Recon scuba divers perform vital missions

by PFC K.J. Bloomer

Air bubbles rising around them, the Marine scuba divers swim through the murky surf of Onslow Beach. The afternoon sun is brilliant, but all the divers see an eerie greenish glow filtering down around them.

Silently probing through the salt water, the divers search for a communication unit an AAV lost while involved in a tip-to-shore exercise.

One of the divers spies something on the ocean floor; he motions to his partner and the two dive further down to investigate the object. It's the missing communication unit.

Swimming closer to the unit, one diver slogs it from the sand. With a thumbs up, the divers carry the communication unit to the Zodiac boat waiting on the surface.

"Some operations that employ self-contained underwater breathing apparatus (scuba) gear involve search and salvage of valuable equipment," said Staff Sergeant Mike Maring, Staff Noncommissioned Officer in Charge of the 2d Reconnaissance Battalion special equipment locker. "If a vessel drops a radio during an exercise, or a large piece of equipment sinks, a scuba team could be needed to assess the situation and try to retrieve the gear. If the equipment was very large and heavy, a 500 pound capacity lift bag would be used to get the gear to the surface."

"A less pleasant but important job is body recovery when necessary, and underwater reconnaissance of piers and bridges also be done," said the scuba qualified Marine. "But the main purpose of scuba techniques is insertion of teams into an area. If a beach was heavily guarded, Marines could scuba in unnoticed up to the breaker line and then stick their heads up to see what's around."

All MAU's going out include a team of scuba-qualified personnel in their crew. The divers can check directly for mines or damage to the hull of the vessel. Without divers, this task would be impossible.

To become scuba qualified, the Marines attend a five-week Navy divers school in Panama City, Fla., or Coronado, Calif. Upon successful completion of this course, the Marines are awarded the scuba diver's badge. The badge is a silver diving helmet.

"During the scuba training, divers are taught physics, physiology, diving medicine and first aid. They are also taught all of the scuba equipment and its use," said Maring. "To qualify for scuba training, a Recon Marine must be a first class swimmer and pass a special physical."

The battalion rates 100 scuba qualified Marines, and they are always busy with floats. The scuba training can be tough, depending on who you ask. Most Marines sent to the school come back scuba qualified. There are hazards below the surface, but knowing your equipment and understanding safety precautions is the best weapon against these dangers.

Some undersea residents present potential hazards to the scuba diver. These include jellyfish, stingrays, sharks and barracudas in warmer waters. However, the most common and lethal dangers involve elements a diver can control.

"I've been on over 200 dives and observing safety rules has made them routine. Scuba divers always dive in teams of at least two, and a safety diver is also posted on the surface in a Zodiac. This

'buddy system' is helpful in case of injury, entanglements or equipment malfunctions," Maring explained.

Preventing the bends is one crucial safety measure to divers. Bends occur when a surfacing diver does not breathe enough or ascends too rapidly from a deep dive. Air bubbles are forced through the lungs and into the bloodstream as the water pressure around the diver decreases, causing death when they reach the heart or brain. Another danger to divers is overexposure to cold water.

"A diver is safe and can work comfortably with no wet suit in water 70 degrees," said Maring. "At 40 degrees a diver without a dry suit can die within an hour. Considering these factors, it's important to choose the proper suit for the conditions you will be diving into."

In addition to diving gear, Marines can also carry weapons, ammo and communication gear. The gear is protected in specially-designed waterproof bags that can be partially inflated to make transport easier. During short distance dives, service rifles can be heavily coated with a lubricant and transported.

"A Marine can carry any weapons underwater he can carry on land. Most combat dives will be in water which is less than 20 feet deep," said Maring. "Divers also carry knives, but the knives are used to detangle the diver from kelp, seaweed or stray line underwater and for prying. Full diving gear weighs about 100 pounds on land, and although it does not limit mobility underwater severely, it's awkward. I guarantee you want to be untangled as soon as possible."

