Field training exercise strengthens 2d SRIG

LCpl. Kimberly Everson

Globe staff

Marines from Headquarters and Service Battalion, 2d Surveillance Reconnaissance Intelligence Group, recently spent a week at the Engineer Training Area working with the field fortification package.

These Marines usually spend their time supporting the rest of 2d SRIG with their training, logistics and administrative skills. The week at ETA gave the Marines of HqSvcBn., the opportunity to get their hands dirty and spend some required time in the field refamiliarizing themselves with basic field skills.

"Getting out here together gives us a chance to do some training and refresh field skills and do some rear-area security," said Sgt. Tom Howard, training, HqSvcBn., 2d SRIG.

Marines took part in activities such as day and night land navigation, night infiltration course, a demolition package and a weapons shoot that included the M-240 Gulf machine gun and a 12-gauge shotgun.

"It's our job to provide security and support for the Marine expeditionary force and when setting up rear-area security claymores and TNT are often used," said Sgt. Richard Ray of HqSvcBn.'s training section.

LCpl. Kimberly Everson

Marines from 2d SRIG practice machine gun drills with the M-240G.

While in the field Marines worked together closely in activities such as machine gun drills, land navigation and field fortification. The time Marines spent working together as a team brought them closer as a unit. "Being in the field together enhances morale and builds character among the unit," said LCpl. Aborigine Young, of HqSvcBn.'s logistics office.

Naval service celebrates 221 years of history

LCpl. Kyle Reeves

Globe Staff

Marines and Sailors of 2d Forces Service Support Group paid tribute to the Navy's 221st birthday in a colors ceremony held at 2d FSSG Headquarters, Oct. 11.

The ceremony commemorates the Continental Congress' establishment of the Continental Navy as maritime fighting force on Oct. 13, 1775.

Servicemembers stood in formation as they listened to the melodic tunes of "Stars and Stripes Forever," "Anchors Aweigh" and the "Marines Hymn" performed by the 2d Marine Division Band. The ceremony proceeded with the raising of the colors. Brig. Gen. Harold Mashburn, Jr., commanding general, 2d FSSG was present to give a speech, recognizing the Navy's years of service to our nation's freedom. The final portion was the cutting of the Navy birthday cake; slices were passed to the oldest and youngest Sailors present. This symbolized the passing along of experience, knowledge and tradition.

The Navy began with two 10-gun warships used for intercepting vessels that were transporting enemy supplies. A year after the Navy was established, Esek Hopkins was appointed as the Navy's first commodore and its first commander in chief. Hopkins, with a fleet of six ships, was responsible for a raid in the Bahamas. With a contingency of 300 Marines commanded by Capt. Samuel Nicholas, they stormed the forts of New Providence, seizing large quantities of ammunition to be used by the Continental Army. This was the first amphibious landing involving Navy and Marines.

Domestic Violence Awareness Month recognizing myths

LCpl. Kimberly Everson

Globe staff

The month of October has been designated Domestic Violence Awareness Month and its purpose is to make people aware of the signs and symptoms of the problem.

Domestic Violence Awareness Month evolved from the first Day of Unity observed in October, 1981 by the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence. The idea was to bring battered women's advocates together, who were working to end violence against women and children. The Day of Unity soon became a special week, arranged at the local, state and national levels. In October 1987, the first Domestic Violence Awareness Month was held.

"Everyone should be aware of the dangers and signs of domestic violence. For instance, commands have to set a climate that domestic violence will not be tolerated and as concerned neighbors we should be aware of the signs of domestic violence," said Lt. Cmdr. Elizabeth A. Burns, director, Family Counseling Center.

Examples of abusive behavior are physical violence, sexual assault, destruction of property and emotional abuse.

"People are afraid to report that they are being victimized because they are afraid of ruining careers. Many dependents are afraid because if the servicemember loses his job due to the accusation, the

Local staff sergeant selectees receive indoctrination class to ease transition

LCpl. Erik Sutherland Svihla

Staff sergeant selectees from Camp Lejeune and MCAS New River gathered for an indoctrination class Oct. 11 to get a better idea of what is in store for them as staff non-commissioned officers.

Area sergeants major and experienced staff sergeants were on hand to share their knowledge. This class was necessary to give selectees a better idea of what will be expected of them, according to 2d MarDiv. Sgt. Maj. John K. Jones.

"In this class we're trying to make the transition from sergeant to staff sergeant a little easier, and to give them a better understanding of what is going to happen to them in the future. There are different things that come into play with this. One of them is a moral commitment. Along with the title, you are expected to know certain things just by virtue of being a staff NCO."

According to Jones, the class is very comprehensive. "The information is there. It is well thought through and well screened. Like anything else here, whether it be in the classroom or in the field, you get what you take out of it," he said.

This is the first time that a class this size has been given. Usually, Jones said, all the instruction is done at the unit level, and never at mass audience such as this.

In past years, according to Jones, there wasn't any kind of instruction for the transition to staff NCO. "When I made staff sergeant, they just handed me a set of chevrons and told me to get to it. I didn't really know what to expect and it was definitely harder. There has been a vast

Motivated sergeants, corporals wanted for intelligence field, 0251

Are you looking for a challenge in the Intelligence field? Are you looking for a unique career and a way of life that challenges the deepest resources of intelligence, self-reliance and responsibility? We are looking for a few motivated Marines, who are mature and responsible, to become Marine Interrogator-Translator specialists (MOS 0251). Applicants must be a sergeant with less than two-years time-in-grade (this can be waived for exceptional corporals), be eligible to obtain a top secret security clearance, possess a GT score of 110, and score at least a 100 on the Defense Language Aptitude Battery test (DLAB). Fluency in a foreign language is a plus.

MARINE MAIL:

Artic Service Ribbon criteria

The following Marine Mail was sent by Sgt. Brent N. Cheek, a travel clerk stationed with Marine Service Support Group-24, 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable):

Dear Sir,

I have been trying for the last couple of years to find out if a unit I was attached to was awarded the Arctic Service Ribbon.

I was attached to Marine Security Force Company, Adak, Alaska. My tour of duty was from June 12, 1990, to June 12, 1991. Since changing duty stations from there to 3rd Bn., 6th Marines, then to the 2d Force Service Support Group, I have run into a few Marines that I was stationed with in Alaska. These Marines were wearing the Arctic Service Ribbon and stated that they were awarded it while in Alaska. I have tried to find the old ALMARS from 1990 and 1991 to see if, in fact, this was correct. To date, I have not been able to find anything stating that MCSF Adak was given the award.

I would have attempted to contact the unit there, but it was deactivated in July 1991. If the unit was not given the award, why would this be? It would seem that if a unit can go to cold weather training for three-to-four weeks and rate the ribbon, a person stationed in Alaska for a year would also rate the award. Any assistance you could give me would be greatly appreciated.

Sgt. Brent N. Cheek

The following response was provided by Col. Kenneth W. Hillman, director, Human Resources Division, HQMC:

Dear Sergeant Cheek,

I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Commandant of the Marine Corps in regards to your e-mail about the Navy Arctic Service Ribbon.

The criteria for the Navy Arctic Service Ribbon is contained in the Navy and Marine Corps Awards Manual (SECNAVINST 1650.1F) Your S-1 should have a copy of this manual which states that personnel who serve above the Arctic Circle for a period of 28 days consecutive or nonconsecutive would be entitled to this award. Since Adak, Alaska is not above the Arctic Circle, you would not be entitled to the award.

We appreciate your interest in this matter and welcome your suggestions and comments. Keep charging.

*We left as young men, eager and brave,
With dreams of glory and flags away.*

*We left our girlfriends, lovers and wives,
To do the duty our country advised.*

*We did our duty as best we could,
Slaughtering and killing for "our country's good."*

*But when we returned the glory was gone,
And we were old men just left to live on.*

*We lost our girlfriends, lovers and wives,
Our hearts were empty and so were our lives.*

*Some have scars or a wound that shows,
But we all have pain that each of us knows.*

*Our comrades of battle have gone many places,
Our heads are full of their memories and faces.*

*We put up a monument to show that we care,
And when it was dedicated, we were all there.*

*When will we get together again?
When will we be what we were before then?*

*Happy and free, no wish to just roam,
When can we be Finally Home?*

Movie Extras Needed

A casting call will be held at 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Paradise Point Officer's Club for approximately 25 officers, both male and female, to participate in a motion picture to be made for television. The movie, entitled "Hide and Seek," is being made at Camp Lejeune and Wilmington.

