Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Briefly

Beirut Memorial

A memorial observance is scheduled for Oct. 23 at 10:30 a.m. at the Beirut Memorial to honor servicemembers killed in a terrorist bombing in Beirut, Lebanon, in 1983. Gen. Richard I. Neal, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps, will deliver the observance address. Joe Choate, Mayor of Jacksonville, and Maj. Gen. Patrick G. Howard, commanding general, MCB Camp Lejeune, will be present to welcome the audience. The Coastal Carolina Community Choir will provide special music. Uniform for the ceremony is Service "A" for spectators.

Crime Fair

A Crime Prevention Fair will be held Oct. 19 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the parking lot of the Marine Corps Exchange at MCAS New River. The event will allow the community to observe displays and speak with members of military and civilian law enforcement agencies from the area.

Tractor stolen

NCIS is offering a $500 cash reward for information leading to the recovery of the following piece of equipment:

Between 7:30 a.m. Sept. 12 and 9:45 a.m. Sept. 18, a yellow 1991 John Deere farm tractor, model 2555, serial number LO2555G749126, with a red "bush hog" brush cutter attached to the rear was stolen from a training range on the Verona Loop Road. The suspects cut the lock off the gate and either drove the tractor away or had an industrial flat bed trailer to remove it.

Anyone having information regarding the theft should contact Special Agent Jeffery Ruffino at 451-6668 or 451-8071.

Comptrollers

The American Society of Military Comptrollers will hold a luncheon Oct. 17 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the SNCO Club, MCB Camp Lejeune.

For reservations, please call Sonja Monk at 451-3023 by Oct. 15.

Navy Birthday

A cake cutting ceremony in honor of the U.S. Navy birthday will be held today at 10 a.m. in the galley of the Naval Hospital Camp Lejeune. The public is invited to attend.

Tornado rips through Courthouse Bay housing

Cpl. J. J. Rodriguez
Globe staff

Miraculously no one was injured Tuesday morning as a tornado cut a path through three Courthouse Bay homes, rendering two of them uninhabitable.

The twister hit between 7:40 and 7:45 a.m., leaving a path of destruction approximately 100-yards long and 75-yards wide.

"We thank the Lord that the valuables, meaning my three children, the dog and I, are OK," said Maryanne Benvenuti, whose home was damaged.

The Camp Lejeune Fire Protection Division received a call that windows were blown out of three homes, according to Elizabeth Hoffman, acting deputy fire chief.

When FPD personnel arrived on the scene they found more than just window glass.

Numerous trees were destroyed, three power-line posts were gone and the Benvenuti's Ford Bronco had been picked up and thrown across the street.

The words residents used to describe the windy monster reflected many a scene from tornado movies.

"It got really windy and then we heard that freight train sound, and all hell broke loose," Benvenuti said. "Everything happened so quickly, about 30 seconds or so."

Benvenuti quickly moved her family to the safest place in her house, the laundry room, possibly saving her and her children.

Next door, Michelle West, unknowingly mirrored Benvenuti's actions by finding her house's safest place. She took her family into their hallway and closed all the doors so that no debris could get to them.

"The winds picked up and the windows started shaking, that's when I said 'Let's get out of here,' I grabbed my baby, who just had surgery yesterday, went upstairs to get my son, who was asleep, and took them to the hallway," she said.

West hadn't turned on the radio or television yet, so she wasn't aware that there was a tornado watch in effect. Benvenuti knew about the watch but, like many people, did not pay much mind to it.

"I knew about the tornado watch but just said 'Oh well.' I'll pay more attention next time," she said.

Base Maintenance, the fire department, housing department personnel and contractors were on the job soon after the twister tore through.

"We're looking into relocating the families of the houses that were damaged," said the Director of Family Housing Lt. Col. Dan Donahue.

The Wests and the Benvenutis were temporarily moved to Bachelor Officer Quarters while their homes are repaired and the Family Housing Department will contact the Travel Management Office to look into storing their possessions.

Ironically, the three houses damaged by the tornado had earlier been damaged by hurricanes Bertha and Fran and were scheduled to be repaired on the same day that the tornado hit.

"Work crews were on the way to fix them. That's why they were there almost as soon as it happened," said Donahue.

Damages to the homes and property have not been estimated by base officials but repairs began immediately.

MCI issues new Sgts course

Cpl. Timothy C. Hodge
Marine Barracks Washington, D.C.

The Marine Corps Institute has completed the validation of the new Sergeants' Nonresident Program or 8000 series.

The Professional Military Education (PME) Department of MCI released the course for enrollment on Sept. 1.

The new Sergeants' Nonresident Program is a series of MCI courses geared specifically toward providing career-level PME for Marine sergeants. Corporals and sergeants can enroll in the new course. Lance corporals and below are not authorized to enroll.

This program includes six areas of study. The areas include communications skills, leadership, military studies, training management, battle skills and weapons.

"Communications Skills" uses the self-paced text "Written Communications for Sergeants." It covers grammar, punctuation and effective writing skills.

"Leadership" covers recognizing, displaying and teaching leadership.

"Military Studies" provides a basic knowledge of subjects unique to the military and the Marine Corps. The course covers the procedures for conducting nonjudicial punishment, drill, uniforms and inspections, physical fitness training, Marine Corps history and customs and courtesies.

"Training Management" is the course providing an overview of unit training management, oral communication and instruction techniques and managing an MCI training program.

"Battle Skills" covers the basic fundamentals and techniques of conducting combat operations at a squad level.

"Weapons" provides technical and detailed instruction on the characteristics of some of the most common small arms found in the Marine Corps arsenal.

The course requires 64 hours of student effort. The courses include machine-graded multiple-choice examinations. The exams are closed-book.

MCI mails the test and examinations package to the student upon enrollment. Each package has detailed administrative instructions inside.

"This program is intended to be a stepping stone or building block for a sergeant's instruction. This means that once a sergeant reports to the resident school the knowledge would not be foreign to him or her," said GySgt. F.E. Williams, Enlisted Division leader, Professional Military Education Department, Marine Corps Institute.

The program was initiated in August 1992 after the directors of the SNCO academies, Marine Corps University and MCI met and discussed the pertinent knowledge that sergeants are required to know.

The program then had to undergo various changes, a budget crisis and a host of other commitments.

However, the final phase of the validation is now complete and the program is available to the fleet.

"Initially, this program prepares the Marine for the Sergeants' Course. But once it's combined with the resident school, it prepares the sergeant to take his or her rightful place among the SNCO ranks," said Williams.

Corps' top aviator outlines new campaign plan

Capt. T.V. Johnson
HQM

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 23) — Lieutenant General Terrence R. Dake has seen many changes during his career as a Marine aviator, some of it spent near the very office he now occupies. But, as a major in Aviation Plans and Policies in 1979, he may never have dreamed he would one day be at the helm of all Marine aviation during a significant point in its history.

"The things we were thinking of back then are starting to come true now. The MV-22 Osprey and Joint Strike Fighter ... it's a great time for Marine Corps Aviation," he said.

As the Marine Corps' Deputy Chief of Staff for Aviation, Dake views the near future as the "promised land" for Marine Aviation, but he and other senior Marine leaders also recognize that some changes in training and manpower policies will be needed if the Corps is to continue providing the nation with a balanced force-in-readiness. As a result, Dake published the Marine Corps Aviation Campaign Plan on Sept. 12.

Despite some recent aircraft mishaps and groundings, Dake makes it clear that the new Aviation Campaign Plan is much more than a reaction to those incidents. Highlighted by a shift to sortie-based training, the campaign plan's evolution began with the Commandant's Planning Guidance published in 1995.

In his planning guidance, Gen. Krulak called for a study to identify future aviation requirements. That study, conducted by Headquarters Marine Corps and aviation commanders in the field, examined how the Corps trains its aviation community, how it operates, and the measures it employs to ensure proper aviation maintenance and safety. The aim of the study was to determine how to make better use of Marines and aviation resources. The result is a fundamental change in the way the Corps trains, operates and mans its aviation component.

Key to the plan is the replacement of the old flight-hour program with a sortie-based training program that focuses directly on readiness. Though flight hours will still be tied to the aviation budget, the campaign plan states the pursuit of flight hours is no longer expected. Combat readiness is what is expected of aircrews and weapons systems, and training plans must reflect limiting factors such as available manning and aircraft, as well as a unit's supply and maintenance capability.

Dake also wants to decentralize responsibility for the training.

"We need to give ownership of training to the commanders," he said. "Aviators recognize that simply building flight hours does not guarantee high combat readiness of Marine aircrews."

Closely tied to the philosophy behind sortie-based training is the reduction of the operational tempo of aviation units. Dake wants to take advantage of "operational pauses" between recurring commitments, including supporting Marine Expeditionary Units, the Unit Deployment Program, and carrier deployments.

"We want to put some predictability back into what Marines have when they're in garrison," he said.

Another element of the campaign plan is periodic training and readiness manual reviews. These manuals must be scrutinized to ensure they focus on critical flying skills and missions that pilots will likely encounter in combat. To complement this review, aviators will make fuller use of simulator capabilities. To do that, the Corps will have to assess and initiate simulator acquisitions and upgrades to support changes to the training program and readiness revisions in the manuals.

The plan will have a lasting impact not only on the safety of Marines, but it will also have a positive impact on their quality of life, training, and their ability to focus on accomplishing the mission. "I think it's going to be something that will allow us to step forward in a lot of areas," said Dake.

In addition to safety, pilot retention is another issue that ranks high on Dake's list of priorities. Designed to increase retention, the program will allow aviators in flight communities manned below 95 percent to be eligible for bonuses up to $72,000.

Beginning in Fiscal Year 1997, fixed wing and rotary wing pilots who have completed their initial contractual obligation and have less than 13 years commissioned service will be able to apply for bonuses worth $12,000 dollars per year, in exchange for agreeing to serve until the 14-year mark. Currently, the Marine Corps offers pilots a two-year, $6,000-a-year program to stay, but the new plan will be similar to programs other services have had in place for some time.

Dake sees the new Aviation Continuation Pay program as an investment, and the retention of experienced pilots as the return on that investment.

For now, the Aviation Campaign Plan is an aggressive step in the right direction. Describing his feelings about the plan, Dake said, "I feel really good about it, and I know those pilots out there are going to feel good about it as well."

