CDAC: A WEEK IN THE LIFE

SGT. ROBERT C. JENKS

DAY FIVE

Editor's note:

The following article is Part 5 in a five-part series on the Marine Corps Base Consolidated Drug and Alcohol Center's Level II workshop. These articles examine the change in attitude and positive growth experience of 16 Marines who attended the week-long workshop in April. The names are ficticious, but the attitudes and situations are real.

A week has passed since the 16 Marines came together from all parts of the base. Their body language once reflected embarrassment, isolation and introversion had been replaced by an optimistic and confident bearing. Day Five has finally come.

Even though their minds wandered toward the 72-hour pass for the Easter holiday, there was still work to be done.

Group was run by the students, not by the counselor. It was up to each of them to start the discussions of where they were, where they are and where they would go.

After all, it would be up to them for real when they left in three hours.

Rasta B. spoke first.

"I still can't believe what happened this week. I came in here with a closed mind. Nothing good was happening to me. I was looking at nothing but the brig, then it was back on the street. I learned that regardless of what happened to me yesterday, I have to accept it and keep trying to follow what my heart says - not what my friends say or do, but what I say to myself. I will go to the brig for a long time. I accept that. What I do after that

Empty Arms offers comfort

Story and photos by CPL. KIM BUCKNER

A mother stirs from sleep. Glancing at the bedside clock, she notices the time is 3 a.m. Shelly, her child, has slept passed her 2 a.m. feeding. Glancing into the crib next to her bed she sees the outline of her beautiful baby girl's head bathed in the soft glow of the night light. She moves to the edge of the bed thinking about how big Shelly is getting. Maybe the nightly feeding will soon become a memory. After tucking the blanket snugly around her baby she slips back into bed.

The alarm jars her awake. Smiling, she glances at the crib. It was only a dream. The crib is empty. Suddenly the pain begins again — complete emptiness and loss are overwhelming. It has been four months since her death but she can't bring herself to put away the crib.

What do parents do when they've lost the most precious part of their lives? Is it possible to pick up the pieces?

Families who are involved in Empty Arms, Inc. are proof that it is possible. The group gives families a chance to talk about their pain and sorrow with others experiencing similar losses.

Letters to the Editor

I feel compelled to write this letter with a tremendous amount of disgust, and no small amount of sarcasm. It concerns the ongoing castration of the United States Marine Corps. What prompted this, was the glorification, in the 17 May issue of "The Globe" of a certain battalion falling out for a so-called PT session of aerobics. Aerobics . . . think about it. Aerobics and the United States Marine Corps go together about as well as Mother Teresa and a squad of grunts pulling libo in Subic together.

As I loudly proclaim my displeasure in reading said article, I was ribbed by one of the platoon commanders (a real Marine)-that the young lady pictured in "The Globe" leading the Marines could probably aerobic my manhood into the dirt. I don't doubt that aerobics is probably tough, although I never have and never will aerobicize. I am also equally sure that a ballet practice-session is just as physically demanding but I'm not about to jump into a pair of tights and

If you want a change of pace in PT, instead of the usual "right face, double time, harch!" routine try a flack-jacketed push-up run (real PT). Believe me, after a few miles of 10 push-ups every 75-100 yards, with flack jackets, you've done one fine PT session.

Let's stop and regroup. This is the Marine Corps, by God! We lift weights, run long distances with heavy loads, enjoy the smell of cordite, actually like a short haircut, etc., (real Marine stuff). We don't put mousse in our hair, wear an earring in our left lobe, drink guava and kiwi fruit wine coolers, or do aerobics (not real Marine stuff).

OUR ENVIRONMENT

BY SGT. ROBERT C. JENKS

If the current rate of garbage and trash continues to pour into the landfill here, the 100-acre site will probably close by January 1994, said Don Gurganus, base grounds/structures general foreman.

The landfill on Sneads Ferry Road is the final resting place for more than 225 tons of refuse daily. The waste comes from housing areas, the industrial area and the many dumpters scattered across the base. This garbage includes cardboard, plastics, aluminum and other recyclable materials.

With a little effort, people here can extend the life of the landfill and help to clean the environment by recycling.

The North Carolina Wildlife Federation has published a list of environmental tips that can serve as a reminder the next time someone pitches plastic, aluminum cans or cardboard boxes.