The scene for which the extras are needed depicts a Marine Corps Birthday Ball. Dress uniforms are not needed for the casting call, however, they will be needed for the actual filming, currently scheduled for Nov. 11. If selected, Marines must be in leave or liberty status for the filming and will be paid at the industry standard of $60, plus a stipend for care of the uniform or clothing worn.

In addition, spouses are needed for the scene, but are not needed for the casting call. Anyone having questions should call the Public Affairs Office at 451-5655.

Firm admits to medal flap

NEWARK, N.J. — The company that holds government contract to manufacture the Medal of Honor — the nation's highest decoration — admitted it sold 300 unauthorized medals for $75 each.

I.L.I. Lordship Industries Inc. of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., said it will plead guilty in federal court Nov. 4 to making unauthorized medals and pay up to $225,000 in fines. Under the plea bargain, there will be no further prosecution of Lordship or any individuals, according to its lawyer, Frederick Hafetz.

Neither the FBI and nor federal prosecutors would comment.

In the 134 years since it was authorized, 11 people have been awarded the Medal of Honor, most posthumously, for risking their lives in combat beyond the call of duty.

Hafetz said that a Lordship executive sold unauthorized Medals of Honor to an individual for $22,500 from 1991 to 1994. The unauthorized decorations often land in memorabilia shops, which sell them to collectors or people who then pose as recipients.

Ethnic violence in Zaire leaves 28 dead

UKAVU, Zaire — Tutsi rebels have killed at least 28 people and driven some 46,000 refugees from camps in eastern Zaire, workers said Sunday.

The refugees, from camps near the area's town of Uvira, have moved into Uvira's surrounding hills, said Paul Mbera, a spokesman for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

The Tutsi rebels crossed the border from Rwanda on Friday, and attacked villages near Uvira, a senior Zairian military commander said Sunday, displacing thousands. Another aid worker in Kigali said that the situation in eastern Zaire was very confused and that fighting was heavy.

Today's contingent was expected to be taken to Diyarbakir, Turkey, and will then be flown to Guam, a U.S. territory in the Pacific, in the next few days. Those eligible for political refugee status will be allowed to resettle in the United States, State Department spokeswoman Julie Reside said in Washington.

U.S. widens search for Gulf veterans near blast

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Pentagon said Tuesday that it would notify 20,000 veterans of the Gulf War — four times more than previously announced — that they might have been exposed to nerve gas and blistering agents when a battalion of American combat engineers blew up an Iraqi ammunition depot that was later determined to have contained chemical weapons.

The announcement greatly expands the search for Gulf War veterans who may have suffered exposure to clouds of chemical agents released from the Kamisiyah ammunition depot in southern Iraq in March 1991, shortly after the war.

The department announced last month that it would contact 5,000 troops who were within 16 miles of the sprawling depot when large parts of it were destroyed on March 4 and March 10, 1991. The search was expanded Tuesday to an estimated 20,000 veterans who were within 31 miles.

"Right now, this is our best guess of the people who could have come even close to very minimal exposure," said Kenneth Bacon, the department's chief spokesman.

Bacon explained that the area to be examined for possible chemical exposure had been expanded because "We decided to be safe, to go double that."

The Pentagon also disclosed Tuesday that American troops might have blown up a third site within the Kamisiyah arsenal March 12, raising at least the possibility of another chemical exposure.

Consumers' Corner: Insurance sales, base regulations

Military regulations attempt to minimize the enormous potential for high pressure sales, dissemination of misleading information, interference with domestic tranquility and disruption of base operations posed by insurance sales. Some, but not all, requirements and prohibitions are listed below.

-Requirement for prior appointment No one can go house to house, or office to office, trying to sell insurance on base. Before the agent talks to the consumer about insurance, that agent must have a prior appointment with that individual. Solicitation for such an appointment may be made by mail, telephone, or off-base personal contact only. While the agent is aboard base for one appointment, he can not solicit additional appointments. Under no circumstances should an agent be selling insurance in any barracks or BEQ.

-Prohibition against group presentations Insurance agents are prohibited from addressing mass formations or any assembly of military personnel for any purpose, including classes or lectures concerning financial planning or investment advice. Commanders may arrange for instructors to make financial presentations, but only if the instructor is not an insurance agent, is approved by the Commandant and is approved by the Base Insurance Officer.

-DoD Personnel as Agents Military servicemembers may not be insurance agents, trainees or deal in any official capacity with an insurer for the purpose of soliciting or selling insurance on base. DoD personnel are also prohibited from on-base recruiting of others to become insurance agents.

-Soliciting in unauthorized areas Due to special pressures and vulnerabilities of students under training, insurance agents are prohibited from entering training areas of the Rifle Range; Engineer School, Courthouse Bay; Service Support Schools, Camp Johnson; NCO Leadership School; School of Infantry, Camp Geiger; and other areas where students are assigned for instruction, even if an appointment has been made.

-Use of allotments Insurance allotments are authorized. However, insurers are prohibited from possessing allotment forms, or assisting to coordinate processing of allotments. Furthermore, members in pay grades E-3 and below may not complete an insurance allotment until the CO determines that there has been at least seven days between the date the policy was sold and the date the allotment was requested.

-Unauthorized advertisements The Base Bulletin, unit Plan of the Day, training schedules or the like can not be used to announce the presence of an insurance agent and that agent's availability. Further, agents may not provide insurance literature to anyone except to the person being interviewed pursuant to prior appointment.

-Standards of Conduct In addition to base regulations, ethics regulations place strict limits on the financial dealings of all DoD personnel. For example, neither government time or equipment may be used for unofficial purposes. Further, seniors are prohibited from soliciting sales to juniors, regardless of whether there is any actual coercion involved.

What can be done?
-Prevention Some violations may occur because well-meaning unit officials are unaware of the rules. When in doubt about the legality of a proposal, consult the Base Insurance Officer.

-Sanctions A variety of punishments are available. Insurers can be barred from the base. Their company can be declared off-limits to military personnel. Wronged individuals may sue the insurer and the state attorney general may be persuaded to do likewise or to prosecute a criminal complaint. Since both the base order and the DoD ethics regulation are punitive, the full range of administrative and criminal sanctions are available against military violators.

-Reporting Unless a violation is reported; however, nothing will ever be done about the violation. Chances are, the violator will cease immediately when officially notified of the misconduct. If not, the above sanctions are available. Additional information can be obtained through the Base Insurance Officer, the Consolidated Legal Assistance Office (451-1903/2285), the state insurance commissioner (1-800-662-7777) or your unit insurance officer.

Chaplain's Corner Obedience in three levels

Lt. Cmdr. Mark W. Koczak
MCB Chaplain

Most of us, serving in the Sea Services, have a problem defining the word "obedience" and living it. Our culture, where we all come from, no longer sees obedience as an important virtue. In the Marine Corps, we must be obedient to our chain of command. We learn in Marine Corps Recruit Depot, or in officers' training the value of obedience in a military setting where the mission is of prime importance.

In reality, obedience has three levels where we all function. The first is to ask and receive advice when we feel confused. This is pretty easy to deal with. In doing our job in the military, this is often where we are at. We need to learn new subjects all the time. We need to adjust to a new duty station every few years. We all experience this first degree of obedience. Secondly, we follow advice which agrees with what we believe. It is great to have someone support what we want. It is also very easy to obey someone that believes the same thing that we do. This goes along with the idea that it is much easier for us to love people that love us and hate people that hate us. But it is much more human and kind to do the opposite.

Lastly, the third level of obedience is to obey, even in direct opposition to our views and wants. This is the true definition of obedience. This is what God calls us to do in our lives. This level is where almost all of us have problems with our superiors in the military. Yes, obedience has to do with training, knowledge, growth and maturity.

Ultimately, obedience to a loved one, to a superior or to our God concerns our pride. Are we honest with ourselves about our commitments to others? Can we honor promises to our spouses, our brothers and sisters and our friends? When we truly answer these questions and more, we will be on the way towards true obedience in life.

What women need to know now about breast cancer

Breast Cancer is the most common type of cancer among women in the United States. The combined number of active duty and reserve women in the Armed Forces approached 350,000 (approximately 14 percent) in 1995 and is increasing. If women beneficiaries age 40 and above are added to this number, women beneficiaries comprise approximately 35 percent of the Military Health Services System (MHSS).

Who Does Breast Cancer Affect?

Breast cancer affects not only the women who develop the disease and undergo treatment, but also their spouses, families, employers, and peers. Treatment plus the loss of work time, and in certain cases loss of life, have a significant and far-reaching impact economically and emotionally on the military and the nation.