Editor's note: We are finally starting to receive your letters, keep sending them! Remember, the letters should address concerns pertaining to the military, Marine Corps and Camp Lejeune as a whole, not individual gripes.

Letters must include name, rank and work extension. Mail letters to Commanding General, (Attn: Public Affairs/Letters to the Editor), Marine Corps Base, PSC

Box 20004, Camp Lejeune, NC, 28542-0004, or drop them off at Building 67, CPAO. Also the E-mail address is, Cpl. Edward S. Harcher @JPAO@MCB Lejeune.

To all the good people, thanks

Editor's Note: Six-year-old Brent Davidson was murdered Sept. 17 by a neighbor at Beacham Apartments. There is no known motive for the crime.

Dear Editor:

We want to thank all the good people of Camp Lejeune for their love, prayers, and generosity toward our family since the death of our son,

Brent Davidson. The loss of our son was a tragic event beyond our comprehension. We have been comforted by the kindness and caring thoughts we have received from the community. We have seen how people pull together during a time of crisis. This has strengthened our faith in God and humanity.

Federal voting assistance program now on-line

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Voting Assistance Program now has a site on the World Wide Web.

Servicemembers, their family members and all overseas citizens may now obtain absentee voting information from the program's web site, <http://www.fvap.gov/>. "We are excited about this information venue for assisting our citizens, regardless of where they are in the world," program director Phyllis Taylor said. "Assistance on most voting-related topics is now a few clicks away, and this will foster voting participation and further enhance the democratic process for our citizens."

The site provides an on-line overview of the program's mission and services available as well as a direct connection to the program via e-mail.

Site visitors will also find a web-based version of most federal voting materials, including the 1996-97 Voting Assistance Guide. This guide contains state-by-state procedures for requesting registrations and a ballot, plus a 30-second public service announcement promoting all to vote.

Address questions about the web site and other voting issues to:

Mother, daughter rescued at Topsail Beach

LCpl. Erik Sutherland Svihla
Globe staff

On a simple trip to the beach, one may expect the "normal" activities of sunbathing, swimming, or just enjoying the concept of being away from work. However, does one expect riptides, drowning, or being swept out to sea? For Penny Kilcoyne and her daughter Candice, these experiences and the presence of imminent danger were almost a reality when they were caught in a outgoing current during a visit to Topsail Beach, NC, over the Labor Day holiday weekend.

But thanks to the actions of SSgt. Michael Robertson, Electronics Maintenance Co., and friend Sharon Curlee, who submitted themselves to the unseen danger of the swift current, and were able to safely retrieve Kilcoyne and her daughter and bring them to shore.

According to Kilcoyne, the whole ordeal started harmlessly. "Mike (Robertson) mentioned that he was going to take his kids to the beach, and he asked if Candice and I wanted to come along. I said sure. We hadn't been to the beach yet, and it sounded like fun," she said.

It was fun until they got into the water, according to Kilcoyne. "We had been laying out in the sun for a couple of hours, and then Mike said 'Come on, let's get out in the water.' So I got brave enough to go in. Candice had a little rubber raft that she wasn't using, so I took it and was just floating around out there for about an hour or so, not paying attention to anything," she said.

The trouble began, said Kilcoyne, when Candice noticed that her mother was floating out to sea. "All of a sudden Candice turns around and looks at me and she's panicked. She says 'I'll help you, mom, I'll help you!'"

According to Kilcoyne, even at her daughter's alarm, she still did not believe she was in any danger. "I just looked at her funny and wondered what the problem was. Then she turns around to yell at Mike, but he was playing with his kids and didn't hear her, so she swims out to me and says 'Mommy you're going out,'" she said.

According to Robertson, from his standpoint Kilcoyne and her daughter's situation was incredibly dangerous. "We were in a sandbar that was in the shape of a horseshoe. The water that comes in towards shore has to find a way out, and in some places it comes out with force. I was on one side of the horseshoe with my kids, and I turned and saw that Penny and Candice were going out to sea. To me, it looked like they were on a towrope with a boat. It was that fast," he said.

According to Robertson, he didn't even have to think about what to do next. "I'm a WSQ (water survival qualified) swimmer in the Marine Corps, and I understood what was going on, so I got out into the ripcurrent and reached them pretty fast. I went under the water to see if I could plant my feet and push the raft to shore, but I couldn't touch the bottom," he said.

Robertson said he realized that he was going to need some help in getting them to shore. "I knew my friend Sharon Curlee was up on shore, and she's a pretty good swimmer, so I waved her out. She grabbed Candice and after that we traversed the current and made it to shore," he said.

For Kilcoyne, the sheer power and danger of her situation was overwhelming. "Before Mike swam out to us I had tried to swim back. I started swimming, and I wasn't going anywhere. I just kept thinking, I'm in big trouble, I'm in so much trouble," she said.

After the ordeal, it took a little while to come to terms with what happened, Kilcoyne said. "I must have sat on the beach a good hour and a half after that. I was in shock, and I just couldn't believe how unaware I was of the whole thing," she said.

According to Kilcoyne, she has learned a valuable lesson. "I really had no idea how powerful water actually is, and I have a total new respect for it. I'm just glad that Mike and Sharon were there."

MARINE MAIL:

Jungle hat could save your skin

The following Marine Mail was submitted by Cmdr. David Scott, a Navy medical officer assigned in support of Marine Forces Reserve:

Dear Sir,

I am a Navy medical officer supporting a USMCR Unit. I have been concerned about the frequent occurrence of sunburn among Marines in the field. While sharp in appearance for garrison wear, the current utility cover offers very limited protection for the neck and sides of the face. The desert camouflage uniform has a good sun hat. Ideally, however, the brim should be wider. There is also a woodland camo sun hat, but it is not currently authorized for Marine Corps use.

With the rising incidence of skin cancer (and death from skin cancer), I see this as a safety issue and respectfully request that wear of the sun hat while in the field be examined as an optional item when appropriate.

Cmdr. David Scott

The following response was sent by K.J. Williamson, Secretary-Recorder, Permanent Marine Corps Uniform Board:

The Marine Corps Uniform Board is responding to your Marine Mail inquiry pertaining to the availability of a sun hat.

The Uniform Board shares your concern for protecting Marines from prolonged exposure to the sun. However, development of a bush hat or jungle cover is not required. There are olive green as well as woodland camouflage sun hats that are of the same pattern as the desert sun hat with the brim all the way around. Both the olive green and woodland hats are organizational property that can be issued for training in extreme climates. These are most commonly used in Panama and other areas known for the extremely hot sun.

In the past, CMC has stated that the use of the floppy sun hat is not meant for everyday events (like in garrison). These hats were suggested by folks at Camp Lejeune during the early 1980's but were discouraged by CMC at that time. With the continuing education that the public is getting on the dangers of the sun and sunburns, it is a commander's call if he wants these types of hats worn on particular training occasions. In addition, there is also a green bandanna available as organizational property to help cover and protect the neck. Any Marine can also request sunblock from the corpsmen when he/she knows they'll be out in the hot sun for a prolonged period.

K.J. Williamson

Divers close to ending role in TWA probe

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. — The Navy is nearly ready to pack up its scuba gear and underwater robots, leaving the mystery of a Flight 800 to an investigative army using a solution with microscopes and computers.

"It's definitely the beginning of a new use once we get all the pieces up from the ocean," said FBI Assistant Director James Kallstrom, the agency's lead investigator.

Monday, the aircraft hangar in Calverton contained more than 90 percent of the pieces of the Boeing 747, which exploded July 17, killing all 230 aboard. Authorities do not know whether a bomb, missile malfunction caused the explosion.

U.S. begins training Bosnian army troops

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Retired U.S. Army officers launched a training program Monday for Bosnian soldiers as part of an American military aid program to the Muslim-Croat Federation.

"Two brigades began their training today," said Joseph Allred, a spokesman for the "train and equip" program funded by the United States.

A brigade in the southwest town of Zastar and another in the Sarajevo suburb of Ilidza were the first to enter a 12-week training course, said Allred.

A team of 170 retired U.S. officers, from a private firm MPRI, based in Alexandria, La., has been hired to conduct the training program designed to strengthen the federation military's "defensive needs," said Allred, himself of MPRI.

Seoul leaders warn war is possible

SEOUL — South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and the nation's top political leaders have warned North Korea that any further provocations will be met with "stern punishment" and could lead to "all-out war."

Presidential spokesman Yoon Yeojoon said the warning came after a meeting Monday among Kim, major opposition political party leaders Kim Dasung and Kim Jong-pil and ruling party Chairman Lee Hong-koo at the Blue House, the presidential mansion.

Sources within Kim Dae-jung's National Congress for New Politics quoted the president as saying the military appears to be exercising control over the North's de facto leader, Kim Jong Il, and that in a "worst case, we will have to resolve to go to war."

4. 200 bodies found at site in Croatia

ZAGREB, Croatia — U.N. investigators have found 200 bodies in a mass grave in eastern Croatia believed to contain remains of hospital patients executed after Serb forces seized the region in 1991.

A spokesman for the U.N. transitional authority in Eastern Slavonia, a Serb-held enclave due to revert to Croatian government rule next year, said the bodies had been shipped to Zagreb for forensic examination.

They were unearthed in a field a few miles south of Vukovar, the main town in the enclave of Eastern Slavonia captured by separatist Croatian Serbs backed by Yugoslavian army forces. Prosecutors for the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague believe the Ovchara mass grave held the remains of 160 or more Croat hospital patients removed from Vukovar after the town's fall to Serb besiegers.

Consumers' Corner: Secrets of avoiding consumer rip offs

Every year, servicemembers and their dependents are ripped off in the Jacksonville area by liars and thieves who call themselves businessmen. In the majority of these cases, the victims are young troops, especially the "clever" ones who think consumer education is for someone else and not for them. Most often, the problems arise with complex contracts such as insurance, warranties, financing, leases and long-term purchases. Most often, the problems arise with businesses whose ads and sales techniques are specifically designed to attract young men and women of lesser economic means.

The Consolidated Legal Assistance Office (CLAO) is sometimes asked by command representatives to provide the inside scoop on tricks to look out for and businesses to avoid; the great secret information that will prevent widespread consumer victimization. My office is happy to comply, providing preventative law briefs about off-limits establishments, specific deceptive practices, and consumer rights. But the fact of the matter is, a few common sense rules will go much further in reducing the number of consumer casualties if people would just take the time and effort to follow them.