"A knife is really a tool and not a weapon. Tackling a shark with a diving knife and stabbing it may seem heroic, but it's not very practical," he said.

Diving knives are just one of the many pieces of equipment that are maintained at the 2d Recon special equipment locker. All scuba gear necessary to make a dive is kept ready at the locker.

"We basically repair and maintain all the scuba gear that is required for a team to make a dive," Maring said. "That includes essential gear such as air tanks, life preservers, regulators, wet suits, dry suits and depth gauges. We also have three different types of boats and the motors used during dive training and operations."

A lot of maintenance is needed on air tanks and regulators. The locker has specialized equipment to clean the tanks and repair the regulators. These two pieces of equipment are vital to the diver's safety and survival, it's important that they are in good condition.

The special equipment locker keeps all scuba gear squared away and ready for action, whether for search, underwater reconnaissance or insertion into an area. The 2d Recon scuba divers and equipment are ready to complete underwater missions, wherever and whenever necessary.

COMMENTARY Justice, even for Lady Liberty

Story by PFC K. J. Bloomer

The fireworks are over; the ants are carrying away the last of the big picnic. Burnt fireworks canisters and remnants litter the lawn, which is slightly worse for wear after the big picnic.

Leaving us with red, white and blue memories and a slight sunburn, the Fourth of July has marched patriotically past us for the 210th time.

On our 100th birthday, France presented us with a statue designed by Frederick Bartholdi commemorating our dedication to freedom and ideals of equality. The Statue of Liberty, or in full, Liberty Enlightening the World, was destined to become an international symbol of America's open arms to oppressed immigrants, their aspirations and dreams. The 152-foot copper Lady rises nobly above New York Harbor . . . the hope and promise of a better life beyond the golden door.

The Statue of Liberty was rededicated this Independence Day after extensive renovation. The unique symbol of our idealism is once again structurally sound and in good repair. The Lady looks good for over 100.

As an American, I am proud to have been a part of the renovation effort by contributing a $25 donation to the fund. Many Americans happily dished out dollars to aid the ailing Lady with pride and patriotism.

So did the sponsors, flooding us with commercial after commercial featuring The Statue of Liberty as the focus. The Star Spangled Banner playing auspiciously in the background, the Lady was patronized and commercialized from every possible angle, for every possible reason.

The commercials aired on television consistently included the same theme: here's a picture of the Lady and here's our product or service. How beer is tied to the statue eludes me, but the beer producers found a way. I was expecting to see her torch replaced with a can of underarm deodorant at any moment, an insurance policy substituted for her tablet. Perhaps the crown which adorns her head could have been replaced with a baseball hat bearing some witty logo or slogan.

I realize the sponsors paid enormous sums of money to produce their commercials, and a royalty was paid to the Lady's renovation fund for the use of her face, name and reputation. Perhaps they thought the ads were tasteful, but, what price Liberty? She is a strong and lasting symbol of our devotion to freedom . . . is this symbol so easily sold and abused by advertising? Given a choice, would she have endorsed these products and agreed to this sale of her image?

Perhaps I become too emotional concerning this issue, but the Lady evokes some very strong commitments in me. She is, realistically, but a statue, copper and re-inforcements, incapable of speech or feelings. Yet what the Statue of Liberty says is immense and profound. She is the symbol of hope and a vision of a better life to the world. I hate to have American ideals up for sale to the highest bidders . . . one of the symbols of American advertised like a beer can. Our integrity was severely lacking.

BANG!

Story by Cpl. Jamee Sosa

Camp Lejeune area families viewed a patriotic celebration of music, cannons and fireworks at the annual 4th of July festivities at W.P.T. Field July 3.