Some tips are:

- ☐ Recycle newspapers, aluminum, glass and tin
- ☐ Use cloth diapers
- ☐ Reuse egg cartons and paper bags
- Use rags instead of paper towels
 Use cloth napkins instead of paper ones
- ☐ Mend and repair rather than discard and replace
- ☐ Buy goods in reusable or recyclable
- containers
- Compost food scraps
- ☐ Use rechargeable batteries Snip six pack rings before discarding
- ☐ Use reusable containers
- ☐ Use reusable or unbleached coffee filters

For more information on how you can help make a difference in the environment, contact the North Carolina Wildlife Federation at P.O. Box 10626, Raleigh, N.C., 27605, or call (919) 833-1923.

The only things that Marines should have to do to music are "snapping to" for colors, and passing T.K. Whiteman GySgt., USMC

To the Editor:

Like most Marines, I don't like things to change. I liked the old C-rats, the M151, and I really wish we had the old steel pot. But I'll never admit to being close-minded. So, when one of my staff NCOs suggested that we include an aerobic workout into one of our battalion PT sessions, I said I would.

Aerobics. A bunch of young ladies dancing to loud, fast-paced music. Kim Basinger in tight leotards and ankle warmers. Hardly the type of training to make the Soviet Naval Infantry cringe and run for cover. But it's been popular for a while and variety in a PT program is essential. As most Marines know, the most successful PT programs include conditioning activities, competitive events and military physical skill development.

We started off doing various stretching and warn up exercises. Neck, arms, legs, thighs, stomacl hamstringes and calves. Then came the actus aerobics. Before long everyone was drenched i sweat. The music was loud and the pace fast. Fina ly, the paced slowed down and we started what seen ed liked 30 minutes of stomach exercises; first, ha situps, then elbows to knees, then elbows to alternat knees, and then the entire series again while keepin our feet in the air. By the time it was over, everyon was hurting and everyone said it was a fantasti workout. Morale was sky high when we ended ou Battalion PT session with a four mile run.

Still, aerobics is not for everyone. Some people jus can't adjust to change. But if you're interested in pur ting a little variety into your PT program and wan a rigorous workout that stresses aerobic fitness and develops all the muscle groups, try it.

MCI experiencing delays

The Marine Corps Institute is currently experiencing delays in the processing of some requests for non-resident and MOS course material due to errors in the formatting of the requests made through the unit diary. As a result, students who have been enrolled in MCI courses through their unit diaries may not be receiving course materials in a timely manner.

To avoid delays, units requesting MCI course material through the unit diary should keep in mind the following: A double "Z" should be used after all three-digit course designators/numbers, a single "Z" shold be used after a four-digit designator/number, and leading or trailing zeros other than those in the course number should not be used. Other formatting procedures can be found in MCO P1080.35 (PRIM).

Music groups accommodated almost everyone's tastes. The Fabulous Boardwalk Band played beach music, The Voltage Brothers performed top 40, The Creek rock 'n' rolled the crowd, Capt. Cook & The Coconutz played party music and the Awareness Art Ensemble brought the sounds of reggae to Camp Lejeune.

CHCS begins in pharmacy

The Naval Hospital Pharmacy Department is now using the Composite Health Care System for processing prescriptions.

While the system is being installed, waiting times may be a little longer than in the past. Your patience while the computer system gets firmly established is accordiated.

One way beneficiaries can help is to make sure they are registered in the CHCS. If not, then the CHCS cannot fill prescriptions. Each patient must be registered as soon as possible to avoid any delays in processing prescription.

This is particularly important for people bringing their civilian prescriptions to the Naval Hospital pharmacy to be filled.

Forms to register new patients and update established patients are now available in the hospital Pharmacy waiting room.

If anyone has questions about the new pharmacy system, call Petty Officer 1st Class Kathy Schmahl or Petry Officer 2nd Class Rehder at 451-4137.

CHCS helps staff care for patients

The Composite Health Care System is a computerized health information system that will assist staff in caring for patients and managing the hospital.

The Department of Defense established the Tri-Service Medical Information System program to coordinate the move to automated health care systems at Navy, Army and Air Force medical treatment facilities.

CHCS was created by an experienced health care staff from the three services representing all clinical and administrative areas. CHCS was designed by hospital personnel to work for hospital personnel.