How Can Your Risk Be Decreased?

Early breast cancer detection and prevention can reduce these effects and increase survival rates. Initiatives to advance a broad range of activities to promote the health and well being of women and efforts to assist women in making more informed choices about their health will lead to reduced incidence and prevalence of breast cancer. It is through education and awareness of the importance of clinical examinations, mammograms, and monthly breast self examinations that we most effectively decrease the morbidity and mortality from breast cancer and positively affect the well being and morale of the DoD work force and beneficiaries.

What Role Does the Naval Hospital Play?

Naval Hospital Camp Lejeune's objective is to ensure awareness of and easy access to superior medical and diagnostic technology and follow-up care for early detection and optimum treatment of breast cancer in active duty women and female beneficiaries.

The Goal

Our goal is to provide training in early detection, minimization of breast cancer risk, and optimization of health care availability for female beneficiaries, thereby emphasizing access and follow-through to reach the entire eligible population of women at risk.

Warrior Stations of teamwork-required obstacles, an enhanced confidence course, several movement courses, a casualty evacuation exercise, an endurance course, team pugil sticks, unknown distance firing, and a night infiltration and march — all in a 54-hour time-span.

"It's not only going to see if they've (recruits) got heart, it's going to see how much heart they've got," said Sgt. Donald Tallman, a DI student who ran the course before graduating Sept. 26.

Not only did the students have to complete all the events, they had to do it with tired bodies and hungry stomachs.

Marines were given two Meals, Ready-to-Eat per day and were only allowed approximately four hours of sleep each night.

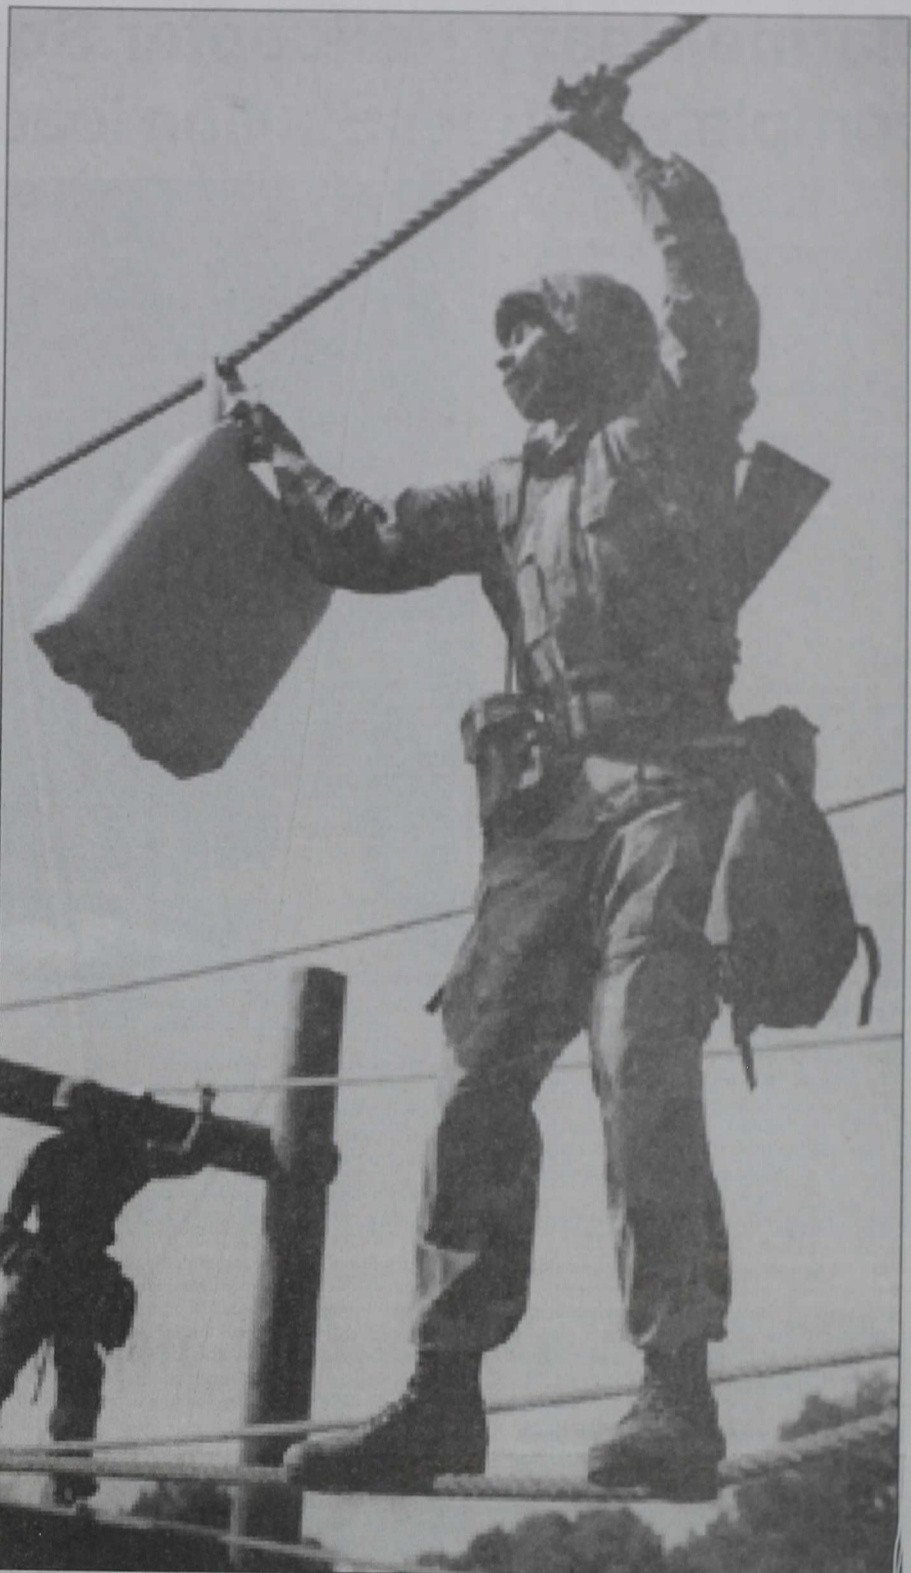

Finally, on the morning of Sept. 20 at 3 a.m., the students stepped off for a nine-mile march bringing them home in time to view the morning colors ceremony at 8 a.m. Afterwards, the Marines had a Warrior's Breakfast at the Headquarters and Service Battalion messhall.

The purpose of the Crucible is to confront recruits with mental and physical challenges and allow them to work as a team to overcome challenges with little interaction from their drill instructors.

"At the end of recruit training, when faced with the Crucible, the emphasis that was placed on team work since the start will help recruits realize what it's all about," said GSgt. James Fields, another DI student who undertook the Crucible challenge.

"We're leaning more toward the role of the teacher and father-figure than we are as the old type of drill instructor," said Tallman. "Now that we're incorporating many more things, we've got to be smarter about the way we're doing things."

The crucible is one more tool in the Corps' training toolbox — a tool the Corps hopes will make its Marines better able to cope with the demands of life as a Marine.

Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 461 completes Super Stallion load certification

Helicopter Squadron makes aviation first as CH-53E is loaded aboard a C-17 Globemaster III

SSgt. Pamela R. Redmond
MCAS New River

MARINE CORPS AIR STATION NEW RIVER, N.C. — Back in action following the Navy-wide grounding of all CH-53s, Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-461 quickly made its return known by completing an aviation first: the loading of a CH-53E Super Stallion aboard a C-17 Globemaster III during a static load certification test here recently.

Overcoming difficulties early in the evolution, HMH-461 successfully loaded the '53 twice after removing the sliding dog house and tail shock strut from the fuselage.

The first loading consisted of only the fuselage, "to see if we could get it in there," said Capt. Arch M. McLellan, '53 pilot and HMH-461 logistics officer. The second loading included the fuselage, gearbox and tail gearbox.

"Because it's the first time we've done this, it was kind of trial and error," said MSgt. Stephan M. Szewczyk, HMH-461 maintenance chief. "Once we got it in, we realized the helicopter wasn't in far enough so we removed the sliding dog house so the C-17 ramp flippers could close."

The Globemaster is the newest fleet cargo and transport vehicle. Because it will eventually replace the C-5, various types of cargo must be loaded and certified to both validate and verify the payload and provide a future standard operating procedure.