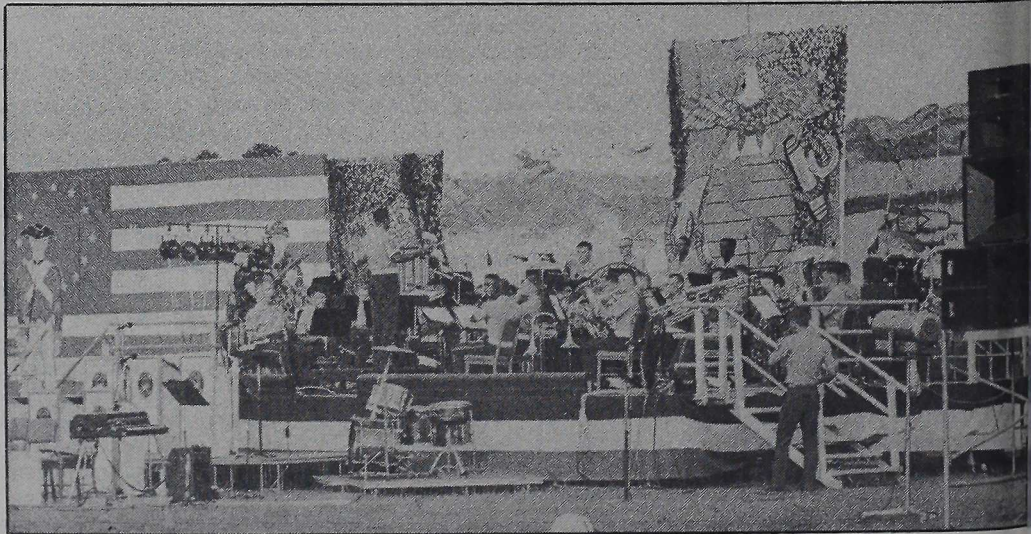

The 2d Marine Division Band entertained the crowd on a cool, breezy evening by performing a variety of music, including military marches, jazz and popular tunes.

The highlight of the concert came at the end of the show, when the band performed Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture accompanied by howitzers from Golf Battery, 3d Battalion, 10th Marine Regiment.

After the 1812 Overture, the band went into its rendition of Stars and Stripes Forever. The fireworks display began, the holiday flag was raised behind the podium and a Marine dressed as the Statue of Liberty appeared on a platform. The crowd cheered and roared its approval.

The crowd "oohed" and "aahed" as the fireworks display flashed blue, yellow, red and green lights across the sky. The finale was a large display of bursting light as all the remaining fireworks were fired.

Lejeune families celebrated the nation's 210th birthday and Lady Liberty's 100th birthday with a song and a bang.

(Top) Brilliant fireworks filled the sky during the celebration July 3 at W.P.T. Hill Field. (Center) This colorful backdrop was displayed behind the 2d Marine Division Band during its concert. ## New Checks: But they still spend the same way they used to

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

Another payday, another line and another check . . . but not the same old reliable green hard check that isn't supposed to be folded, stapled, or spindled, . . . whatever spindled means.

The new checks, which many Americans began receiving in December, 1985, have finally hit Camp Lejeune this month.

"It's a part of the new modernization effort of the United States Treasury," said

Debra Gwynn, assistant base disbursing officer. "The checks will replace the punched-card checks that are now obsolete."

The new check features a full-length engraving of the Statue of Liberty, as well as a faint close-up of her face and torch, printed over a multicolored background ranging from light blue to pale peach. A pattern of the letters "USA" is printed in pale blue on the reverse side.

"The checks are now printed on paper which costs about one-third that of the card stock," Gwynn said. "Since the paper is light weight, it costs 30 percent less for storage."

The cost to replace the obsolete punched-card equipment for the new checks is approximately $5 million. Overall, once the complete conversion takes place, the new checks will save taxpayers $6 million per year.

"The new checks provide more than a dozen security features which make the check more difficult to alter or counterfeit," Gwynn said. "They also have been chemically treated in such a way to make them difficult to be photographed."

"Probably, the thing that is really noticeable, besides the color, is that they are a lot easier to fold and fit into a wallet or pocket. We want to let the Marines and sailors know the one thing they are the most interested in, . . . no matter how they look, the checks still spend the same way." Gwynn said.