What is it? Automated: as a computer, CHCS can store vast amounts of clinical and administrative data. CHCS rapidly compiles this data and produces reports needed for patient care and hospital administration.

Integrated: CHCS facilitates communicate within the hospital and between outlying branch clinics and the hospital. When a department enters information, it is immediately available to authorized users. CHCS provides the user with up-to-date patient information when it is needed most.

Efficient: CHCS will perform many routine tasks that take time, allowing the hospital staff patient care. For example, CHCS automatically processes radiology orders and results are readily available to the requesting physician at a computer terminal in the clinic or doctor's office.

Reliable: CHCS improves the availability and accuracy of patient data. System safeguards prevent loss of patient data. CHCS is a system you can count on!

What does it do?

CHCS will be used by each large work center such as: Patient Administration, Patient Appointment and Scheduling, nursing, pharmacy, laboratory, radiology, and clinical dietetics. many hospital coments will use the CHCS system to perform a and administrative tasks. CHCS will help be staff by: maintaining patient records from ade to disposition, processing clinical orders and a issuing alerts for activities that require immediatention, producing patient care and administrative reports, assisting in monitoring the quality of peare, tracking supplies and equipment, are porting personnel management.

What are the benefits to you?

Fewer repeated test and examinations d a misplaced or delayed results.

Past medical records are readily available w , formation you may have forgotten.

Health care personnel will spend less time for sorting and organizing your information as a spend more time with patients.

Less time spent waiting to schedule appoints getting prescriptions filled or discussing test r with health care provider.

Who will use it?

Only authorized health care personnel may use system.

Only authorized health care personnel with a passwords can enter or look up information.

Actual health records will be kept in the Ma Records Department to look up information Actual health records will be kept in the Ma

Records Department as before.

To make the system work better for you en that you are registered in CHCS prior to your hospital visit. You can do this by visiting one registration clerks or by filling out a registration Remember, you must be registered before you be seen in the clinics or have a prescription filst the hospital

CHAMPUS answers

Need help or answers about CHAMPUS policies or benefits?

Check with your nearest military medical facility's health benefits advisor or your state's CHAMPUS claims processor. One or the other should be able to help you with most problems related to claims or benefit questions.

Your health benefits advisor can tell you how to get in touch with the claims processor, and can also provide you with a CHAMPUS Handbook, fact sheets, claim forms, and more. The phone number for the Health Benefits Office at Naval Hospital here is 451-4150.

Pay those medical bills

Some people mistakenly believe that the government is supposed to pay all of the medical bills or families of military members. This idea just won't go away, despite the fact that only active-duty servicemembers are guaranteed free medical care. There's nothing aywhere in the law making CHAMPUS or any other government agency responsible for dependents' medical bills.

Legal responsibility for such charges rests solely with the patient or the patient's parents or legal quardian.

CHAMPUS is a cost-sharing program whose jib is to process claims as quickly and accurately as possible. But if a CHAMPUS claim is not filed, or if it is lost, mishandled or denied, the patient is still responsible for the bill. If a bill is not paid, it's the patient-not CHAMPUS-who could be sued.

If CHAMPUS payment is delayed for any reit might be advisable to go ahead and pay ther especially a small one, even if you can only make tial monthly payments. Most creditors will as these arrangements, and the laws in some stated tect people from collections and harassment instances. If you have any further questions, please tact the Naval Hospital Health Benefits offi-451-4150.

Carnival offers chills and thrills ay has been with the carnival for four years. He's almost sadistic. His sadism, however, is tempered with the genuine thrill of watching how many people can maintain their intestinal fortitude on "HIS" ride.

"Not many people can handle the 'Dive Bomber," he said laughing as another Marine victim stumbled from his ride and weaved between a intent gang, carrying newlywon, immense toy crayons, tubes of toothpaste and electric guitars, stampeding toward the next ride.

Are carnivals for kids? Hardly.

With summer, it seems, comes the carnival. Its ability to crack stone faces into bubbling reflections of youth is universal.

Particularly at night-the spinning blurs of neon, the thick smell of cotton candy, sweating hot dogs, caramel apples; a cacophony of screams, laughs and lovers' giggles.

The thrill of a ride's risk and the chance for a stuffed prize-blends the fantasy of the carnival.

