team had 30 players facing Navy Region Northwest in Bremerton. After having that kind of turnout in the first day of tryouts last month, the numbers have declined to less than half in the fourth week of practice.

Nine players turned out for Monday's practice at Cowan Stadium on Lewis Main. It was originally meant to be the first of four warm-up games before the 17th annual Registration is only available the day of the race and starts at 5:30 a.m. For more information, call the JBLM Intramural Sports Office at 253-967-4768.

TEST YOUR METTLE AT ALPHA WARRIOR EVENT

Sports: For those who have wanted to test their athletic abilities like those on American Ninja Warrior, there will be a special obstacle course event with the Alpha Warrior Event Nov. 4-5 at 10 a.m. at Wilson Sports and Fitness Center on Lewis North. It is a free event for ages 16 and older; signing a waiver is required. For more information, visit alphawarrior.com/military.

SPORTING CLAYS SHOOTING COMPETITION SCHEDULED

Outdoor: The monthly Sporting Clays shooting competition is Nov. 5 at 10:30 a.m. at the Joint Base Lewis-McChord Skeet and Trap Range on Lewis Main. Competition includes 100 targets across 10 different stations. Registration opens at 9 a.m. and is $35 per participant. For more information, call 253-967-7056.

JBLM HUNTING RULES AND REGULATIONS

Privilege of hunting on JBLM for those who follow the rules

Hunters on JBLM are required to carry updated and current firearms registration each year. Registration is the first step to hunting on the installation.

SCOTT HANSEN Northwest Guardian

BY DEAN SIEMON
Northwest Guardian

Saturday was the beginning of the deer season for modern rifle use, which continues through Oct. 31 at Joint Base Lewis-McChord. It was also the first day of waterfowl hunting season that will be available through January. Add in that the pheasant hunting season is still continuing through Thanksgiving weekend, and there could be a lot of people who want to come hunting on JBLM.

Hunters are even more anxious to get going after last weekend's forecasted wind storm forced hunting to be closed on the opening weekend for deer and waterfowl. Although Skeet and Trap Range and hunting areas manager David Pedroza can understand hunters wanting to get out on JBLM's hunting grounds, there are still rules that many new hunters on JBLM may not know and important reminders regular JBLM hunters sometimes forget.

Pedroza said the continued challenge every year is reminding hunters that being able to hunt on JBLM land is a privilege, not a right. That means everyone has to follow the rules of hunting on JBLM.

"Just because a guy has hunted here for 40 years, there is no rite of passage," Pedroza said.

Firstly, hunters need to have updated and current registration, which expires at the end of June every year. Getting a permit to hunt on the installation begins with registering your take the flag all over the region, which makes up 11 states. We're going to get it on carriers, we're going to get it in the air, and we're going to get it on subs and get it below the surface of the sea. On behalf of the 37,000 Sailors and civilians that make up Navy Region Northwest, I accept the 12th Man flag."

Through NRNW, the 12th Man flag will have the opportunity to be displayed on various platforms of the Navy's mission in the Pacific Northwest.

Along with displaying the flag, the sponsored command is given a leading role in Seahawks military outreach.

"We had the opportunity to hang out with another pro organization," said MCSFBn Command Sgt. Maj. David M. McKinley. "To see how they methodically come up with their plans to execute games is not much different (than) what we do; it's just to a different degree. We had the chance to sit and watch their practices, go to their training facility and be invited to the NFL stadium, walk out on the field, hold the flag tight and allow all the fans to see us in uniform. It gives us appreciation for all the work the Marines are doing and the Sailors as well; just the recognition is great."

Programs such as the 12th Man change-of-command sponsorship are designed to highlight the contributions service members make in their communities.

"Outreach programs like this allow the community to see our Navy and Marine Corps (and) to interact with them," Mayes said. "We look for these kinds of opportunities so people can better understand what it is that we do on a day-to-day basis. The more events we do like this, the more they gain an understanding of their Sailors and Marines. It's a great honor to have an organization like the Seahawks do these events."