Instructors needed for JROTC programs

HQMC Release

The Marine Corps Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps is looking for retired officers and staff noncommissioned officers to serve as instructors at various high schools throughout the United States.

Marines selected to serve in these billets will teach MCJROTC students self-discipline, self-confidence, and the leadership skills required to successfully prepare them to meet the challenges of the future. In addition to their retirement pay, instructors receive a stipend from the Marine Corps and the respective school system which equals their full military pay and allowances. Accordingly, MCJROTC instructors wear the Marine Corps uniform on the job and must adhere to the Corps' strict standards for personal appearance.

Applicants for these instructor positions must be retired and transferred to the Fleet Marine Corps Reserve. They must also have an excellent military record, be in good physical condition and possess sound moral character.

Additionally, instructors for the MCJROTC program must be certified by Headquarters Marine Corps. Certification as an MCJROTC instructor may be requested by active duty personnel six months prior to their retirement date and by retired Marines who have been discharged less than three years.

Openings for officers to serve as Senior Marine Instructors are available at Billerica Memorial High School, Billerica, Mass., (open); Lindenhurst High School, Lindenhurst, N.Y., (available October 1986); Mullins High School, Mullins, S.C., (open); South Iredell High School, Statesville, N.C., (open); George W. Carver High School, New Orleans, La., (available August 1986); Jesuit High School, New Orleans, La., (open); Pasadena High School, Pasadena, Texas, (available August 1986); River Rouge High School, River Rouge, Mich., (available June 1987); Ray High School, Kearny, Az., (open); Tuba City High School, Tuba City, Az., (available March 1987).

Staff NCOs are needed at Beaver Local High School, Lisbon, Ohio (open); Mullins High School, Mullins, S.C., (open); Ribault Senior High School, Jacksonville, Fla., (open); Cibola High School, Albuquerque, N.M., (open); Donna High School, Donna, Texas, (available August 1986); Robert E. Lee High School, Baytown, Texas, (open); Romeoville High School, Romeoville, Ill., (open); Snohomish High School, Wash., (available August 1986).

For more information on available instructor positions write: Commandant of the Marine Corps (Code TDE-32), Washington, D.C. 20380 or call Captain James I. Van Zummeren at (AV) 224-1241 or (202) 694-1241.

Volunteers

Story by Mary Elmore
Community News Reporter

Students from Camp Lejeune, White Oak and Jacksonville High schools will participate in a student volunteer program offered by the Red Cross this summer. The students will work at the Naval Hospital during the summer months.

The Junior Volunteer program is primarily an educational process, designed to instill a sense of caring, responsibility and loyalty to the hospital, and in some instances, stimulate interest in a health career said Amy Cahill, the Junior Volunteer supervisor.

The teens' duties will include reading to children, handing out books and crafts, filing out-patient records and working in the day care nursery.

"This is an annual summer program," said Ronda Bailey, a Red Cross volunteer. "The primary function of the youths is to assist the hospital staff and the Red Cross adult volunteers in routine patient care and to work in other areas that the Hospital Red Cross might consider appropriate."

The students, ages 14-18, will work Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

For more information, interested personnel can contact Amy Cahill, youth chairman at the Naval Hospital or call 451-4596/4598.

Planning helpful against hurricanes

Story by Sgt. Al Vaughan

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, especially during hurricane season. A plan and proper supplies are two of the best ways to prevent getting pounded during the season.

Having a plan and proper supplies during hurricane season is one of the best ways to survive.

Every home should have a hurricane survival kit. This should be a large cardboard box and should contain a battery-powered radio, flashlights and extra batteries, plastic bottles for drinking water, emergency foods like canned or freeze-dried foods, non-food items such as a manual can opener, paper plates, napkins and towels, plastic mixing bowls, eating utensils, a sharp knife, soap, matches in a water-tight container and candles.