Here then, are the "secrets" of avoiding the consumer scams:

Take your time! Make a promise not to sign anything immediately after hearing the salesman's pitch. Think about it. Come back later if you want to, but be sure to walk out that door! If the salesman tells you that your "great deal" will disappear unless you grab it right now, that's a good sign you shouldn't do business with him. What he's really telling you is that if you take the time to think it through, you'll probably say no.

Shop around! There are plenty of car dealerships, department stores and furniture warehouses around Jacksonville. There are also plenty of insurance companies, banks and lending institutions other than the one that happens to be co-located with the realtor's or car dealer's sales office.

Remember that the salesman's puffing means nothing! The salesman's puffing, his boasting about his company and his product, his verbal promises about price and quality, means nothing. Your only agreement is written down in the contract. Most of the time, verbal promises aren't worth the paper they're written on.

Read the contract, especially the fine print! In case after case, Marines get into trouble when they fail to read the contract — all of it. Remember that in both advertisements and contracts, the big print gives and the small print takes away. (Why do you think they make it so small?) The big print, the gaudy ads and the salesman's pitch, all tell you one thing, inducing you to buy, but the microscopic, unintelligible legalese says something else entirely different. Unfortunately, in many cases, Marines not only fail to read the entire contract, but they compound the error by certifying that they did!

Don't sign anything you don't understand! Precisely the kinds of contracts that are hardest to understand are the one most likely to cause troubles, for example: insurance, warranties and financing of long-term purchases. Financing contracts in particular are likely to contain some very harsh, anti-consumer language.

Get your legal advice from a lawyer! Not the "barracks lawyer," not your First Sergeant and definitely not the seller. Many, maybe even most, consumers rely on the seller's explanation of the contract. Remember that the terms realtor, broker, agent, and dealer are just fancy names for different kinds of salesmen. Your best interests are not their priority, making a sale is. Even if they don't deliberately lie, they won't go out of their way to point out negative aspects of their service. Besides, there's no guarantee that sellers even know what the fine print means. Ask questions, listen to what sellers and others say, then take the unsigned contract to CLAO to find out what it really means. If the seller refuses to let you take the contract home for examination, you probably want nothing to do with him.

Get your legal advice early! Some consumer remedies have a relatively short fuse; you need to take advantage quickly or they're gone forever. Sometimes there are special rules about how you are required to complain.

Further, besides helping your own case, alerting CLAO early to unfair and deceptive practice may prevent others from being similarly victimized and may assist military and civilian law enforcement authorities in taking official action.

Be extremely careful about access to your financial information! Whenever possible, avoid giving out your credit card or bank account numbers or authorization to debit your account. Be wary of the fly-by-night operation that seems so eager to get you to start an allotment. Never give out a credit card number to someone who calls you on the phone; you have no idea who the caller is. Be extremely careful about any deal in which the seller promises not only to give you a great product, but also promises that you'll get a credit card. You may wind up with no merchandise and a credit card bill.

If it's too good to be true, it probably is!! Many people who are ripped off realize in their guts that there's something fishy going on, but sign up anyway for that "free" vacation, the "guaranteed" gold card or the "can't miss" investment. These victims think that since they can't figure out the seller's advertising trick, the deal must be OK. Nothing could be further from the truth. Let's face it, what is the likelihood that some company you never heard of is giving away cars and vacations to you and a hundred other people in the neighborhood?

Dental assistant volunteers needed

Learn what it takes and gain valuable experience in the field of dental assisting. American Red Cross volunteers are needed in the dental clinics aboard Camp Lejeune. Coastal Carolina Community College will be offering the three necessary classes to start your training ($35 per class). After these 64 hours of classroom training, you will be expected to contribute 350 hours of clinical training at base dental clinics. Upon successful completion of the program, you will receive a certificate of recognition from 2d Dental Battalion/Naval Dental Center, Camp Lejeune and a certificate of completion from the American Red Cross.

Mothers' group meets

The New Parent Support Program is scheduling a Mothers' Group to meet on Thursdays from 10-11 a.m.

The purpose of the group is to learn and practice self-esteem.

Any person who is active duty or a family member of an active duty member is invited.

For more information and to sign up for the meetings, please call the New Parent Support Group at 451-5286 or 451-2852.

Calling all cookbook collectors

The American Red Cross is in the process of collecting recipes for the ARC cookbook entitled "Cammie Cuisine—Life After MREs."

If you or your club are interested in submitting recipes, no more than five per person please, and/or reserving a copy, please stop by the ARC, Bldg. 14, Main Service Road, to pick up the necessary forms.

Attention current Red Cross volunteers

The American Red Cross volunteer office is currently getting a list together of Red Cross volunteers who would like to expand their service and time to upcoming ARC special events and projects, such as family days, appreciation days, health fairs and more.

If interested, contact Karen Lewis at 451-2173 ext 204.

Total Quality Month celebrated

The Marine Corps Base Total Quality Committee presents Lanny Bassham Oct. 24 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Base Theater. Bassham is the author of the book, With Winning In Mind. He is also an Olympic gold medalist in rifle shooting.

Bassham will sign books after his speech in the lobby of the Base Theater. Copies of his book will be available for $12.95.

Using God to develop virtues, values

By Chaplain
R. A. Soutiere

Last week, we reflected on our need to develop good, personal moral characteristics, that is, virtues, if we need to be able to restore and support values in our families, our communities and our nation. Virtues necessarily precede values. Historically, virtues have their roots in religion. Virtue attempts to teach virtues and develop values exclusive of the religious reference will fail.

In our "heart of hearts" we know that we cannot achieve the quality of life that we all want, without possessing and living commonly shared virtues. We know from centuries of human history and experience that the institution which does not live on commonly shared values will suffer varying degrees of chaos, that disorder, moral decay, confusion and ultimately, dissolution. Once fragmented, those institutions of family, community and nation were able to be restored only when they have been able to go back to their religious roots - God as they knew him through Revelation and Sacred Scripture.

By turning to their religious traditions and sacred writings, people have regained the wisdom they needed for values clarification and the way to reconstruct themselves. For example, we can obtain some excellent advice by reading an excerpt from a Christian text, the second letter of Paul to Timothy, chapter three, verses 14 to 17:

"You, for your part, must remain faithful to what you have learned and believed because you know who your teachers were. Likewise, from your infancy you have known the Sacred Scriptures, the source of the wisdom which through faith in Jesus Christ leads to salvation. All scripture is inspired of God and is useful for teaching—for reproof, correction, and training in holiness so that the man of God may be fully competent and equipped for every kind of work."

Since God is the Creator of humankind, who better than God knows what virtues and values humans need to develop in order to achieve happy, harmonious, peaceful and productive lives in this world? Clearly there is a need to have religion, that is, a personal relationship with God, as the first and fundamental value in life. As St. Paul has said, God is the authentic teacher and source of the wisdom required for us to acquire, develop and establish by order of importance those virtues and values which give meaning, purpose and direction to our lives.

The value of life itself, in all of its stages, must be accepted as a primary value. The institutions of marriage, family, community, and nation are required values. Liberty, freedom, education, democracy, law and order, and a strong military, are necessary civil values which support and enable the development of the moral and religious values which we need in our pursuit of happiness.

In these times of fragmentation and confusion we are well advised to spend our resources of time, energy and wealth on programs which include religion as an intrinsic and necessary element in any attempts to restore values to our various institutions.

Coastal Carolina Community College helps student fulfill lifelong dream

Local Navy dental technician becomes dental hygienist

Kirsten Mosley

Staff Writer, Coastal Carolina Community College

When Petty Officer 2nd Class Jennifer Prince joined the Navy eight years ago, she had one desire — to be a dental hygienist. But this wasn't an option for an enlisted person. So when the Navy selected her, as part of a worldwide pilot program, to join Coastal Carolina Community College's dental hygiene program and still work for the Navy, she was elated.

"This is something I've been waiting for since I joined the Navy," said Prince, who will earn an associate's degree in applied science. "It's like a dream come true. I have always wanted to be a hygienist."

Over the years, Prince considered whether she should stay in the Navy, or leave the Navy to get her associate's degree and become a dental hygienist. "I love my Naval career and I didn't want to have to leave the Navy to pursue school," she said. "I've always hoped that one day I could do both. I didn't want to have to make a choice because I couldn't determine which was more important. It's not every day that you see opportunities like this in the Navy."

Now the Navy is not only sending her to school, but it is paying her tuition and books. After she gets her degree, Prince will owe the Navy three-year payback.

Coastal Carolina Community College and the Navy developed a partnership several years ago whereby the Navy provided the dental facilities for Coastal students to use during clinical training, the college provided the instructors, and the Marines and Sailors received dental hygiene services from students in the program. Coastal increased its enrollment to accommodate Prince and future dental technicians, aspiring to become dental hygienists in the new formal training program.

The purpose of training technicians to become hygienists is to develop active-duty healthcare providers who can deliver dental hygienist care aboard ships, overseas, and in Navy and Marine facilities in the U.S. According to Walter Milnichuk, former executive officer of 2d Dental Battalion, the Navy must overcome a 61 percent shortage of dental hygienists in the military. The 39 percent now onboard are civilian hygienists, and the cost of contracting the rest is prohibitive. In addition, the training gives dental technicians the opportunity to develop skills useful after their active-duty obligation and improves the quality of service they provide.

Second Marine Division alone has 15,000 Marines and only two hygienists, Prince said. "I see Marines who have gone two, three, or more years without a cleaning because they can't get in to see a hygienist."

To get this pilot program off the ground, the Navy had to evaluate whether it could afford to give the technicians time off during the day to go to school and whether they could pay part of the tuition. "We only had to dip into our coffer for the tuition, which is extremely reasonable by comparison nationwide," Milnichuk said. Their other options included officer commissioning of dental hygienists, which would have cost $71,000 annually, or contracting dental hygienists at the private level, which would cost $45,000 to $72,000 annually.

Admiral Michael Boorda was Chief of Naval Operations during the inception of the pilot program. "Boorda, who is prior enlisted, viewed this as a superior program," Milnichuk said. "There is no other program in the Navy that awards a degree to an enlisted person for training in a specified skill. That was a very large step. It's a tremendous paradigm shift because in the past, 'only officers' programs resulted in a degree."

"After the Washington folks visited Coastal they were absolutely impressed with the college," Milnichuk said. "We have opened it worldwide, not just for this command, to ensure that we get qualified people with the proper credentials. The program is building. I think it will grow."