"We'll write all our input and lessons learned and submit it as part of the C-17 loading manual," said McLellan. "By writing it down, any '53 squadron will know the configurations of loading '53s onto C-17s."

To see the Globemaster III and the heavy-lift Super Stallion on the flightline might raise a question as to why such a large helicopter would ever need to be loaded onto such a large aircraft.

"This is something we'd do that's very long range in instances where a '53 is needed at a great distance in a short period of time," 1stLt. Mike J. Harmon, '53 pilot said.

Though smaller than the C-5, C-17s offer greater maneuverability, greater cargo lift and need a shorter runway allowing it to land aboard the Air

The "Iron Horses" loaded the CH-53E onto the C-17 twice during the day-long load test certification evolution. The sliding dog house and the tail shock strut had to be removed in order to slide the Super Stallion in far enough for the Globemaster III ramps to close. The '53 would be loaded in the C-17 in instances where the Super Stallion was needed at a great distance in a short period of time.

Station, whereas C-5s could not. This offers greater flexibility to the squadrons in terms of transport, because now, helicopters will no longer have to fly to Cherry Point to be disassembled and loaded on C-5s, but can now be loaded from here.

Though it took about a day to complete the certification test, it takes much longer to prepare the '53 for loading. "It takes about 28 maintenance hours to prepare a helo," Szewczyk said. "Most of the Marines never worked on loading a '53 on a C-5, let alone a C-17."

"Normally on a C-5, we take off the refueling probe and the F4 tires, but we didn't have to for the C-17," Szewczyk said.

"HMH-461 did a superb job of breaking down the aircraft and correcting any problems," WO Cedric M. Ingram, MAG 26 embarkation officer said. "The Air Force 33rd Test Squadron from Charleston, S.C., was very helpful in accommodating our schedule to provide the aircraft for the load test."

Fully operational, the "Iron Horses" can now add yet another successful mission to its long list of credentials.

BROVES, France — The point man from the squad walked stealthily, searching for possible threats from an unknown enemy in each shadowy corner of buildings which formed an imposing gauntlet before him. As the window to his immediate left burst open, his grip tightened around the hilt of his weapon. He whirled around, training the rifle's sights on a figure cloaked in darkness, the man's intentions as of yet unrevealed. The dilemma facing him now is one that has plagued Marines engaged in low-intensity conflicts (LIC), most recently in Haiti or Somalia — shoot or don't shoot?

In a small hamlet at Camp de Canjuers (CDC), France, the second platoon from Company F, Battalion Landing Team 2/8, 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit, is experiencing a much less threatening, scenario-driven training package focused on this type of conflict, requiring them to react to similar circumstances.

As part of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Force Unit (Special Operations Capable), currently deployed to the Mediterranean Sea, F Company's attention to this training is well timed and has a real-world application.

"The package included training in military operations in an urban terrain (MOUT), check point operations and implementation force (IFOR) rules of engagement," said 2dLt. Matthew R. Sasse, 1st Platoon Commander, F Company.

Prior to the deployment, 24 MEU Marines had been given extensive ROE instruction on likely encounters they might face while in the Mediterranean theater by MEU Staff Judge-Advocate, Capt. Donald J. Riley, Jr.

The classes Riley taught urged Marines to apply the principles they had learned to potentially life-threatening confrontations in hostile countries and discuss possible courses of action.

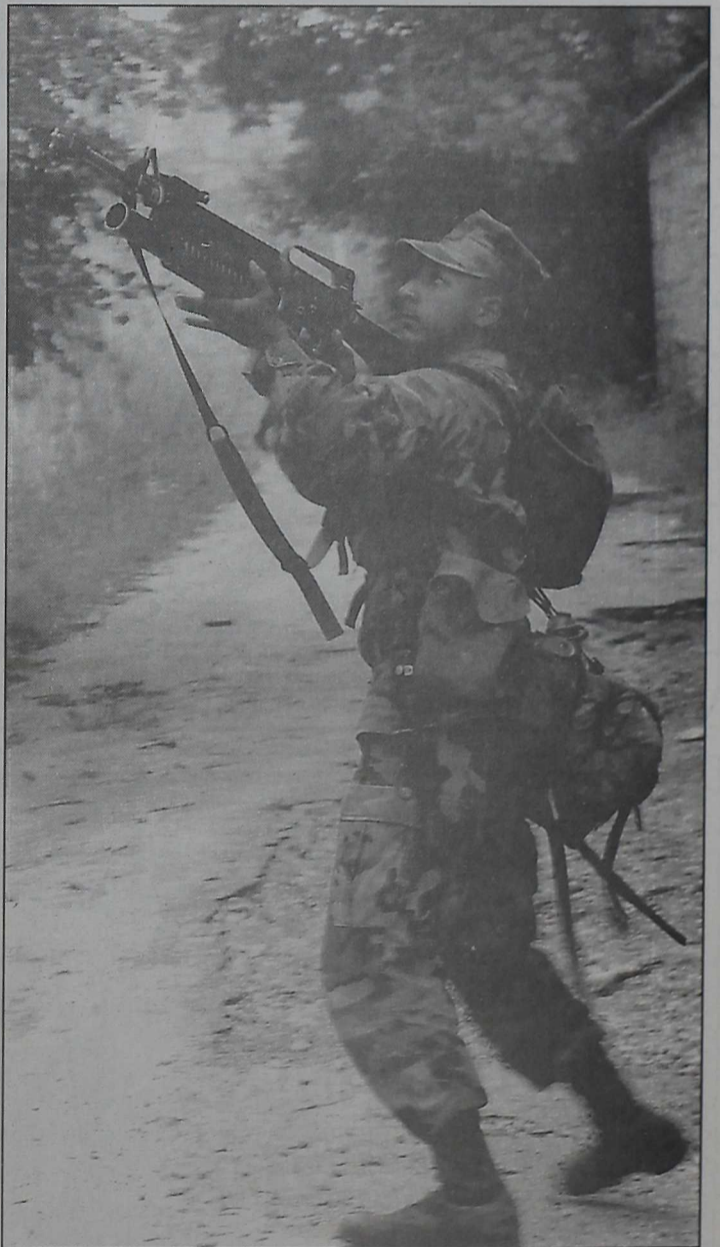

"Rules of engagement are essentially there to tell us when and with what means we may fight and engage an enemy force when they are encountered. These standing rules of engagement apply to all U.S. forces worldwide, all the time, until directed otherwise," said Riley.

"The ROE is a guideline. Some Marines interpret it a little different than others. In many instances, Marines must decide on their own whether to shoot at the first inkling of threat, or simply keep the threat at a minimum by alternate, non-lethal means," said Sasse.

The training was set up to allow each Marine to make that independent decision as the situation unfolded in front of him. Marine role-players posed as either hostile, in-country guerrillas, suspicious passers-by, and even harmless civilians at random locations throughout the town.

This unique situation forced Marines to depart from their normal role of "I'm up, they see me, I'm down" warriors who assault on line through an objective and singularly experience the position of "point-man" on a patrol through an urban environment.

One by one, Marines would cautiously move along the route through the city streets unknowing of who or what might jump out to harass them. Role players confronted the one-man patrol with a barrage of confusing situations. Some only badgered while others pulled weapons, threw tires or grenades, or even shot from windows of abandoned buildings.

All the Marines agreed that the training they had received at Camp Lejeune prior to deploying gave them essential building blocks to deal with many of the problems.

However, the unfamiliarity of the training area and the innovative imagination of the role players posed new challenges for them.

"The other Marines and I were discussing it, and this is the best training we've had since we left Lejeune. Being thrown into a situation that you easily be in the next few weeks really brings it home and also cranks up the intensity," said Cpl. Brian C. Schroth, F Company.

Fire Mission!

Providing close artillery support for ground forces

Cpl. Erik Sutherland Svihla
JBA staff

Night sets in as the last of twilight's rays cast air shadows upon two hulking 155 mm howitzers muffled in netting. The crew of Gun 2, B Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Marines waits patiently in the growing darkness.

"Fire Mission! One round, at my command!" the recorder relays the message from the fire direction center, the ammo loaders heave a 90-pound projectile onto the loading tray, ready to be mated into the howitzer looming in the shadows before them. In fluid succession, the high explosive round is slipped into the chamber, followed by the powder charge. Quickly, without hesitation, the number one man, or trigger man, slams the breech shut, slips in the primer and readies the lanyard to fire. Suddenly, the sector's recorder calls out the order "Standby!" The crew braces themselves for the inevitable command to "Fire!" with a rumble that shakes the earth, the howitzer recoils as it launches a round on its trek to destruction.