Ray dares anyone. At Cherry Point, two weeks ago he "got" 25 Marines in five days that risked "HIS" ride.

He said it's fun to watch people have fun. "That's why I love the carnival."

Maybe it's the carnival that brings summer.

Artist documents Marines in Panama

U.S. NAVAL STATION, Panama— From his makeshift studio - a mixed medium of gravel and blacktopped park ing lot, Tony Stadler sat on an unpainted, oblong, wooden box and selected his model. An obliging Marine driver drove a light armored vehicle from a lineup of 14, and Stadler began a meticulously detailed sketch of it.

Periodically looking up and squinting through gold-rimmed glasses, the 48-yearold artist with graying beard briefly focused on his model before looking back down again, and penciling more lines onto the drawing.

Stadler, a historical documentation artist from Appleton, Wis., was invited here through the Marine Corps Historical Program. Though his "creative brief" was three pages, it can easily be summed as, recording the actions of Marines in Panama during and after Operation Just Cause, and the role played by the LAV's," Stadler said.

He is midway through a week's worth of preliminary research, which includes taking photos and sketching diagrams. Then, this project will take Stadler to Camp Lejeune, N.C. where he will talk to individual Marines who participated in Operation Just Cause before beginning actual work on the assignment.

Stadler, who earned a fine arts degree in 1964 from St. Norbert College, near Appleton, is no stranger to the Marine Corps. After graduating, he enlisted and went to Vietnam as a combat artist. He returned to Appleton in 1968, concentrating on documenting the decaying industrial area known as "The Flats."

'In the last five years, I've done a series of paintings for construction companies.

Stadler says. "I've also concentrated on historical sites in the (Appleton) area."

Getting the Panama assignment "happened rather suddenly," he said. "I first expressed interest in working with the Marine Corps on any upcoming assignments in mid April.'

Simultaneously, the Marine Corps just happened to be looking for an artist for this assignment. It was an ideal exa of "being in the right place at the time," Stadler said

As for what his finished work will like, Stadler modestly decl predictions. But he referenced present tropical-rain surround hinting, "my acrylics may take lightly washed effect

The fly was gone. Maybe it died in its desperate attempts to break through what it couldn't see - the pane. Maybe it found a door leading into a warming spring afternoon - to freedom.

The obnoxious clock ticked on.

Sea Knights airborne soon

Some Marine Corps CH-46 helicopters will soon e airborne, but a mechanical problem continues to round the majority of the Sea Kinght Fleet, ccording to HQMC.

All 342 H-48 helicopters in the Navy and Marine lorps inventory have been restricted from flight since he middle of May, following the investigation of a CH-46 accident at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

The action was taken as a precautionary measure o correct a potential problem of excessive wear on part within the aft rotor system. So far, a dozen CH-46's have been inspected, and about half of them have not met safety standards.

Inspectors are currently classifying the aircraft into one of three categories: Aircraft which show no sign of wear on the part in question will be returned to full flight status. If greater than 1/1,000 of an inch of wear is detected, the aircraft will be grounded, and the part replaced prior to the next flight. If wear is less than 1/1,000 of an inch, the aircraft will be allowed to fly, but must undergo a full reinspection after 200 hours of flight.

Three teams are currently inspecting aircraft and standardizing procedures for additional teams to follow. A total of 15 teams are hoped to be sent soon.

REQUEST MAST

Marines and Sailors have the right to "Request Mast" as guaranteed by U.S. Navy Regulations, 1973. This is the right of any Marine or Sailor to speak with his commanding officer. The request must be forwarded up the chain of command reaching the commanding officer in a reasonable period of time. The servicemember does not have to reveal his reason to anyone except his CO. In this system of checks and balances, this invitation is a checks and balances, this invitation is a privilege granted every servicemember.

We have another right guaranteed by a Higher Authority as found in Jeremiah 33:3. It is the right of "Request Mast" with the Lord of Hosts. God says, "Call unto me and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things, which the knowest not." We have an open invitation to come into the presence of God with our needs. The stars on His shoulder are real, the very stars of the universe, which He created without number. What an invitation!