Dental hygienists are also needed to ease the burden overseas. Milnichuk said that "in some arenas, you cannot, by law, contract dental hygienists. There are very few dental hygienists in Italy. We're quite vulnerable in dental hygiene requirements overseas."

The Navy currently has six billets for Coastal's dental hygienist program and 30 throughout the country. Sites such as Newport, R.I., Pensacola and Jacksonville, Fla., are targeted for similar programs. "The 30 a year still won't meet our requirements, but we can make up the difference with contracting," Milnichuk said.

Doris Black, division chairperson for Coastal's Dental and Applied Services, said, "We were honored that the Navy sought out Coastal's Dental Division to develop the program and to be the test site for the pilot program. I believe this has grown out of our help during Desert Storm. Our students and dental faculty helped the Navy process the troops before they sent them overseas. This put our dental program on the map. So far, our two Navy students, Katrina Sweezy and Jennifer Prince, are doing a great job."

Having Coastal students working on base has helped the Navy during the military downsizing. "The reward for us is free dental services," Milnichuk said. "Coastal students provide care for our active duty personnel. They provide dental assistance to our health care providers at little to no cost. There is a little bit of efficiency loss initially because they are students and still learning, but that is quickly overcome."

However, even with the college's extra manpower, the Navy Dental Corps is in desperate need of more hygienists. "We have a smaller force," Milnichuk said. "Every active member must be physically, militarily and medically ready."

Capt. Greg Kvaska, commanding officer of 2d Dental Battalion/Naval Dental, Cent Camp Lejeune, said, "The enthusiasm and opportunity generated by this program has resulted in a very competitive arena. The Navy has set high-qualifying requirements to ensure that only our best Sailors are selected."

"Dental hygiene is our most requested service and the success of this program will directly impact the Navy Dental Corps' ability to provide this care," Kvaska added. "The very special relationship that 2d Dental Battalion enjoys with Coastal has enabled this vision to become a reality."

Pointers On Pets

Antifreeze Safety Tips

(NAPS)—Protecting your pet from the hazards associated with ingesting antifreeze is easy, and imperative. When used and stored safely, and according to instructions, antifreeze does not pose problems for pets.

Here are some ways to protect your pets from harm:

1. When you change your antifreeze, keep your pet on a leash or indoors.
2. Drain old antifreeze into a bucket or container, and never drain where pets can get to it.
3. Be sure to clean up any spills thoroughly and immediately.
4. Keep unused antifreeze in original or well-marked containers and keep out of the reach of children, who might spill it near pets.
5. Store antifreeze away from where pets or other animals like raccoons can get into it.

Tom Lindberg, group product manager, Prestone Products Corporation, has several recommendations for pet owners. "Use a low toxicity antifreeze such as Prestone® LowTox®. Low toxicity antifreeze is made from propylene glycol (PG), instead of ethylene glycol (EG) and this provides an added margin of safety for both pets and wildlife. Prestone LowTox also offers excellent freeze-up and boil-over protection while ensuring outstanding rust and corrosion protection to all cooling system parts, including aluminum radiators."

African-American civil war memorial dedicated to soldiers

WASHINGTON — The African-American Civil War Memorial is desperately needed to honor thousands of former slaves who helped the Union Army and Navy win the war, but whose contributions were ignored for more than 130 years. So said retired Army Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff at memorial dedication ceremonies Sept. 13.

He also said the more than 185,000 names being inscribed on a series of walls are part of a proud legacy of people who had none of the opportunities young people have today. "Young people must understand and never violate the trust given them by those who sacrificed so many years ago," Powell said.

The dedication was part of a five-day tribute to African-American Civil War veterans. Organizers held an ecumenical service at the Lincoln Memorial featuring prayers reflecting the life and times of Civil War soldiers and songs sung by the "colored soldiers." A special sunrise tribute was held at Arlington National Cemetery amphitheater in recognition of more than 185,000 black troops and their white officers who served the Union.

The Army band and the Army and Navy color guards, and historical re-enactment groups specializing in African-American Civil War and Indian Wars units also participated. More than 2,000 uniformed re-enactors, military bands and college and high school marching bands paraded in salute to African-American Civil War veterans. The black troops were not allowed to march in the 1865 victory parade.

Powell joined District of Columbia officials, National Park Service representatives and descendants of black veterans at the ceremony. The African-American Civil War Memorial Freedom Foundation, Inc., is spearheading the effort to build the two-part, $2.5 million memorial. It will have a 10-foot-tall bronze statue of black Civil War soldiers and the families they left behind.

The monument, to be completed next year will be erected at 10th and U Streets in northwest Washington. A $5 million family heritage and visitor's center is being built nearby that will feature historical photographs highlighting the contributions of African Americans to American history.

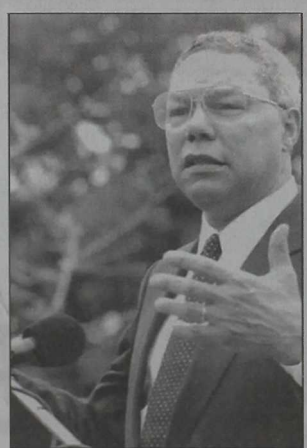

Serving in the military shows African Americans were "willing to die for this country — die for the dream upon which this country was founded," Powell noted. "Whether it was in Colonial times, Revolutionary War, War of 1812, black men were always there ready to serve."

But, Powell added, the great challenge came in the Civil War. "Confederate Gen. Howell Cobb from Georgia heard that Confederate President Jefferson Davis might be enlisting black men to serve in the Confederacy. The general wrote a letter to Davis and said, 'Don't do it!'"

"Use the Negroes for the purposes of cooking, digging, chopping and such. But don't arm them. Don't give them weapons. Don't make soldiers of Negroes."

Powell quoted Cobb as saying, "The day you make soldiers of Negroes is the beginning of the end of our revolution. If slaves would make Retired Army Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the African-American Civil War Memorial is desperately needed to honor thousands of former slaves who helped the Union Army and Navy win the war. More than 30,000 blacks served in the integrated Union Navy, with 147,000 African Americans serving in the Union Army.

fought to make sure the Union enlisted Negroes in the cause of freedom.

"Men of Color, to Arms!" Douglass' words screamed across newspaper pages in a stirring editorial. He wrote: "For once let the black man get upon his person the brass letters 'U.S.' Let him get an eagle on his button, a musket on his shoulder, bullets in his pocket. Make him a soldier of the nation. Let him serve. Let him sacrifice. Let him shed his blood with his white brother. Do all that, and then there is no power on Earth which can deny that he has earned the right to citizenship in the United States of America."

More than 185,000 blacks responded, and almost 40,000 were killed or wounded. But they helped preserve the Union and end slavery, Powell noted.

"There was no parade for those black soldiers, not withstanding their sacrifice," he said. "It took another 100 years for the civil rights revolution to come along and remove the legal vestiges of second-class citizenship."

Powell said the struggle isn't over. "We know we've made great progress, and it's especially fitting that it's within the military that we have seen the greatest progress. It's within the military that we see the model for the kind of America we want to see in all of our institutions throughout this country."

"When I was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, I had paintings of black Civil War and Buffalo Soldiers on the walls in my Pentagon office. They were a little bit of affirmative action. No one had those paintings up before!" Powell drew loud applause for these remarks.

"When foreign visitors came into my office, I wanted them to see those paintings and be curious," he said. "I wanted them to know how far we've come as a nation and what a great nation this is that can make such progress. But in order to know how important that progress is, you have to know how far we've come."

The paintings were also a reminder of whose shoulders he stood on to reach the highest position in the armed forces, the former chairman noted. "Every day I sat at my desk and worried about matters of war and peace, I could look up and see those black predecessors of mine — men who might have been chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in their time if ... permitted," he said.

"As I looked at them, I wanted to make sure I had a daily reminder in my life of how far we'd come," Powell said.

"I would never forget that I didn't get into that office simply on the basis of my own performance, but on the basis of the sacrifice of those African-American heroes who went before me."

"This memorial links us to our past," Powell emphasized. "It re-ers our history for all to see. A rible gap will be filled in the liv families whose ancestor's names be inscribed on this monument. monument that will rise here wi a reminder that we have a his With our blood, we earned our right. And we will not rest until too, enjoy the God-given inal rights of live, liberty and the pu of happiness that we deserve."

Computer-simulated scenarios help hone counteraction skills

Exercise Fuerzas Unidas Counterdrug (Riverine) 96

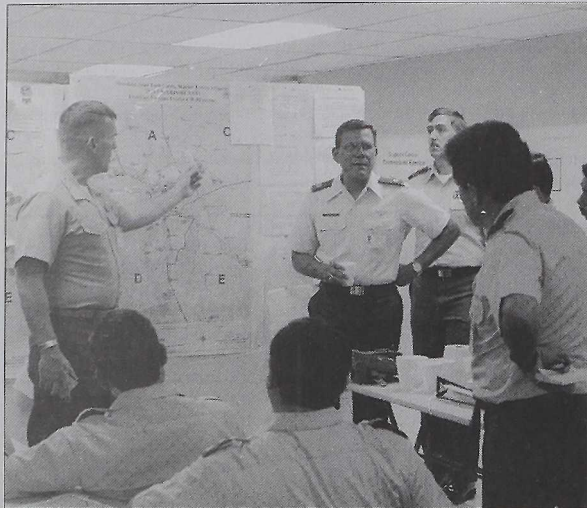

Cpl. Jonathan D. Cress
Globe staff

PANAMA CITY - Civilian and military members from Bolivia, Ecuador, Peru, the United States of America and Venezuela, participating in Exercise Fuerzas Unidas Counterdrug (Riverine) 96 (FU-CD 96), received training on and conducted a new computer-simulated scenario, Sept. 11-26.

The simulation was created by the Joint Warfighting Center (JWC) and a task group from the Standing Joint Task Force Headquarters (SJTTF), U.S. Marine Forces South. They began by creating a synthetic environment or region, in which they inverted a map of Thailand, and divided it into five countries. Next, they created a fictitious history in order to provide a core for the scenario and intelligence for the participants conducting it. Each participant nation was assigned a fictitious country with its own headquarters element that was required to operate within its own borders. Throughout the scenario, each country encountered realistic problems that might have hindered an actual operation. Examples of some possible problems during the scenario were: border crossing violations, forces being cut off from supplies, human rights violations, refugee situations and water decontamination.