According to Capt. Gerald F. Harper, Commander, B Battery, 1/10, the firing of the guns is the final and main function of the battery's mission. "The mission of Bravo Battery is to provide artillery support for the ground forces of the Marine Division, as part of 1st Battalion, 10th Marines," he said.

Providing this support involves more than just arbitrarily firing the guns in the general direction of the enemy, according to SSgt. Jim Houston, battery operations chief. The firing process begins with the forward observer calling in grid missions to the fire direction center. The FDC then checks the safety of the mission, determines how many rounds and what type of ammunition will be used, and then finally sends fire commands to the gun line, he said.

According to Houston, the perfection of this system is the reason for this particular training mission. "We are out here rehearsing firing standards, as far as what the Marine Corps has set aside for us, and preparing for the MCCRES (Marine Corps Combat Readiness Evaluation System)," he said.

"It tests our combat skills and makes sure that we do everything that we should be doing in combat," said Houston. According to Houston, this involves everybody from the forward observer to the gunline.

Getting everybody up to Marine Corps combat standard all comes down to one thing, however, and that's getting the rounds downrange accurately. According to SSgt. John Waddell, Gun 2 section chief, that's their job. As a section chief, it is his responsibility to ensure the safe firing of the gun and the employment of the section's personnel.

According to Waddell, firing the weapon involves an enormous amount of teamwork. For the team to function smoothly, each member must know his job and be efficient in those duties. Without this efficiency, he said, you can forget firing the weapon accurately.

"This weapon weighs 16,000 pounds, and the projectiles are 90 pounds, and we can place the weapon on the move and have her ready to fire in about two minutes. Each member of the team has a specific area of responsibility, and without each person doing his job, it's pretty difficult to do what we need to do," he said.

From the recorder receiving the command from the FDC, to the gunner setting the firing data, to the time that the number one man pulls the lanyard, each individual in Bravo Battery has his job, and each has a hand in providing the support that the 2d Marine Division needs.

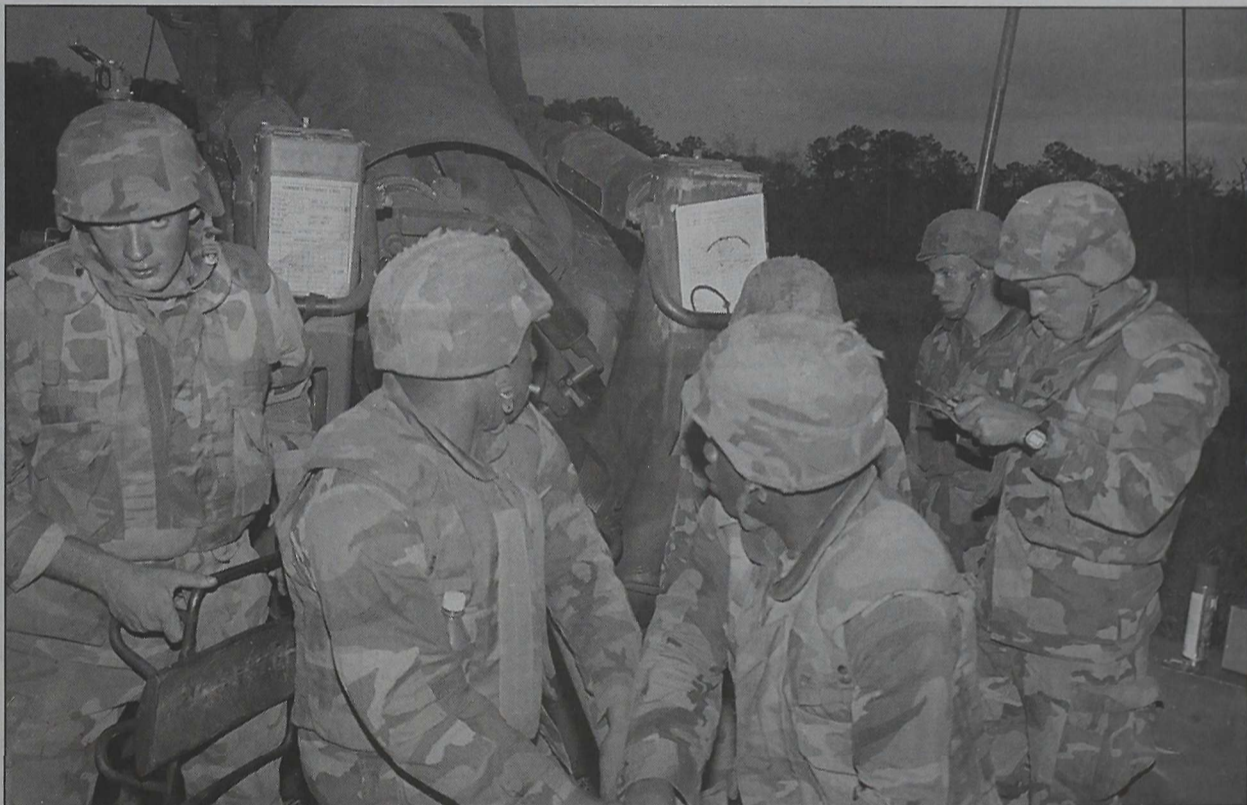

LCpl. Erik Sutherland Svihla

LCpl. Hakeem Richards, number one man, Gun 2, slips the lanyard into the trigger mechanism in the last stage of preparing the 155mm howitzer to fire.

LCpl. Erik Sutherland Svihla

Cpl. Richard Alivas, recorder for Gun 2, relays the fire mission as directed by the FDC. As the section's recorder, he is responsible for keeping track of what missions are ordered and calls out the specifications to the gun crew.

Religious Program Specialist makes it into Marine Corps history books with meritorious promotion

Petty Officer 3rd Class Paul J. Ehrman receives a meritorious promotion, taking his place in 2d Marine Division's history books. The promotion makes Ehrman the first religious program specialist to be meritoriously promoted within the 2d MarDiv. Ehrman proved himself worthy of the promotion through his appearance, dedication to duty, performance, attitude and volunteer activities. Ehrman has been with the 2d MarDiv. more than two years and the promotion came as a surprise to him. "Wow, is all I can say about it," Ehrman said. "I wasn't expecting to get it, since no other RP in 2nd Marine Division had been meritoriously promoted before."

24th MEU(SOC) Marines conduct maintenance stand down in Toulon

SSgt. Larry S. Woosley
24th MEU Public Affairs Chief

Toulon, France — Members of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit (Special Operations Capable) conducted a massive maintenance stand down during their recent port call in Toulon, France.

While other elements of the MEU were spread throughout the western Mediterranean, participating in various training exercises, the remaining Marines of the MEU were also working hard.

The combined rear parties for the MEU Command Element, Battalion Landing Team (BLT) 2d Battalion, 8th Marines, Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron (HMM) 266 and the main body of MEU Service Support Group (MSSG) 24, took part in the evolution which required detailed, logistical coordination to offload more than 200 vehicles and pieces of equipment.

The stand down, conducted just off the pier at the Naval Arsenal in Toulon, began Aug. 30 when the Amphibious Ready Group, consisting of USS Saipan, USS Ginston Hall and USS Austin, pulled into port.

The huge workspace provided by the port facility allowed tanks and artillery pieces to receive some crucial maintenance which could not be accomplished effectively within the cramped spaces on the ship.

"In order to adjust track tension on tanks, they need to roll 30 to 40 feet for this to be accomplished," explained 1st Lt. John P. Voss, tank platoon commander.

"We were able to perform all the major maintenance required for these vehicles, which included blowing air filters, replacing road wheels, punching gun tubes and cleaning bore evacuators," Voss said. "Lack of mobility kills us on ship. We need to get to an area where we can spread out."

As a result, the work performed over the first three days produced four, 100 percent-ready tanks equipped to deal with the subsequent exercises held up in Camp de Canjuers, according to Voss. Additionally, MSSG-24 was able to render overall assistance to those requiring it.

"Due to the limitations on the numbers of people allowed to use the various training areas, the MEU commanding officer had the opportunity to use the MSSG-24 personnel to conduct some needed maintenance," said Lt. Col. Chip Castaing, commanding officer, MSSG-24, who was assigned as the mission commander for the stand down. "We have three exercises under our belts with two more to go. This will be beneficial to the overall readiness of the MEU."