TEAM

Puget Sound Army vs. Navy Flag Football Classic Nov. 18 at Cowan Stadium.

The team was able to set up a nine-on-nine drill after two more players showed up and joined the practice, followed by a small group of service members from Madigan Army Medical Center having a pick-up game.

But head coach David Cameron won't sugarcoat the situation. More players are needed to help prepare for the game against Navy.

"From a former player and a coach from last year, this is wholeheartedly disappointing," Cameron said.

Cameron is hoping that the final roster for the team will have no less than 18 players — enough to have an offensive and defensive side for the nine-on-nine format. That would still be a drop from last year's team that had to make cuts to get down to the final 30-man roster.

Navy will likely have a full roster, and it won the last three games in the Army-Navy rivalry. Cameron said he wants to have more players because some will be leaving JBLM with permanent change of station orders before the game.

"This (installation) is too big," Cameron said. "(JBLM) probably has 10 who can replace the one or two leaving. (We) just need them to show up."

In addition to being able to piece together the right team, Cameron wants enough depth for tentative warm-up games

How to get involved

- Practices take place Monday to Thursday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Cowan Stadium on Lewis Main. Tryouts are open until Nov. 17.

- Interested players must be active-duty Army or Air Force and assigned to a unit on Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

- The 17th annual Puget Sound Army vs. Navy Flag Football Classic is scheduled Nov. 18 at 1 p.m. at Cowan Stadium.

- For more information, contact the JBLM Intramural Sports Office at 253-967-4768.

scheduled for Monday, Nov. 7 and 14 at Cowan Stadium.

Being able to have exhibition games before facing Navy is key in helping decide who fits better into his offensive and defensive schemes, he said, but practice can only show a coach so much in terms of player performance.

"You can have a quarterback who looks really good in nine-on-nine (drills) until he gets pressure on him," Cameron said.

Although the anticipated numbers seem low, that doesn't necessarily mean the JBLM team is at a guaranteed disadvantage. Ryan Tomsic has played for JBLM since 2010, only missing the cut last year. He recalled the team winning 21-6 in 2011 with only 14 players on the team.

"We just had a core group of guys," he said.

Receiver Ryan Tomsic makes a catch during practice for the annual Army vs. Navy game at Cowan Stadium on Lewis Main Monday.

Tomsic said the turnout this year, so far, is the lowest he's ever seen and he hopes for more players to be available after the JBLM Commander's Cup Flag Football playoffs finish up in a few weeks. Tomsic also noted there could be some service members returning from Yakima Training Center soon who will want to play.

The players currently making regular practices have shown their dedication. While tryouts are open up until the day before the game, players like Brandon Harris are doing what they can to avenge the past three losses to Navy Region Northwest.

"We're doing the best we can," Harris said. "Regardless, we're going to win with what we have."

Active-duty Army and Air Force service members assigned to units on JBLM are able to attend practices Monday to Thursday starting at 6 p.m. at Cowan Stadium. For more information, call the JBLM Intramural Sports office at 253-967-4768 hunting firearms at the installation visitor center. The next step is making a trip to the Northwest Adventure Center — open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. — with all of the necessary documents to complete the permit registration.

HUNTING

After all of that is done, people can begin registering to hunt in specific areas through the hunt area reservation phone number at 253-967-4653. Call-in registration is open from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the same day or the next day of hunting.

It also helps to call in to see which training areas are open to hunt on the installation. A weekly training area allocation chart is released weekly on Tuesdays. It marks which areas are closed to hunters and which are open.

Hunting on JBLM can sometimes be limited to only a few areas. Units that are training get the first priority with a selection of training areas, followed by land management efforts by the Directorate of Public Works. Anything left is available for recreational use through Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation — that includes hunting.