"What we are trying to do is get them to focus on a common regional problem," said William Welsh III, representative of the JWC. "This was a very sophisticated challenge that we had to meet collectively in creating the three-day simulation of carefully choreographed events."

For the first week, participants received training in preparation for the simulation-scenario that would occur the following week. The training consisted of basic orientation of the simulation site, classes on the different agencies within the site and instruction on the rules of the scenario. At the end of the week, participants were allowed to test their knowledge on a trial scenario.

The second phase of FU-CD 96 began the simulated portion of the exercise. The simulation consisted of eight different core events. After being given the original tasks the simulated countries conducted their counteractions. Some examples were: a narco-guerrilla attack that also destroyed an outpost in an adjacent country, one country announced a major drug sweep pushing guerrillas across its border, and a helicopter crashed on the opposite side of its country's border making each incident a regional matter. After being hit with new problems, the groups engaged in discussion to assess and evaluate the situation to find the most appropriate response.

According to Lt. Col. John J. Jackson, SJTTF, Scenario Manager for FU-

CD 96, the purpose of the simulation is to make the countries work together specifically in dealing with regional matters. Each group is encouraged to use all available resources that it has. To include: communication by secure phone, radio or E-mail, maps, flip charts and computers for any administrative function they may provide.

The computers used for the simulation provided a general level of narco-guerrilla activity throughout the dense jungle, depicted on the maps, of the artificial region that was created for the exercise. They were also used to obtain exact coordinates of cross-border violations, helicopter crashes and the location of guerrilla forces.

"We are focused on regional co-operation and thus far it has worked brilliantly," said Jackson.

The exercise ended in a closing ceremony Sept. 26 at the simulation site aboard Albrook Air Force Station.

PFC Ralph E. Dias
Vietnam

Private First Class Ralph E. Dias was born July 15, 1950, at Shelocta, Indiana County, Pa.

While serving as a member of 3d Platoon, Company D, 1st Marine Division (Reinforced) in the Khe Son Mountains, Republic of Vietnam, Nov. 12, 1969, as a member of a reaction force which was pinned down by enemy fire while assisting a platoon in the same circumstance, Dias, observing that both units were sustaining casualties, initiated an aggressive assault against an enemy machine gun bunker which was the principal source of hostile fire. Severely wounded by enemy snipers while charging across the open area, he pulled himself to the shelter of a nearby rock. Braving enemy fire for a second time, Dias was again wounded. Unable to walk, he crawled 15 meters to the protection of a rock located near his objective and, repeatedly exposing himself to intense hostile fire, unsuccessfully threw several handgrenades at the machine gun emplacement. Still determined to destroy the emplacement, Dias again moved into the open and was wounded a third time by sniper fire. As he threw a last grenade, which destroyed the enemy position, he was mortally wounded by another enemy round. Dias' indomitable courage, dynamic initiative, and selfless devotion to duty upheld the highest tradition of the Marine Corps and the U.S. Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life in the service to his country.

LCpl. Miguel Keith
Vietnam

Lance Corporal Keith was born June 2, 1951, in San Antonio, Texas.

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty while serving as a machinegunner with Combined Action Platoon 1-3-2, III Marine Amphibious Force, in Quang Ngai Province, May 8, 1970. During the early morning, Keith was seriously wounded when his platoon was subjected to heavy ground attack by a greatly outnumbering enemy force. Despite his painful wounds, he ran across the fire swept terrain to check the security of vital defensive positions and then, while completely exposed to view, proceeded to deliver a hail of devastating machinegun fire against the enemy. Determined to stop five of the enemy soldiers approaching the command post, he rushed forward, firing as he advanced. He succeeded in dispersing three of the attackers and in dispersing the remaining two. At this point, a grenade detonated near Keith knocking him to the ground and inflicting further severe wounds. Fighting pain and weakness from loss of blood, he again braved the concentrated hostile fire to charge an estimated 25 enemy soldiers who were massing for attack. The vigor of his assault and his well-placed fire eliminated four of the enemy soldiers while the remainder fled for cover. During this valiant effort, he was mortally wounded by an enemy soldier. By his courageous and inspiring performance in the face of almost overwhelming odds, Keith contributed in large measure to the success of his platoon in routing a numerically superior enemy force, and upheld the finest traditions of the Marine Corps and of the U.S. Naval Service.

In 1939, the Montgomery Ward department store in Chicago sought something novel for its Santa Claus to distribute to parents and children. Robert May, an advertising copywriter for the store, suggested an illustrated poem, printed in a booklet, that families would want to save and reread each holiday season. May conceived the idea of a shiny-nosed reindeer, Rudolf the Red-Nosed reindeer. That Christmas of 1939, 2.4 million copies of the "Rudolf" booklet were handed out from Montgomery Ward stores across the country.

Nurse-Midwives promote women's health

Cpl. Kimberly Everson

National Nurse-Midwife week is running Oct. 7 through 14 in appreciation of nurse-midwives.

National Nurse-Midwife week promotes women's health and the services that nurse-midwives provide.

"Nurse-midwifery is a growing profession. Currently there are about 6,000 nurse-midwives and we hope that by the year 2000 there will be 10,000," said Lt. Cmdr. Karen A. Rushford.

Certified nurse-midwives (CNM), are registered nurses who have graduated from advanced education programs that are certified by the American College of Nurse-Midwives. Additionally the CNMs must pass national certification examination and meet requirements set by state health agencies. CNMs are trained in prenatal, postpartum, normal newborn care and routine gynecological care.

Certified nurse-midwives deal with women who have normal pregnancies, and should problems occur, they consult with an obstetrician.

"We work with obstetricians in case of any complications during a pregnancy," said Rushford.

Certified nurse midwives educate the women on how to trust their bodies to deliver healthy babies. They give women more options on how the delivery will be performed and involve both parents as much as possible.

"Our philosophy is in patient education. We give the patient more choices on comfort measures during delivery," said Rushford.

The nurse-midwife program has been a part of the naval hospital since 1991. The program started with two CNMs and now has grown to six. There are about 100 deliveries at the hospital each month and CNMs deliver 65 percent to 75 percent of them.

Deliveries are not the only thing that CNMs participate in. They also do annual pap smears and birth-control exams at Camp Johnson, Camp Geiger and Courthouse Bay.

The CNMs also participated in the Women's Health Fair at New River Air Station Oct. 5.

"We want to promote our services and allow patients to become familiar and comfortable with us because the six of us will be on station for the next two to three years," said Rushford.

Intranets

Latest technology allows companies to share information

Doug Gillert
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Unless you live under a rock, you've heard of the Internet and its graphical domain, the World Wide Web. You probably know about web browser software, and maybe you've spent a few or more hours "cruising the 'net.'"

If you're like me, you bookmark favorite sites for repeat visits. You've also discovered the joy of hypertext links -highlighted text that transports you to new, sometimes exotic Internet locales when you click on it. You know vast collections of data are a mouse-click away — and that the federal government, in particular, offers quick, free access to millions of volumes of information. But what else is the Internet good for besides information and entertainment? How can government put Internet tools to practical use?

"We need to move beyond web browsers, into the world of collaborative work," Vice President Al Gore wrote to members of the World Wide Web Federal Consortium last year. The consortium provides a forum for collaboration and information exchange among participating federal agencies. "The problems of governance are becoming increasingly complex and are going to demand new ways of linking people across organizational boundaries," Gore said.

A number of nonfederal agencies lead the way in developing new uses for the Internet. Welcome, then, to the latest Internet technology, intranets.

Intranets allow managers to reinvent internal operations and cut costs, according to John Huang, director of information technology initiatives for the National Performance Review. The U.S. Postal Service, General Electric and others are reaping huge benefits from using intranets throughout their organizations. Soon, Huang predicted, corporate intranet sites will outnumber internet sites 5 to 1.

Intranets are set up so only certain people can access them— employees, for example. Applications include employee benefits services, job listings, on-line technical information, collaborative research and discussion forums. Organizations that use intranets report greater productivity, better internal communication, higher worker satisfaction and reduced information management costs.

Like electronic mail before them, intranets will revolutionize internal communications. Netscape's Joe Freeman predicted, "Intranets work best for sharing information across departments," he said at the Federal Webmasters Workshop '96 Aug. 7-9, held at the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md. Intranets replace printed materials with electronic documents, Freeman explained. The difference is, instead of "pushing" these documents to employees (stuffing their in boxes), employees "pull" the information, as needed.

Companies can save huge amounts in printing and recycling costs by going electronic, he said. For example, by putting its employee newsletter on-line, General Electric cut printing costs by more than $240,000 a year and VISA eliminated 2 million daily documents. In addition, electronic forms make corporate data accessible and easy to manipulate. Netscape, for example, put all its employee benefits forms on-line.

Besides human resources activities, intranets can be used to improve business processes. NeXt Software helped the Postal Service set up a nationwide system to better manage 40,000 post offices handling more than 180 billion pieces of mail a year.

Beginning Oct. 1, the Postal Service will operate six automated regional service centers, each of which can handle queries from any area of the country, creating round-the-clock service. They'll offer information on postal rates, locations and operating hours of post offices, and track lost mail. Any post office will be able to access the same data base, so when Aunt Clara's fruitcake doesn't arrive for the holidays, the intranet will make finding the lost loaf a piece of cake.

The kinds of uses intranets provide aren't nonexistent in DoD. For instance, the Defense Logistics Agency (<http://www.worldwidehr.hq.dla.mil/>) lists job openings and accepts applications on-line. Several organizations provide web services to select audiences, including our own Military News Link (<http://www.dtic.mil/milnews/>), which connects to all military on-line news sites, but only for those who can tap into the restricted "mil" domain.

Our parent organization, American Forces Information Service (<http://www.dtic.mil/defenseinfo/afis/>), also uses electronic mail, and you can e-mail comments and questions concerning this column to djgille@afisgate.army.mil. I'd especially like to hear from intranet users willing to share technology and tips with other defense organizations. By sharing what we know, we'll all become a little less web-footed on the World Wide Web.

Editor's Note: — This is the second installment of www.huh?, an occasional series of columns on the World Wide Web.

K-9 unit ready for anti-terrorism role

Sgt. Lance M. Bacon
Globe staff

President Clinton's $1 billion anti-terrorism bill calls for the use of military working dogs to sniff out explosives at airports and high-risk locations. If that call comes to the Lejeune K-9 teams, they are more than ready to oblige. In fact, they've been taking a bite out of terrorist activity for quite some time.