Request mast is a simple process which brings the servicemember into the presence of someone who can help. Prayer is a simple process that brings us to the Throne of One who gives even when we don't deserve to receive. Through prayer He does "ex-ceeding abundantly above all we could ask." He can and will help if we ask. Do you have problems that you cannot solve? RE-QUEST MAST with the Lord!

MCI needs Marines to develop training material

Contributing writer

Enter the large partitioned room which serves as a home to the Marine Corps Institute's Specialized Skill training Division and you are immediately struck by the silence. Unlike most other areas in the Corps where the sounds of rifles, tools or Marines hollering permeates the air, the atmosphere within SSTD is ... well ... studious. This is where the Marine Corps MOS-related correspondence courses are

The Marines in SSTD are tasked with carrying on the original mission of MCIthe development of training materials to enhance Marines' skills and job profi-

"These courses have undergone significant changes in the past few years, specifically in regard to the instructional technology which shapes the way a course is designed and information is presented to the student," said Fred Roberts, the academic director in SSTD.

The selection of staff NCOs to serve as distance training instructors has taken on increased importance. Because of the change in the focus of the courses, instructors must have analytical skills and be able to present precise information through the written word to students with no face-to-face interaction.

The selection process begins with the monitors who screen the records of potential candidates to look for outstanding performers with MOS credibility and a minimum of seven years MOS time. Potential instructors should have a GT of 110 and ideally be serving in a billet related to the subject about which they will write. Other factors considered are post high school education, formal school instructor experience and personal experience, since instructors also serve as ceremonial marchers and hosts.

Candidates chosen by the monitor are sent to Marine Barracks, Washington, D.C. for further screening. This three-day process includes taking a standardized test in written English skills and writing a short essay on a topic in the particular occupational field. This phase of the selection process carries the most weight since instructors must be able to write at 10.5 grade level.

Candidates go through a series of interviews during their visit to ensure they have no significant personal or financial difficulties

Through these criteria, 36 staff NCOs are chosen as distance training instructors whose courses train nearly 200,000 students a year.

Currently there are six billets in which there are vacancies or expected instructor rotations. They are:

0193 GvSgt, needed immediately. 0369 GySgt. needed June 90, 0369 SSgt. needed January 91, 1349 GySgt. needed October 90, 1833 GySgt. needed December 90, 3043 SSgt. needed December 90.

Because of the high demand for course availability and accuracy, we must have each billet filled," said 1st Lt. Mike Langley, officer-in-charge of the artillery instructors. "When there is a gap in a particular occupational field, no courses in that field are researched, revised or written. And the ability to rebound from a gap in a billet is difficult because it takes eight months on average to develop a course.

Though duty as an instructor is often demanding, the rewards can significant.

"We have the opportunity to repr our MOSs as duty experts, as we representing the Marine Corps by ticipating in Barracks parades ceremonies," said MSgt. D. L. Law communications instructor and mer of the ceremonial parade staff.

Challenge and triumph

Marines' determination writes testament to 30-year friendship

Story and photos by CPL. DAVE MUNDY

Carlos Rodriguez slid down the rope climb at the end of the obstacle course, smiled briefly, and stepped into a bearhug from his buddy, John DeBruycker.

Both seemed too exhausted to speak. After 30 years of friendship, they didn't need to say much.

A year ago, the 47-year-old Rodriguez was told he had terminal cancer. On May 31, he and his old Marine buddy DeBruycker held their own against the Leathernecks and Sailors of Camp Lejeune in the Carlos Rodriguez Combat Readiness Challenge.

The Challenge was a five-event test of standard Marine skills: timed push-ups, dead-hang pull-ups, rifle assembly/disassembly, fireman's carry and obstacle course run.

It was a personal triumph of body and spirit for Rodriguez, the 1978 Mr. Universe bodybuilder, who not only inspired other

Summer safety is high priority

Sam O'Leary knows about hazardous boating incidents firsthand. A few years ago he and some friends were sailing when the wind shifted and blew them out to sea into the arms of an awaiting storm.

During their 18-hour ordeal they lost their sails, boom and the boat capsized. Luckily, they were able to make repairs and return safely to shore.

"We could have prevented everything if we had checked the equipment better and checked the weather report," said O'Leary, aquatic supervisor, Special Services.

O'Leary learned his lesson and strongly encourages boaters and swimmers of all skill levels to attend the classes offered at Gottschalk Marina.