"It's going to be predicated on what training areas are available and to utilize what methods are allowed," Pedroza said.

Pedroza said he has noticed a problem with plenty of hunters who do not complete the required sign out through the hunt area reservation line before the daily 9 p.m. deadline. In fact, hundreds of hunters throughout the year fail to properly sign out.

Pedroza can even recall some days when up to nearly 80 people failed to sign out in a single day. He's also had several repeat offenders who are flirting with double digit offenses.

"Obviously, it's working to get in," Pedroza said. "But they claim they have problems signing out."

Pedroza said it's important to sign out because the law enforcement on base might have concerns of a lost hunter still out in the training areas. Pedroza said it is a problem when hunters wander into the wrong training area at the wrong time.

Recently, an app was made for that problem. Hunters with smartphones are now able to download maps of JBLM by first downloading the PDF Maps app for either Android or iOS compatible phones. Hunters can then do an online search for "JBLM Range Support" to find either "JBLM Atlas" or "Environmental Coordination Map Atlas."

From there, a smartphone's internal GPS can pick up a hunter's location to help them navigate the training area. This application doesn't use one's data connection.

"There's now no excuse for being in the wrong area at the wrong time, if you have that kind of phone," Pedroza said.

For more information about hunting on the installation, call 253-967-6263 or visit jblmmwr.com/outdoor\_rec.

PREPARE FOR A SCARE

BY RIO FERNANDES
Northwest Guardian

If you're looking for a good old-fashioned Halloween scare over the next couple of weekends, consider exploring “A Walk in The Dark at Shoreline Park” on Lewis North or “The Haunted Forest” on McChord Field.

“A Walk in The Dark” runs Friday, Saturday and Thursday to Oct. 29. Over the weekends, the event runs from 7 to 11 p.m.

The event will close an hour earlier on Thursday. There will also be a not-so-scary version of the walk Oct. 29 from 3 to 5 p.m., which officials advise is

OCTOBER 29

BIKING ALONG THE
CARBON RIVER TRAIL

Bike through the rainforest of Mount Rainier National Park following the Carbon River five miles toward Carbon Glacier.

Parts of Carbon River Road were washed out in the November 2006 floods, and the road is closed to motor vehicle traffic.

Bicyclists now share the road with pedestrians. Difficulty: easy; distance: 9.2 miles; elevation gain: 600 feet; time: three hours.

Minimum age: 12. Meet at the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 9:30 a.m.

Trip with NAC expert guides. $45.

INTRO TO STANDUP
PADDLEBOARDING

Learn the basics of standup paddleboarding in a fun group setting.

Start on dry land learning the correct paddle height and hand placement, equipment overview, kneeling and standing on a board.

Students will also learn about water safety and standup paddleboard etiquette.

Appropriate for all experience and fitness levels. Minimum age: 12.

Meet at the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 9 a.m.

Trip with NAC expert guides. $35.

WORKSHOP

From the deep reds of vine maple on the western slopes to the golden yellow of alpine larches on the eastern slope, Washington's diversity of flora in the mountains makes for a spectacular fall color display.

But that's not all that makes the hillsides light up in autumn.

There are fiery reds and oranges in huckleberry shrubs, brilliant yellows of the aspens and a variety of different berries in many hues; often against a backdrop of a crisp blue sky.

Learn to capture all of nature's beauty on film in this fall photography workshop. Minimum age: 12.

Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 8 a.m. or McChord Field's Adventure Unlimited at 8:15 a.m.

Trip with NAC expert guides. $50.

ADVENTURE TO MOUNT
ST. HELENS' APE CAVE

Head to Mount St. Helens to explore the largest continuous lava tube in the Western Hemisphere.

Go deep into the underside of a 2,000-year-old lava flow to scramble over and climb under volcanic formations.

Two features that must be traversed include six-foot and eight-foot vertical walls and numerous rock piles up to 20 feet high.