Handler/dog teams have been deploying regularly from Camp Lejeune to assist federal officials and the Secret Service in explosive detection, and are more than capable of handling any additional tasks afforded by the bill, according to Sgt. Scott W. Becherer, kennel master.

"We've averaged about two assignments per month throughout the summer," Becherer said. "We'll usually get the tasking the night prior, and early the next morning the team is en route to the location."

In those assignments the teams have seen service in the Presidential campaign, national political conventions, the U.N.'s birthday celebration in New York City and the visit of Pope John Paul II.

To perform in such environments, dogs and handlers alike must pass an in-depth schooling process and retain certification every month. Dogs are trained to detect either five narcotics (narcotics detectors) or nine explosive materials (explosive detectors), and do so with a 95-percent accuracy, Becherer said.

"The dogs have to find the materials in any environment and under any conditions," the Troy, Ill., native said. "Additionally, the team must endure a variety of aggression and obedience training on nearly a daily basis. Training is a continuous process."

"(The dog and handler) have to know exactly how the other will react in any given situation," said Cpl. Jon D. Jerome, a K-9 handler. And he should know — he and his partner Tomek were recently called upon to serve at President Clinton's birthday celebration held at Radio City Music Hall.

"You need to build a rapport with your dog; you need to earn his respect. Once a dog respects you, he'll do anything for you," said Jerome, who hails from Detroit. "It could take as little as a week, or it could take as long as six or seven months, depending on the dog. Nevertheless, that relationship has to be gained. It is a relationship which stems beyond the relationship between Marines — you consider another Marine your brother and you watch each other's back, but there's still the question of whether he would take a bullet for you. With your dog, you know he will take a bullet for you. It's that kind of bond; you are the dog's whole life."

While the K-9 unit's 12 dogs and 13 handlers continue their day-to-day operations, the teams realize their chances to be used at a federal level looks to possibly increase. If so, the teams may have to put that unique relationship to the test.

"If the bill is passed we don't really know how we will be tasked, but if called upon, our teams are certified and ready," Becherer said. "You never know what any assignment may hold, but whatever the situation, these teams are ready and more than able to perform."

Aluminum In Our Lives

610 gallons x 25.7 mpg = 15,677 miles

(NAPS)—Here are some facts that should bring a smile or two to our nation's motorists. A steel car at the conventional weight of 3,200 pounds might be expected to get 22 miles per gallon of gasoline. That same car in aluminum has a weight reduction of 700 pounds, and would get 25.7 miles per gallon. That would mean that over the life of the aluminum car 610 gallons of fuel would be saved which would allow the car to go an extra 15,677 miles!

Environmentalists will smile at this one. Experts at Alcoa point out that cutting 700 pounds from a car's weight would also reduce the amount of emissions over the life of that car by 10,500 pounds!

GE Seeks Junior Military Officers

Challenges and opportunities

GE, an over 70 billion dollar global enterprise, is one of the world's largest public companies.

We are ranked #1 in market value worldwide and have 12 key businesses competing in a wide variety of industries. The fact that we are such a major player in a wide range of business sectors translates into unequalled opportunity for anyone joining our team.

Simply put, our financial strength, the diversity of our business, our global reach, our technology, our integrity, our commitment to innovation, our focus on quality - make us the best company on earth.

Who we're looking for

We have immediate opportunities for Junior Military Officers to join us in many functional areas including, but not limited to: Quality, Engineering, Field Service, Sourcing, Environmental Health & Safety, Marketing, and Finance.

Applicants must be skilled communicators with the ability to establish and maintain strong business relationships, and must possess the interest and potential to assume increased leadership responsibilities. Excellent organizational integration skills are essential. A four year college degree is required.

An open-minded attitude

Our "no limits" mindset positions us to find original solutions quickly. We see bureaucracy as the enemy - as well as anything else that slows the process or restricts/confines our people. We are open to solutions from someone down the hall or around the globe.

We're out to win

To achieve that objective will involve convincing ambitious, forward thinking "winners" to join our team - and supporting them not only with top-of-the-line resources but a "winning" set of values that releases creativity, encourages innovation, supports risk and delivers results. We are betting everything on our people. We give them what they need to get the job done and then get out of their way.

Your rewards

Please send your resume, indicating area of interest, salary history or salary requirements to: Camp Lejeune Job Fair #MM461, GE, via fax: 419-422-7580 or e-mail: resume@opportunities.ge.com by October 14 in order to be considered for interviews at the Career Fair. The fair will be held on October 23, 1996 at the Goettege Memorial Field House, Camp Lejeune, NC. Former JMOs currently working at GE will be available to answer your questions.

We bring good things to life.

Mail deadlines set for holidays

Cpl. J. J. Rodriguez
Globe staff

You need to mail a package to your family over the upcoming holidays, but you haven't a clue on when the best time to mail it is? Don't fear, the United States Postal Service has set up a schedule so that mail will arrive on time. The holiday season is the busiest time for postal workers. Mail shipments get bigger and bigger as the jolly times near.

During this time "everyone wants to send their loved ones a card, letter or package," said CWO2 Charles M. Sharpe, base postal operations officer.

The USPS offers several ways to send letters and packages to someone in the continental United States and overseas. The main post office and each military postal unit located throughout base can provide everyone with all the information and assistance needed, according to Sharpe.

The volume of mail coming in doubles. "Normally we get three trucks a day, but during the holidays we get six," Sharpe said. Most of the delays during this time of year are caused by people who don't wrap their packages correctly or use too big of a container, therefore taking up more space.

Another reason for delays in the mail system is caused by incorrect military addresses, that can be avoided by using the military, or to be more specific, the Marine Corps postal side of the house. According to Sharpe, when people use the civilian post offices, over 50 percent of the time they won't be able to verify the correct military zip codes and addresses, but when people use the postal services on base they can get better help with address verification. Last minute, or late package mailing, accounts for most of the congestion. Mailing packages early not only ensures that it will get there on time but it will save people money as well. Priority mail in CONUS, people find, is the option they have to take when short on time, and it's more expensive.

"The sooner you mail your package, the quicker it will get there," said Sharpe. "There is nothing like an early Christmas present."

People should think even further ahead when sending mail to friends or family members overseas. Currently it's taking 7-10 days for mail to arrive in Bosnia and during Christmas season the delay will increase. The bottom line for mail is if you want your package to get there on time and if you want to save money send it early, because like Sharpe said, "This is a case in which the early bird gets the worm."

The time table below is a projection based on a USPS study conducted last year. It's designed to give everyone an idea on when to send mail.

USO provides 'Home away from home'

LCpl. Kristofer E. Holly
Globe staff

"They are responsible for the safety of every American...Who will be responsible for them?" reads a United Service Organizations poster.

Since February 6, 1941, the USO has been supporting U.S. troops. Offering services around the world to more than 4.5 million servicemen and their families, the USO always provides a 'home away from home,' said retired Sgt. Maj. Matt Hardiman, executive director of the Jacksonville USO. "It's a place to relax."

Their services of the USO include convenient locations at airport centers, providing language translations and providing assistance with living arrangements, fleet centers offering recreational activities and currency conversions, family and community centers promoting intercultural understanding, orientation to new communities, programs helping servicemen leaving the armed forces and scholarships to the family members of military personnel.

Mobile canteens provide troops in conflict areas, exercise sites and remote locations with that "touch of home" by offering books, magazines, video and compact disc players and sometimes telephones.

Celebrity entertainment is another important part of USO services. Stars donate their time to entertain troops serving overseas.

One of the newest services offered is the USO-Gram. The service is officially known as USO Link, and it simplifies the process of ship-to-shore communication. It is designed to deliver electronic mail to personnel on ships at sea within hours. Family and friends statewide will be able to send messages via terminals installed at USO centers in Norfolk, Va., Jacksonville, N.C., and Jacksonville, Fla.

The local N.C. USO has shown a special gesture of its appreciation for Camp Lejeune Marines by welcoming home more, from deployment, than 75,000 of them since 1993, Hardiman said.

"We want to make them feel at home as soon as they hit the shore, and let them know we appreciate them," he said. "We're open all hours. We don't care if it's 2 a.m., we'll be here."

Another unique practice of the Jacksonville USO is its birthday cake give-aways. The USO calls different commands and asks for the names of the people with upcoming birthdays, then surprises that person with a cake on their special day.

The USO Service Wives Support Group is an organization within the USO that meets weekly for seminars and workshops. It's for all wives regardless of their husbands' rank or deployment status.

All of these services are provided free-of-charge. However the USO is not part of the federal government and receives no direct government funding. It relies on the support of the American public through individual and corporate donations, especially the United Way and the Combined Federal Campaign.

The CFC continues until Nov. 15, and the Jacksonville USO (code 7910) is one of many organizations you can designate on your donation form.

CFC drive starts

Navy Capt. Joseph P. Van Landingham, executive officer, Camp Lejeune Naval Hospital; Col. David C. Anderson, commanding officer, MCAS New River; Maj. Gen. Patrick G. Howard, commanding general, MCB Camp Lejeune; Maj. Gen. Ray L. Smith, deputy commanding general, II MEF; Lt. Gen. Charles E. Wilhelm, commander, MarForLant; Maj. Gen. Lawrence H. Livingston, commanding general, 2d Mar. Div.; Brig. Gen. (then Brig. Gen. select) Harold Mashburn, Jr., commanding general, 2d FSSG; Navy Capt. Gregory J. Kvaska, commanding officer, 2d Dental Bn.; and Lt. Col. Daniel L. McManus, executive officer, 2d SRIG, perform a sign-off for the Combined Federal Campaign that is running through Nov. 8. The CFC is a single fund-raising campaign that supports various national and international service agencies. During the campaign, contributions through allotment or payroll withholdings are encouraged.

LCpl. Kyle Reeves

Phillip Rowan made it to the finish line in a time of 1 hour, 10 minutes, 27 seconds to win the 13th annual Lejeune Half-Marathon Oct. 5 at Camp Lejeune.

Four hundred, fifty-six runners participated in what was the finale of the Grand Prix Series Events for 1996. All events lead up to the Marine Corps Marathon which is slated for Oct. 27.

Rowan took first prize for Overall Master finisher in the male category while Sarah Quimby's time of 1:24:49, earned her first prize for Overall finisher, female.