"We can sit around and preach safety rules and regulations," O'Leary said, "but mishaps occur when people don't follow those rules."

Before a boat may be checked out from the marina, the Basic Boating Class, held every Saturday at 9 a.m., must be taken. Some of the areas covered in the safety classes are the wearing of life jackets, boat handling and what areas are safe to boat in.

"The number one factor in boating accidents is drinking," said Ron Jamieson, marina manager. "It's just like driving a car. For their own safety, we won't allow someone to check out gear if they've been drinking.

"We had a boy slam a Jet Ski into the back of a patrol boat," Jamieson said. "It's kind of like riding a bike. Once you get good at it, you think you can ride with no hands. People get careless. But with the new classes we're offering, hopefully something will stick."

An Aquatic Day Camp, sponsored by the MWR, will be offered, beginning in mid-June, at the marina. Children ages 10-16 will be trained and certified in Red Cross Emergency Water Safety and small boat operation.

Safe swimming as well as boating habits are also vital. Ideas like not swimming alone, getting to land if there's an approaching storm and not swimming on an empty stomach, contrary to not eating before you swim, are all common sense, O'Leary said.

"It's not the person who's afraid of the water that gets hurt. It's the one who shows off," O'Leary said.

F.A.S.T. 'Fittest Five'

BY CAPT. KEITH OLIVER

PANAMA—The Norfolk, Va. based Fleet Anti-Terrorist Security Team Company claimed the title of the "Fittest Five" during a unique athletic competition here recently.

Besting a field of eight teams from various components of Marine Forces Panama, the FAST leathernecks outperformed their nearest rivals, 425-393, in a multifaceted strength and endurance test. Each Marine in the five-man teams was required to churn out his individual "max" at his chosen exercise station while his teammates simultaneously tackled their own events. The athletes worked within a three-minute time limit on pushups, pull-ups, sit-ups, squats and bench press. Each iron-pumper lifted barbells loaded with steel equivalent to his own body weight.

First Lt. Jose Latorre, FAST platoon commander, paced his charges with 104 repetitions in the squat competition to take individual honors in the event. His platoon sergeant, Sgt. Alonzo Evans, was push-up champion with 127.

push-up champion with 127.

Two members of the "Old Corps" were overall winners: LtCol. Bob Fawcett racked-up 48 pull-ups while Maj. Mondo Deguzman pumped-out 49 bench presses. The Marine leaders, most of whom are "fortysomething," came in second place overall.

cond place overall.

Whereas, responsible boat operators learn about their boats safety equipment, and the environment in which they operate their boats, and

Whereas, in 80 percent of all boating fatalities, the drivers have never taken a safe boating course, and

Whereas, in 90 percent of all boating fatalities, the passengers were not using a personal flotation device, and competitors but also won one of the events. He cranked out 30 dead-hang pull-ups only minutes after doing more than 100 push-ups.

"He shocked everyone," exclaimed LCpl. Charles Jackson of 2nd Recon Bn., the overall winner of the Challenge. "You could see what he had in him ... and it brought out the best in everyone."

"It's proof of what I said before," Rodriguez said, "that if you keep a positive attitude in your mind, you can do anything you want."

The Challenge originated when Rodriguez visited DeBruycker in New Jersey. They had enlisted in the Marine Corps on the buddy system in 1961, and served at Camp Lejeune. DeBruycker suggested taking a vacation to see how their old stomping ground had grown.

"That's when we decided to challenge the Marines," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez, active in promoting events in his hometown of Tucson, Ariz., wondered if he "could get in shape one more time."

"I wanted to do something to help cancer research," said Rodriguez, who has run his own fitness center in Tucson since his retirement from competitive bodybuilding. "By doing this, I hope I can give an incentive and hope to people who are sick, who have cancer ... that it's never too late. You can always do what you want to do."

A letter to MGen. Donald R. Gardner, CG, MCB, got the ball rolling. A few weeks later, 2nd Recon Bn. played hos to Rodriguez and DeBruycker as the moved into the barracks at Onslow Beac to begin training.

"This is like a dream come true, Rodriguez said. "How many people ge the chance to go back in time?

"This 'good time' has turned out to be 'back to boot camp' for us," he added "but I've enjoyed every minute of it."

The Challenge also underscored the friendship between brother Marines.