In this subterranean environment, the average year-round temperature remains a constant 45 degrees, so dress warmly.

Difficulty: moderate; distance: three miles; elevation gain: 250 feet. Minimum age: 12. Depart from the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis better suited for younger children who might not enjoy the scarier version in the evening. The 627th Civil Engineer Squadron's "The Haunted Forest" runs Friday to Sunday and again Oct. 28 to 30 from 7 to 10 p.m. A less scary children's event will be offered each night from 6 to 7 p.m.

"A Walk in The Dark" tickets for ages 12 and older are $10 and $7 for children 11 and younger. The not-so-scary version will only set visitors back $2. Visitors are also eligible for a $5 ticket on Thursdays if they bring an unwrapped children's toy to donate for the holidays. Tickets for "The Haunted Forest" are $5 for children 12 and younger and $8 for adults. Proceeds benefit the squadron booster club.

Visitors will see everything from zombies and clowns to demented monsters during their 20-minute "A Walk in the Dark at Shoreline Park."

Visitors should expect to walk through 15 to 20 minutes of genuine terror at both experiences. They'll see zombies, clowns, demented monsters and everything in between.

"A Walk in The Dark" is being put on by Better Opportunities for Single Service Members. The organization has been planning the event for more than a month.

"It's one of the top-rated haunted houses in the state," said Spc. Bryce Paulson, of the 16th Combat Aviation Brigade, who is a BOSS official. "We have professional makeup artists and also do all our own stunts."

Officials are expecting more than 2,000 people to brave the terrifying experience. They've also recruited the help of more than 60 actors to help scare everyone foolish enough to try and make it through "A Walk in the Dark at Shoreline Park."

Safety for both the visitors and volunteers is also of paramount concern, Paulson said.

"Obviously, the actors aren't allowed to touch anyone," he said. "It's also important to remember that visitors are also not allowed to touch the actors. We've had some people get scared and throw a punch or two and we've had to kick them out."

There will also be medics on site if there are any unforeseen complications.

Some of the attractions Paulson believes people will enjoy are the new zombie research facility and the section of the walk where visitors wander in total darkness. He added that the walk is genuinely terrifying and to think twice about bringing a child.

It's also important to remember that it's going to be rather cold, especially since the events are taking place outdoors. Visitors should dress warmly and always be ready for rain.

LEARNING ABOUT MACRO-PHOTOGRAPHY

There's no end to the potential subjects for macro-photography.

Rusty nails in a barn, colorful flowers in a vase or fresh fruit at a farmer's market are all works of art waiting for you to photograph them.

Classroom lectures introduce you to creative macro composition techniques, methods for adding subtle light to a scene and specific equipment for macro-photography, including extension tubes, close-up filters and focusing rails.

This workshop takes place at the Northwest Adventure Center at Lewis North at 6 p.m.

Trip with NAC expert guides. $10.

ALPINE CLUB DENALI MULTIDAY EXPEDITION

Alaska is home to one of the most impressive mountains in North America: Denali.

Standing at 20,310 feet, it's the highest mountain in North America and one of the world's Seven Summits.

The Alpine Club is running a 20-day expedition to this gem for a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

This expedition will attempt the West Buttress route from Kahiltna Glacier.

Although there's no technical difficulty, many stretches leave very little margin for error.

Prospective climbers should be highly competent in travel on moderately steep snow/ice and exposed traverses.

Family and MWR's Outdoor Recreation program will offer a Winter Cascade Expedition Seminar course to prepare you.

Included in the cost is transportation and airfare, lodging and technical gear (except boots, clothing, food, sleeping bag and expedition pack).

The expert guides can assist you in ordering discounted boots as needed.

For more information, email jblmalpineclub@gmail.com. $5,000.

JBLM Outdoor Recreation

The Northwest Adventure Center on JBLM hosts a number of rock climbing trips, including Monday's visit to the Tieton Valley.