Both runners' times rank second for the course records. Des Proctor holds the record for fastest running time for Overall male runner at 1:05:43. Lori Robertson maintains her position with a time of 1:19:50.

The half-marathon began and finished at Russell Elementary School. Runners covered a 13.1-mile course on flat asphalt surface with a limited number of turns making it easier to run. Aid stations were set up every two miles to provide water and treat the injured.

At the end of the course, participants helped themselves to a meal and refreshments provided by Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

Awards were presented to 13 different age categories for male and female runners.

For many in this event, it was a preparation for the Marine Corps Marathon.

Connie Bodine ran the entire course at a time of 1:46 while pushing her eight-month-old and 3-year-old children in a twin stroller.

"I enjoyed the run," said Bodine. "The weather conditions were good, and the participants made it fun."

This was her first time running in the half-marathon.

Bodine's children will accompany her when she runs in the Marine Corps Marathon as she attempt to cover the distance of 26.2 mile distance.

Others who will not compete in the marathon run just for the love of running.

Michael C. O'Brien, student, Marine Corps Engineer School, will not have the opportunity to compete in the Marine Corps Marathon as he is scheduled to leave for Okinawa, Japan two days before the marathon.

O'Brien started the run five minutes after the race began, completing a run time of 2:13:14.

"I did pretty good; considering I was late," said O'Brien. "I finished faster than I started out."

This wasn't the longest course for O'Brien. He ran last year in the Marine Corps Marathon while a basic journalism student at the Defense Information School Fort Mead, Md. and the Boston Marathon the year before.

On Oct. 19, a Grand Prix Awards Presentation will be held to award the top individuals and teams who have taken the lead most of the Grand Prix Events for this year.

MC Boxing Team triumphs at dual meet

Cpl. Jonathan D. Cress

The U. S. Marine Corps Boxing team triumphed 5-2 at a dual meet in Darby, Pa., bringing home five individual trophies, one team trophy and the outstanding boxer award.

The community of Darby, a suburb of Philadelphia, and the local Marine Corps recruiters provided a large, enthusiastic crowd.

Larry Barnes won at the 132-pound weight class; Steven Stokes won at 147 pounds; Edgar King won at 165 pounds; Paul Hayes won at 178 pounds; Jason Brown won at Heavyweight; Antonio Rodriguez lost at 119 pounds and Mathew Plake lost at 126 pounds. Barnes was awarded the outstanding boxer award for the meet.

"The entire meet was well-contested and we had to earn every bout," said Roosevelt Sanders, coach for the Marine Corps Boxing Team.

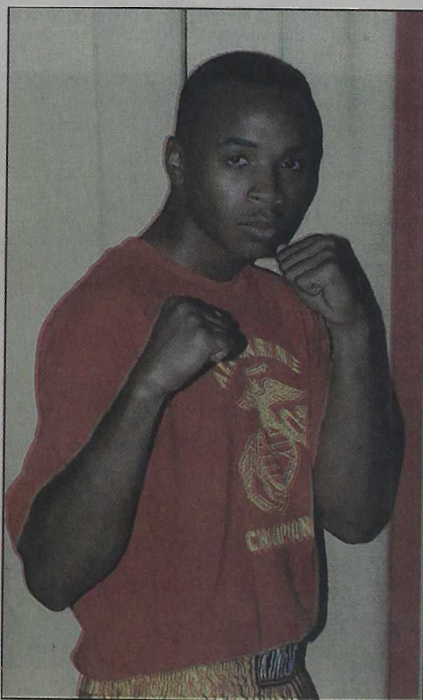

Throughout the summer the team didn't have many meets or tournaments so they concentrated on training. Now that the fall is in full swing they have a busy schedule ahead. Next week they will be away at the Police Athletic League tournament in Palm Bay, Fla., which is a national tournament and the boxers, depending on how well they do, can be nationally rated.

The team is also in preparation for the All-Marine Championship which takes place the first week in December.

"I would like to strongly say that these boxers are Marines and they represent the Corps. Along with our boxing we maintain our Marine Corps training," said Sanders. "We are a proud bunch and we work hard. Most of all we know that we are Marines first."

From The Sidelines

LCpl. Kimberly Everson
Globe Staff

I don't claim to know much about baseball or the politics that surround it, but I think that Major League Baseball's decision to lift Roberto Alomar's suspension was completely unethical.

If baseball is America's favorite pastime, it should be setting the standards for sportsmanship. When Alomar spit in John Hirschbeck's face, after being ejected from the game, he showed poor sportsmanship and a lack of maturity.

Spitting in a person's face must be one of the most degrading things a person can do to someone. And following that episode Alomar had the nerve to say that Hirschbeck has become bitter since his son died three years ago.

After Alomar's act of disrespect he only received a five-game suspension, and because he appealed they lifted the suspension until next season. While the game of baseball is healing from the players strike, they should be avoiding acts that will worsen its image. An act of this sort should have been dealt with swiftly and harshly to prevent more outbursts of this kind.

How does MLB justify lifting Alomar's suspension? Of course there was the written apology that included a $50,000 donation to the medical charity that researches the disease that took the life of Hirschbeck's son, but does Alomar's act of charity make up for the dehumanizing act of spitting in someone's face? Wouldn't an apology be expected even if the suspension was upheld?

So what is the real reason that MLB compromised its integrity?

Maybe MLB was looking at the figures. Perhaps because Alomar brings in money and fans, MLB chose to look beyond the immaturity that he displayed.

Whatever the reason, poor sportsmanship is not something that should be tolerated. Athletes are continuously in the public eye and should be expected to present themselves as mature adults. MLB's decision to allow Alomar to play shows that it is willing to put up with disrespectful behavior. Should further incidents like this occur and they are handled the same way, MLB could be compromising itself in a time when it could use positive public opinion.

Camp Lejeune Intramural league football game action

LSB, 14, 8th ESB, 16

On a cold and rainy night that showed no mercy from football gods, the padded warriors from Landing Support Battalion (LSB) and 8th Engineer Support Battalion (8th ESB) came to a face-off at Liversedge Field, Monday, in a game that would clearly be decided on by whoever could control the football.

On the second down of the first possession of the night, the 8th ESB quarterback launched a 72-yard touchdown pass to halfback Kendric Walker. The first and second quarters saw both teams march back and forth across the grid lines with many exciting moments. Fumbles and fumble recoveries seemed crucial, but only set the pace for the rest of the evening. There were moments when both teams seemed to gain the edge such as an interception by LSB's Rodney Moore and a fake punt for a first down conversion by 8th ESB. Even though 8th ESB had the lead of 14-0 at the half, it was evident that whoever had the overdrive in the second half would be the victor.

On through the third quarter, both teams struggled to move the ball successfully. At the end of the third, a blocked punt caused an LSB safety making the score 16-0.

After some motivation from their own sideline, LSB seemed to have made the decision that they had come to play football and started their drive after a forced fumble on a kick-off giving them good position near mid field.

LSB continued to move the ball and a 21-yard touchdown run by halfback Clarence Weeks followed by a two-point conversion put them on the scoreboard.

Late in the fourth quarter while deep in their own territory, 8th ESB had a blocked punt which set LSB in good position at the 15 yard line. Taking the situation under control, the LSB quarterback fired a short pass into halfback Tracy Sims for another six, leaving the balance of the game hanging on a two-point conversion. While the crowd on both sides of the field chanted through the pouring rain the ball was snapped and the LSB quarterback ran to left, then cut back right where he was met by a wall of maroon jerseys and stopped six yards short of the goal line. The 8th ESB defense had held off the rush and lead their team to the "W" column.

2d SRIG, 34, HqBn, 32

In a game of offenses it always comes down to, "Who wants it the most," at the end of the ball game. Such was the case when Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division met 2d Surveillance Reconnaissance Intelligence Group to toss the coin at Liversedge Field, Oct. 2 in an Intramural League football game with 2d SRIG coming away with the victory 34-32.

The first quarter ended with both teams tied at 6. A fumble recovery in the beginning of the second quarter sparked 57-yard touchdown run for HqBn quarterback, Randy Anderson. SRIG answered back with a touchdown and two-point conversion. Before the half ended both teams traded touchdowns again with SRIG ahead 26-20.

Throughout the second half HqBn maintained a drive on the road to comeback, scoring two more touchdowns and taking the lead. In the last 30 seconds of the game, HqBn was up 32-26, when the SRIG quarterback threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to a solo man in the endzone tying the score. Though the HqBn defense was pumped up, they couldn't stop the two-point conversion that gave SRIG the lead and the game.

WASHINGTON — Army tennis players chalked up wins in 30 matches to win team honors at the 1996 Armed Forces Tennis Championships, held Sept. 12-18 at Fort Eustis, Va.

The tournament was an Army invitational with the top finishers going to the Consil du Sport Militaire in Moscow Nov. 10-19.

Teams played head-to-head during the first three days of the competition, with 15 matches in five categories to compile a team score.

In singles play, competition consisted of four men's matches, two women's open, two men's junior veterans (ages 35-45) and two men's seniors (ages 45 and over).

Doubles competition included two men's open matches and one doubles match in the women's, junior veterans and seniors categories.

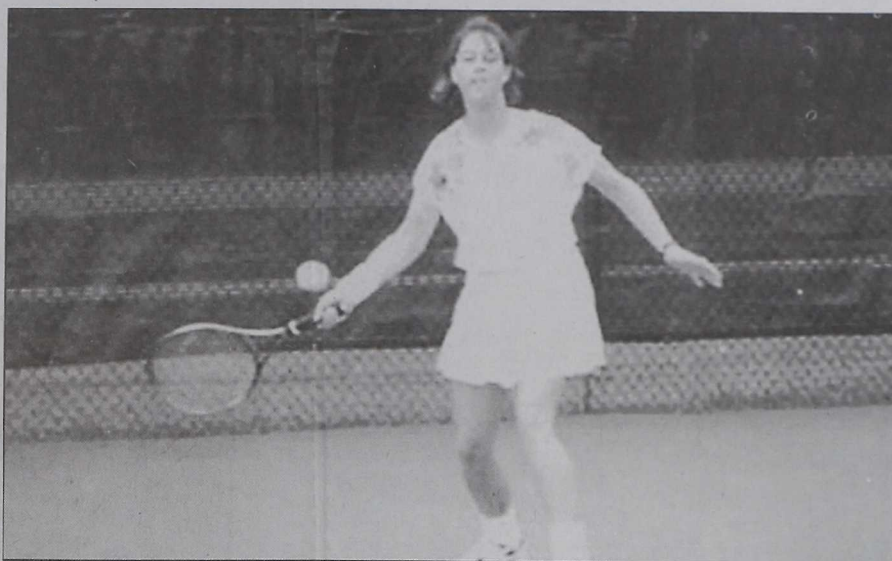

Army (2-0) took 12 of 15 matches against Navy in its 3-3 victory Sept. 13. It defeated Air Force 10-5 the following day to clinch the team title. Air Force (1-1) finished second, sweeping Navy (0-2) 15-0 in their head-to-head competition Sept. 12.