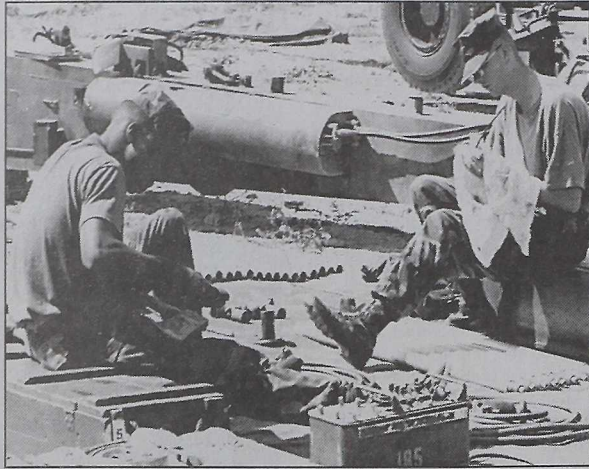

The focus of the 225 Marines who performed the mission was crew and unit level maintenance, according to Capt. Jeff P. Hooks, MSSG-24's operations officer.

"If we identified anything that required higher-echelon maintenance, we had the MSSG's maintenance platoon set up to handle it," Hooks added. "I was expecting to see more problems than we did."

Hooks and Castaing both attribute the lack of problems to the proactive attitudes of all the members of the MEU. "The 207 pieces of rolling stock, at the operator level, were in very good shape," Hooks said.

Seven stations were set up, beginning with a staging area where limited technical inspections were conducted to identify potential problems. Other stations ranged from tire upkeep and repairs, lubrication and salt water checks to the final evolution where each vehicle was washed down thoroughly with fresh water before being staged for an eventual backload onto the ships. "We found some salt-water contamination in wheel bearings on some of the vehicles," Hooks said. "We drained them and replaced the oils."

Finding salt-water contamination was not unexpected since many of the vehicles had driven through surf while going ashore during exercises. Salt-water contamination in the bearings could cause catastrophic failure (wheels freezing up) according to Castaing. "If the vehicles stop moving, we have problems," he explained. "An inability to move people, supplies and equipment poses a significant problem during amphibious training evolutions."

Other than minor corrosion, there were no significant maintenance trends, according to Hooks, just normal wear and tear.

Both Hooks and Castaing also acknowledged their supply personnel and 2d Supply Battalion at Camp Lejeune, N.C., for their quick requisition and delivery of the necessary parts. "We were calling them all the time and they supported us," Castaing commented. "Thank God for the 2d Supply Battalion."

After 10 days of thorough maintenance conducted by the MSSG's Maintenance platoon, 207 combat ready vehicles were staged for backload aboard amphibious ready group shipping Sept. 10.

"We know we've done our mission," Hooks explained, "when the MEU has no maintenance needs in the accomplishment of its mission."

Base golf club team wins Pro-Am tourney

Cpl. Jonathan D. Cress
Globe Staff

A golf team from the Paradise Point Golf Club won a Pro-Am (professional amateur) golf tournament in both team and individual categories Oct. 1 at Lakewood Golf Course in Vass, N.C.

Despite rainy and windy conditions, Maggie Weder, Erna Schiro, Rosa Fiamme and Bruce Oliver finished the course at 15 under par. Additionally, Oliver, the master golf professional, took first place in the individual competition with a 72. This is their team's third tournament. Previously, they won a tournament and placed 6th at another.

The tournament was a best-ball, low-net tournament, which means that the lowest score, from each hole, including handicaps, is kept for the team. Each of the 24 competing teams had three amateurs and one professional.

"We've had remarkably good success with both women's and men's teams this year," said Oliver, Paradise Point golf course manager and master golf professional. "I am very pleased with the team's performance."

For winning, the amateur golfers received gift certificates at the pro-shop and money while the professionals received money prizes.

The team has a break from competition because of renovation work at Paradise Point's Gold Course, which is scheduled to reopen Nov. 5.

"We've been very busy this year with both hurricanes and the tropical storm," said Oliver. "We've had a lot of problems with the course renovation, but when we open next month, the course will be in good shape."

According to Oliver, the goal of the management is to have a quality golf course. One year from the opening, after the new course has had time to mature, he expects the course to be top notch and equal to or better than any course in the area.

"Golf is a game of a lifetime," said Oliver. "The people from Camp Lejeune should get involved and take advantage of the time they spend here. We really have a lot to offer and you don't have to be a member to play here."

Paradise Point is open year-round, unless the course gets flooded-out or freezes over.

SOI whips 2d Radio Bn.

Cpl. Jonathan D. Cress
Globe Staff

The scoring madmen from the School of Infantry football team devastated 2d Radio Battalion 52-0 in an Intramural League game that never saw a second half Oct. 16 at the "O" St. field.

Early in the first quarter, the scoring began with a quarterback sneak up the middle for 47 yards by SOI's Jack Calhoun, followed by a two-point conversion by Jonathan Borders. Minutes later, on the next possession, following a series of lost yardage by Radio Bn., SOI's middle linebacker Jason Martin recovered a blocked punt in the end zone for another touchdown which ended the quarter with SOI in the lead 22-0.

At the start of the second quarter, Radio Bn. began to move the ball and even made two 3rd down conversions, but before reaching midfield they coughed the ball up once again setting up another touchdown for SOI. From 39 yards out, SOI's running back Eddie Williams shook several tackles before being brought down at the 1-yard-line; he scored on the next play.

As the game continued Radio Bn. had difficulty moving the ball. Penalties and turnovers by the Radio Bn. offense set up several contributing factors to their poor offense.

Camp Lejeune fencing team dreams of reaching newer heights

LCpl. Kyle Reeves
Globe Staff

Nathan Richardson lunges his sword forward at his opponent who does likewise. Back and forth, they move in a linear motion that resembles the old swashbuckling films. The flexibility of the sword causes it to bend as Richardson pushes it into his opponent's side. Fortunately, no injuries occur; the studded tip prevents the sword from doing any serious damage.

Although there haven't been any serious injuries, you can still get hurt, as Richardson demonstrates the cut mark on his hand he received from a sabre sword.

Richardson is a member of the Down Home Fencing Team at Camp Lejeune. Every Tuesday evening, he, and seven other members, meet to practice their sword fighting technique.

The club is the creation of Scottie Allman, the team's coach.

Allman has been fencing for more than six years after being introduced to the sport himself through a fencing class while stationed at 4th Force Reconnaissance in Reno, Nevada.

When Allman arrived at Camp Lejeune, he saw the need to establish a fencing team for divisional competition. He ran an advertisement in The Globe, recruiting fencers from novice to experts.

According to Don Scott, acting coach, the team currently has eight active members, consisting of civilians and active-duty servicemembers.

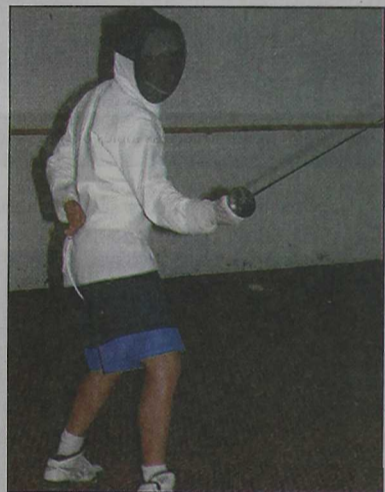

Since the team's inception, it has taken part in two tournaments one at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. It's scheduled to have another competition at UNC Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

"We'd like to see the team go a lot further," said Scott. "Hopefully, we will be good enough to compete nationally. We have a good group of swordsmen and we're looking to augment our team."

The Down Home Fencing Team is looking to recruit more members to their team.

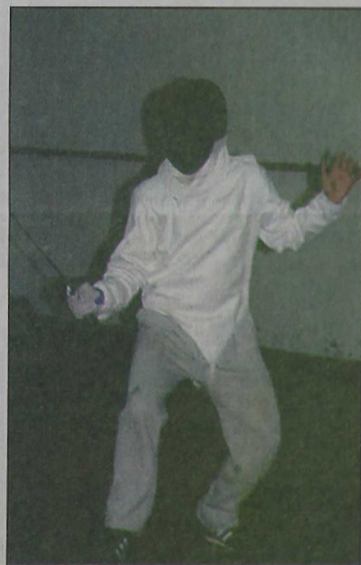

"It doesn't matter what proficiency level they are at," said Scott. "We will teach them with no cost to the individual." Practice equipment is provided by the club, so there won't be any need to spend any money for now. The team practices once a week at the Semper Fit Aerobics Center on Tuesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Scott encourages everyone to come out and see if they would enjoy it. Interested members should contact Scott at 353-7107 or Allman 326-7100. "There is no obligation to join and it might be something you enjoy," Scott said.