The Marine Corps did not field a team in the competition.

Players winning four matches included Army 2nd Lt. Kristin Argus (women's singles and doubles) and Spc. Jeffrey Wood (men's open singles and doubles) — both from Fort Hood, Texas.

Argus defeated Air Force's Capt. Kim Green (U.S. Air Force Academy, Colo.) and Navy Chief Petty Officer Caitlin Root (Norfolk Naval Base, Va.) for her singles wins.

She then teamed with two different partners in winning a pair of doubles matches.

Army 1st Lt. Michele Pauli returns service on her way to defending her Armed Forces Tennis Championships title. Pauli, assigned in Heidelberg, Germany, defeated Army 2nd Lt. Kristin Argus of Fort Hood, Texas, 6-2, 6-3 at the 1996 finals held Sept. 17 at Fort Eustis, Va.

Wood had no problems with Navy Petty Officer James Lowes (Norfolk), but needed three sets to defeat Air Force 2nd Lt. James Thrulby (Hanscom Air Force Base, Mass.). He then teamed with Capt. Chris Lowry (Schofield Barracks, Hawaii) for two doubles victories.

Army Lt. Col. Stanley Morris of Heidelberg, Germany, and Air Force Capt. Scott Corby of Warner-Robbins Air Force Base, Ga., also captured four wins each.

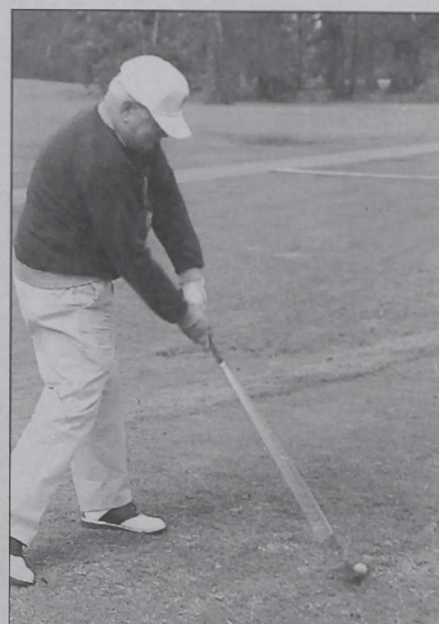

Corby won twice in men's open singles, then teamed with 2nd Lt. Jerry Ledzinski (Los Angeles Air Force Base) to win a pair of open doubles matches.

Morris, competing in men's senior competition, scored a pair of singles wins, then combined with Master Sgt. Robert Richards (Fort Myer, Va.) for his doubles victories.

Taking three wins in the team competition were Ledzinski, Air Force 1st Lt. Bruce Ybarra of Andrews Air Force Base, Md., Army 1st Lt. James Malakoff of Fort Hood and Army Sgt. Robert Beckvall of Fort Carson, Colo.

The armed forces tennis championships continued Sept. 15-18 at Fort Eustis with individual singles and doubles competition.

New River Officers Wives Club held its fifth annual golf scramble, Oct. 4 at Paradise Point Golf Course.

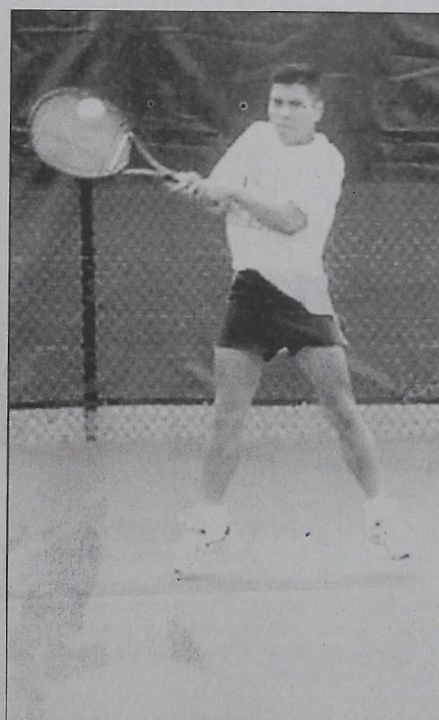

Marines from Hqs-26, HMM-461 and HMT 205 joined the New River OWC in its effort to raise money for Christmas Cheer.

"Any of the profits we make will go to Christmas Cheer, which benefits needy military families," said Laurie Turk, OWC member.

Golfers earned a chance for cash prizes on hole number 16. The prize for a hole-in-one was $2,500 while closest to the pin earned $500. The first place team was awarded $100, 2nd place $50, and 3rd place $30. Prizes were also awarded for women's and men's longest drive.

Following the scramble a drawing was held. The grand prize was two plane tickets for anywhere in the United States. Other prizes included tickets to Busch Gardens and gift certificates to various restaurants.

After the long day of golf the team which came out above the rest was the MAG-26 team, MGySgt. Bob Haugk, GySgt. Ed Adams, MGySgt. Mike Maynard and SSgt. Sam Pryor.

HALLOWEEN HINTS

Frighteningly Good Fun

(NAPS)—As you start thinking about buying a pumpkin, decorating the windows or getting goodies for trick-or-treaters, don't forget to pick up a ghoulishly great video. Here are a few hilarious videos to get your family into the Halloween spirit!

To ensure a spooktacular Halloween, bring home a hauntingly good video for your trick-or-treaters.

Children will have a howlingly good time with lovable Winnie the Pooh and his pals in Frankenpooh, three new frightfully fun videos to watch again and again.

Two new Alvin and the Chipmunks videos—Trick or Treason and Robomunk—explode with fun and, of course, music.

In Hocus Pocus, 17th century sister witches are awakened by unsuspecting pranksters in Salem, Mass., on Halloween night, casting a potent spell for comedy and chaos.

In Monster Bash the Goof Troop and those "quack ups" from DuckTales enjoy "Howl-arious" adventures.

Look for Disney's House of Happy Haunts video collection for these and other great videos from Walt Disney, Buena Vista, Jim Henson and Touchstone Home Video. The videos are priced between $12.99 and $19.99 and are sure to spook your kids into the Halloween spirit.

HALLOWEEN HINTS

Don't Be Spooked By Sugar

(NAPS)—One of the real pleasures of Halloween is collecting and indulging in trick-or-treat goodies, but some parents worry that doing so may cause their children to become "hyper."

Is there any scientific basis to this idea? Recent research, trying to find links between what children eat and how they behave, has found little connection between diet and behavior, outside of allergies.

In 1986, a panel of scientists on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's Sugars Task Force reviewed all the research on the subject and found no evidence that eating sugar contributed to behavior changes. Since then, numerous scientific studies, including recent research reported in the New England Journal of Medicine in 1994, have corroborated the FDA's findings.

Children do, indeed, tend to become excited when sweets are served at special occasions, such as birthdays and Halloween. This energetic behavior is believed by experts to result from the excitement of the occasion and anticipation that a high level of exuberant behavior will be tolerated.

Physicians point out that it's important to differentiate between true hyperactivity, a diagnosable syndrome recognized as Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and normally energetic adventurous children, who have no trouble controlling behavior when they need to.

ADHD affects between two to five percent of all school-age children and symptoms include restlessness, distractibility, impulsiveness and short attention-span. The precise causes are not known although recent studies suggest an inherited difference in brain metabolism.

The myth that sugar somehow leads to hyperactivity began in the early 1970s when Dr. Benjamin Feingold suggested hyperactive behavior could be caused by diet. Dozens of scientists have put Feingold's theories to the test, but found no supporting evidence.

True hyperactivity can be treated with medication and behavior modification.

Windshield Replacement: What You Should Know

(NAPS)—The most important thing you should know about windshield repairs is not to rush the shop that is doing the repairs.

The reason? The adhesive being used has to seal properly. This curing process is also called drying and setting. Experts at LYNX Services from PPG, a network of glass repair shops known for its high standards, point out that vehicles containing newly installed windshield replacement glass should not be driven before the adhesive has fully cured. That's because if a vehicle with replacement glass sealant that is not fully cured is involved in a front-end collision or roll-over accident, the windshield's ability to remain in its framed opening is greatly reduced.

Aside from giving the repair shop the time it needs for the adhesive to dry, here are some additional tips to think about after you have picked up your car with its new windshield just installed.

- Do not slam doors with all

"WE'RE JUST GOING HOME."

It's a good idea to limit your driving the first 24 hours after you have a new windshield installed in your car.

the windows closed.

- Do not put the vehicle through an automatic car wash for 24 hours following installation.
- Avoid the use of glass cleaners containing ammonia or alcohol for the first 48 hours following the installation.
- Limit your driving the first 24 hours after the installation.

For the name and address of a LYNX Services dealer near you, call 1-800-800-9000.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR FREE TRADER AD

Trader ads are a free service. The Globe reserves the right to edit and/or omit ads that do not meet expressed guidelines or Globe policy.
Ad requests received prior to noon Friday SHOULD appear in the following week's paper, unless space is limited. In such a case, the ad will be published in the next issue. Late forms and phone requests will NOT be accepted.
A separate request form must be submitted each week you wish the ad to run.
Forms must be filled out COMPLETELY. That includes full name of sponsor, his/her rank and unit, home address and home and work phone numbers. Incomplete forms will NOT be published.
Military work numbers will not be published. Barracks #'s must include room number.
Print legibly. If we can't read it, it will NOT be published.
Individual forms MUST be filled out for each category of items you want published. I.E., automobiles, furniture, pets. If an ad is submitted with several items from different categories on one form, they may not be published. Time is limited.
No more than 20 words per form. Only three forms per household a week will be published.
No ads for 'services provided' or commercial business will be published.
Trader ad submissions will not be accepted by fax, guard mail, phone or return contacts with military phone numbers.