Hooray for the University of Rhode Island! If you haven't heard, URI has voluntarily forfeited a NCAA football game to the University of Connecticut. It seems about 40 members of the URI football team trashed a rival fraternity house on their own campus.

To prove a point, the school president, Robert Caruthers, canceled the longtime rivalry game between the Yankee conference teams; the first time a NCAA football game has ever been voluntarily forfeited.

The game was scheduled to be played at UConn and the estimated loss of revenue for the school is now at $150,000. URI has offered to pay UConn for all of its monetary losses.

The problem with this is that the NCAA is not counting the game as a URI loss and a UConn win, but instead a "non-competition" with neither team emerging victorious. The Yankee conference is counting the match-up as a UConn win for inter-conference standings and Caruthers is lobbying the NCAA to count the game as a UConn win as well.

It's good to see a school standing up for itself and what it believes in. It didn't bow down to the powerful athletic program, the alumni or the players' pleas. It is punishing a few members of the team, as well as the non-participating players and the entire school.

Caruthers calls the forfeiture a "teachable moment," when the school can send a message out to not only URI athletes, but athletes around the country, that there are consequences for actions. Jocks are not invincible icons, untouchable by school presidents and deans.

I hope other schools take note of this action and see it as a viable way to deal with discipline in athletic programs.

Again, Hooray for URI as they stand up against the tyranny of organized sports and move back in the direction of organized civility.

Devildogs top dogs in Saturday Youth football game

Devildogs, 32, Bulldogs, 7
The Devildogs growled their way to victory in a battle-of-the-dogs match-up to beat the Bulldogs 32 - 7, in Division II football action at W.P.T. Hill field Oct. 19.

Mathew Good hustled in for a touchdown on the first possession, leading the way for the Devildogs.

After a dazzling run by Bulldog running back Cordell Smith, the Bulldogs could not come up with the first-down yardage and had to punt the ball.

Still in the first quarter, the Devildogs scored again, leaving all of their tails wagging behind them. After a third touchdown by Devildog quarterback Mitch Schillumeit, the game went to halftime with the score 20 - 0.

The Devildogs recovered an onside kick at the Bulldog 36-yard-line, putting the team into good scoring position, but the Bulldog defense rose to the challenge and held them off.

Good and Schillumeit scored back-to-back touchdowns early in the 4th quarter giving their team a comfortable lead of 32 - 0.

It looked like the Bulldogs would be held scoreless - until the last three minutes of the game when Mathew Eliker broke through the line, dodging numerous tackles, for a 47-yard touchdown to end the scoring at 32 - 7.

After the kick off the Devildogs maintained possession and ran out the clock to improve their record to 3 - 3, the Bulldogs fell to 1 - 5.

Lejeune High School Devil Pups triumph at homecoming

Cpl. Jonathan D. Cress
Globe Staff

The Lejeune High School Devil Pups clawed their way to victory over the Dixon Bulldogs 22 - 9 in a spirited homecoming football game at Lejeune High School, Oct. 18.

Lejeune's Keith Anderson scored first in the dogfight, scrambling from 26 yards out for a touchdown in the Devil Pups' first possession. Sinking their teeth into the game, the Devil Pups seemed to send the message that they would not lose on home turf.

The Bulldogs yelped back throughout the first half, making the Devil Pups earn every yard, but by halftime the score was Lejeune 14, Dixon 0.

The second half brought rain and lower temperatures, but the enthusiastic cheerleaders kept the home crowd "pupped up."

With two minutes remaining in the third quarter, Jason Bertels scored on a 22-yard touchdown run for the home team, making the score 22-0.

The Devil Pups defense held the Bulldogs off until the last five minutes when Dixon booted a 23-yard field goal.

Lejeune, with its second-string playing most of the 4th quarter, had limited success moving the ball, but managed to hold off the Dixon offense until the last five seconds of the game. The Bulldogs finally found the end zone as time expired.

Lejeune improved its record to 4-3 overall, 3-1 in the 1-A Coastal Plain Conference and is tied for 1st place with Pamlico.

Lejeune High School's (#32) Keith Anderson, runs during homecoming action. The Lejeune High School Devil Pups took a 22-9 victory over the Dixon High School Bulldogs Oct. 18., and improved its record to 4-3 overall.

 Radio Bn. ran the clock out on a drive to midfield and the game was called at halftime. Morale, Welfare and Recreation has established a policy for games to be called at time when the score is 45 or more to 0. SOI improved its record to 3 - 0, Radio fell to 0 - 2.

8th ESB, 14, MCAS New River, 6
 Fighting to maintain first place in the Red League, the 8th Engineer Support Battalion triumphed over Marine Corps Air Station 14 in a down-to-the-wire football game, Oct. 20, at the Intramural Football Field.

On the second play of the game, 8th ESB's tight end Kelon Brooks ran for 72 yards before stepping out of bounds at the 2-yard-line. It seemed that a touchdown was inevitable, but after a quarterback sneak up the field for a touchdown was called back on a holding penalty the New River defense stepped up denying 8th ESB passage to the end zone. New River took over on downs at their own 5-yard-line.

On a slow drive up the field in the beginning of the 2nd quarter, New River marched across the goal line to score first, but failed to make the two-point conversion. Dragging out the half, 8th ESB forced

New River to fumble, only to fumble themselves on the following play. Not feeling they got a fair deal, 8th ESB forced yet another fumble. Two plays later, New River cornerback Phillip Contee intercepted an ESB pass, the first of his two interceptions for the night, at the 4-yard-line and ran it back out to the 26-yard-line.

The half expired with New River leading 8th ESB 6-0.

New River started the 3rd quarter with possession, quickly giving it away. Shortly after 8th ESB regained control of the ball, Brooks made another spectacular run for 23 yards to the New River 8-yard-line, setting up a touchdown, followed by a two-point conversion putting 8th ESB in the lead.

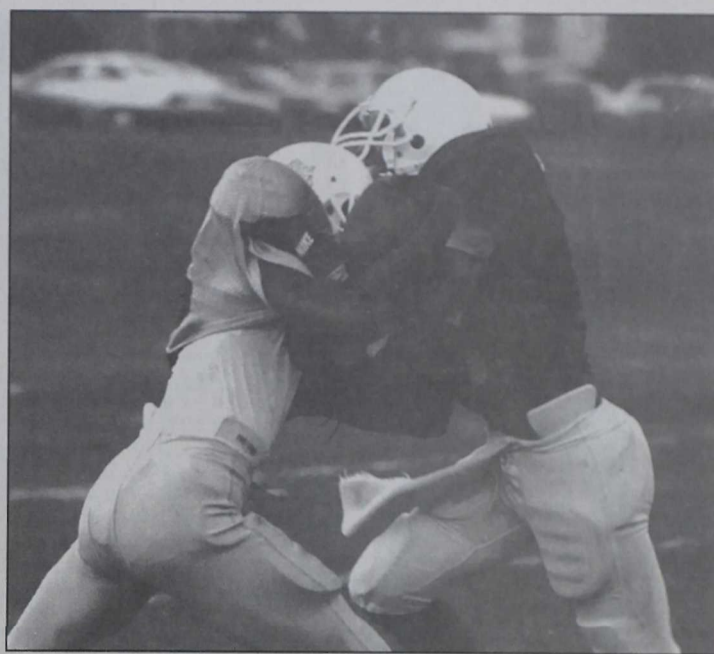

In the fourth quarter, 8th ESB quarterback Curtis Johnson threw a touchdown pass to Cicero Miller giving them a 14-6 lead.

Late in the 4th quarter, New River began to spark, moving the ball down to the 8th ESB 4-yard-line, but the 8th ESB defense came up with key tackles and finally sacking the New River quarterback at the 20-yard-line and ending the game with 8th ESB improving their record to 4-1, New River falling to 1-3.

Candles Make A Lovely Light

(NAPS)—Here's a glowing tribute to the brilliant past and bright present of candles and lighters.

Then: Since ancient times, humankind has relied on many forms of portable light.

A pine knot was probably a handy source of fire for primitive people.

Egyptian reliefs show the use of candles. Candlesticks are referred to in the Bible. The Romans dipped rope into pitch to form primitive candles.

Archaeologists have found candlesticks from the Minoan civilization on the Mediterranean isle of Crete that date back to 2,500 B. C. E.

During Medieval times, candles were commonplace.

America owes much to what candles must have illuminated for our founding fathers: Benjamin Franklin was the son of a candle maker.

Now: Although we rarely rely on torches or candles for light any more, we still enjoy their distinctive charm, especially at birthdays and holiday time.

To make candle lighting safer and a little more fun, local supermarkets, hardware, drug and mass merchandise stores now carry an attractive utility lighter with a guarded ignition lever and adjustable flame, a visible fuel supply and an "on/off" switch.

There's a safe and attractive new way to shed a little light in your life.

Called DecoLite® and made by Scripto-Tokai, it has an attractive ivory-colored body with black accents and a tapered nozzle.

In addition to using it to light candles of all kinds, you may find the DecoLite® comes in handy when you have to light food warmers, potpourri burners, fireplaces and pilot lights.

It's not only safer and surer than matches, it's generations ahead of a burning pine knot.

MODEL 7400 AUTO LOADING RIFLE

MODEL 7400 AUTOLOADER This is the gun that brought reliability, strength, and comfortable weight to semi-auto rifle actions. Add to this the fast-loading convenience and extra shell storage of drop-out, clip magazines. The gas-operated action smooths out recoil to a "push" instead of a "punch". And Remington's new engraving process now decorates both receiver panels with handsome scrollwork and game scenes. Five calibers include .243 Win., .280 Remington, .308 Win. and .30-06 (also available with 18 1/2 carbine barrel).

REPO SALE

OCT. 30 - NOV. 2

LOAN CENTER ON BRYNN MARR RD.

Look for the drawing ticket in Marine Federal's October Membership Newsletter. Drop it off during the Repo Sale. There will be hourly drawings on Saturday for a variety of car related prizes. The Grand Prize is one month's car payment or $300.*

Also on Saturday, WRNS will be broadcasting live from 11am-2pm.

*Cash is only for the winning member who does not have a vehicle loan with MFCU.

Stop by any branch for details or call 577-7333

A vehicle that can no longer be paid for is taken back by the financial institution that loaned the money to purchase the vehicle. When this happens the vehicle is called a repossession.

Why Should You Consider Buying A Repo?

At Marine Federal we check every repossession over very carefully, clean them, and get repairs done as needed before we sell them. The Director of Lending tells our staff "Don't put anything out for sale you wouldn't drive yourself!"

In addition, you'll find convenient, flexible financing options ... terms and payments that are easy on your budget. Our low loan rates are real money savers!

Repo prices are negotiable, within reason, so you can expect an excellent transportation value. And, we usually offer a nice selection of late model cars and trucks.

Stop by any branch of MFCU and ask for our current list of repos. No high pressure sales tactics! Find something you like, check it over, take it for a spin ... make us a reasonable offer, arrange financing, and you'll soon be on the road.

Watermelons consist of about 93 percent water and can weigh up to one hundred pounds.

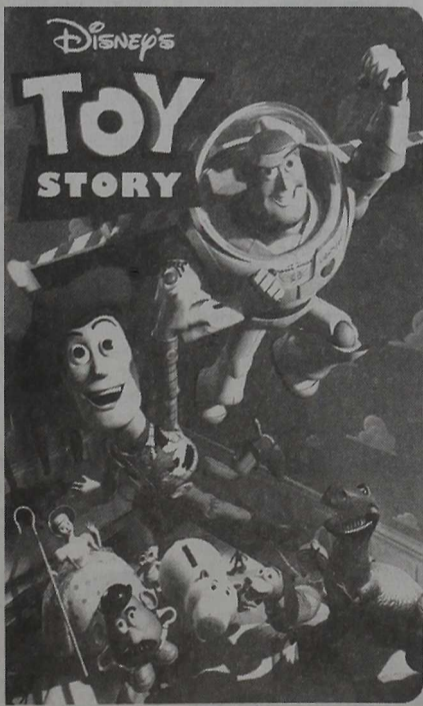

May Day dates back to ancient religious customs of the Romans who ruled Britain from A.D. 43 until the early 400s. On May 1, Romans worshipped Flora, the Roman goddess of springtime.

Although normal body temperature is believed to be 98.8, that's only the average. Different people can be perfectly healthy within two or three degrees of that figure.

The Chinese were the first known people to acquire more than one name. The Emperor Fushi decreed the use of family names, or surnames, about 2852 B.C.

Have A Great Halloween Without Spooking Your Orthodontist

(NAPS)—Costumed kids will soon go door-to-door, their trick-or-treat bags full of candy that could be just murder on braces.

"Candy and foods that are sticky and chewy, or hard and crunchy, create the biggest problems for kids—and adults—wearing braces or retainers," says Dr. Richard Albright, Jr., an orthodontist in practice in Lancaster, Pa.

food that could harm your braces may affect treatment—just as if you weren't wearing your headgear or rubber bands," says Dr. Albright.

For those in retainers, remember: remove your retainer before indulging—especially before bobbing for apples at that Halloween party. (Be sure no retainers are tossed out in post-party garbage—this happens more frequently than you might think.)

Brace yourself for National Orthodontic Health Month!

October is National Orthodontic Health Month, and orthodontists are warning their patients to steer clear of caramel, gum and taffy. They also advise that those in treatment should avoid hard and crunchy foods like popcorn, peanuts, ice and taco chips.

Orthodontists frequently remind patients that consuming "off-limit" foods could lengthen their treatment time. "Sneaking

What to do if you or your child has a candy-related accident? Contact your orthodontist immediately. Many doctors have an emergency phone number where they can be reached. "Usually small problems can be solved over the phone. Loose or protruding brackets or wires can be held in place by applying orthodontic wax to the area," notes Dr. Albright.

Halloween does not have to be completely candy-free. Plain chocolate candy is all right, provided you brush afterwards. "We want orthodontic treatment to be as positive as possible for patients," says Dr. Albright, "and cooperation this Halloween could lead to great results!"

For more information about orthodontics, or for the name of an orthodontist in your area, call 1-800 STRAIGHT (787-2444).

To ensure a spooktacular Halloween, bring home a hauntingly good video for your trick-or-treaters.

ADA Calls On Parents To Be Healthful Eating And Active Lifestyle Role Models For Children

(NAPS)—New school supplies, clothes and shoes. It must be back-to-school time. To help children start the school year right, The American Dietetic Association (ADA) is appealing to adults to be positive role models for healthful eating and active lifestyles.

"Everyday actions of parents and caregivers can make a great impact on the health and well-being of youngsters," says Doris Derelien, Ph.D., R.D. (registered dietitian), immediate past-president of ADA and co-chair of the association's Child Nutrition and Health Campaign. "Children often do what they see. So, if mom and dad are careful to take time out for physical activity and not to skip meals, their children are more likely to develop the same habits."

ADA is urging parents and caregivers to make sure children start the day with breakfast. "Research shows hungry children can't do their best work and that breakfast actually helps children do better in the classroom and on the playground," Derelien says.

Preliminary evidence shows skipping breakfast affects the way the brain works and can diminish school performance, especially in children who are at nutritional risk, according to ADA.

"Breakfast time doesn't have to be a chore—it can be a fun time to hear everyone's plans for the day ahead, get quizzed for that day's spelling test, or reminisce about the good time you had on summer vacation," Derelien says. "A child who grows up watching adults eat breakfast will be more likely to carry the habit into teen years and on through adulthood."

includes several kinds of ready-to-eat cereals, raisins, fruit, juice, milk, yogurt and breads. Kids will enjoy preparing their own breakfast just like the adults.

Encourage children to help plan a breakfast menu each week that includes a variety of healthful and fun foods—take a break from the ordinary and try some not-so-traditional breakfast foods. It's not what you eat, but when you eat that makes it breakfast.

It's also important to set an example for kids by making physical activity a part of everyday life, Derelien adds. Physical activity offers a long list of benefits: increased stamina and energy, improved motor coordination, strength, dexterity, balance, flexibility, and increased self-esteem, according to ADA.

rather than the days you miss and encourage participation, not performance," Derelien stresses.

Tips For Fun Fitness

- Make walking the dog a family outing
- let kids wash the family car
- walk or bike to the store; park away from the mall and walk
- hold birthday parties at skating rink or bowling alley
- let kids keep a family fitness calendar
- plan family fitness outings at least once a week
- plan active indoor activities

Participation in organized activities can also teach valuable lessons about discipline and sportsmanship. "Volunteering with children for after-school programs, clubs and teams that promote physical fitness is a great idea," Derelien says.

"Remember to always be positive—talk about the days you do exercise, rather than the days you miss and encourage participation, not performance," Derelien stresses.