With such supplies on hand, the next step is to form a plan. It is best to handle hurricane warnings in steps. After the first hurricane advisory, listen for future messages so you will have plenty of time to prepare. The first announcements will be hurricane watches. This means possible danger in 24 hours. If danger materializes, a hurricane warning will be issued. That is the time you should put the plan into action.

When the warning is sounded, leave low-lying coastal areas and mobile homes and seek shelter in hurricane shelters that are set up throughout the area. If you stay at home, board up windows or protect them with storm windows or tape. Secure all loose objects such as garbage cans and grills by bringing them inside. Store drinking water in clean bathtubs, jugs or bottles since water lines may be broken during the storm. Check battery-powered equipment and make sure the car has a full tank.

Stay indoors until the storm is completely over. There may be a lull in the storm as the eye passes over. This can last from a minute to several hours. Remember that on the other side of the eye are more hurricane-force winds.

After the hurricane is over, get any needed medical care at disaster stations or local hospital. Stay out of disaster areas. Stay clear of, and report any broken wires, water and sewer pipes to local authorities. Also, before eating any refrigerated foods, check for spoilage if electricity has been off.

Remember, hurricanes moving inland can cause flooding, so stay away from river banks and streams. Also, hurricanes spawn tornadoes, so listen to your local weather station for warnings. If a tornado warning is sounded, be sure to get shelter as soon as possible.

Telephone installers take the bug out of your ear

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

While most Marines do their best to stay out of trouble, there are still a select few who do nothing but look for it. They are the 10 Marines from the Base Telephone installer/repair unit.

"Our installers are just one of four separate entities within the base telephone system," said Master Gunnery Sergeant Edward D. Lydolph, base wire chief. "There are other crews that man the construction and cable units, and inside plant (switch) units. They all work as one, but it's the installers who seem to be the most noticed because they are out and about the base 24 hours a day in contact with the folks who are having difficulty."

"Our days are spent either repairing something in an existing phone system, or installing something new," said Sergeant Jeffrey McLarnon, installer. "We handle the phone service at New River Air Station, Camps Geiger and Johnson as well as mainside, which includes Courthouse Bay and the Rifle Range. "We may spend the morning at a general's house and then head out to the field to set up phone service for Marines during a field exercise."

The problem doesn't always have to be complicated.

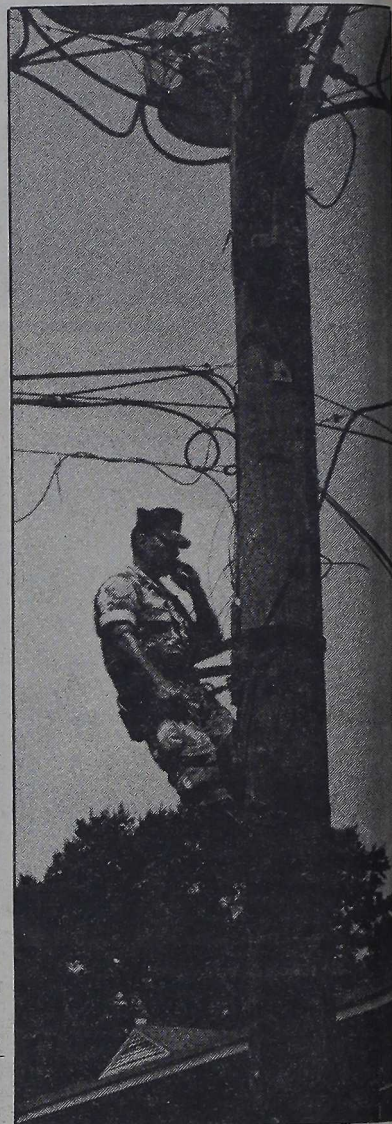

"We usually have 15-20 problems to check every day," McLarnon said. "The majority of the trouble is due to wear and tear, corrosion, or cut wires. A light bulb might be burned out or the phone may simply be unplugged."

Once a 'trouble' is called in, an installer is dispatched as soon as possible.

"Usually we get to the trouble the same afternoon or early the next day, depending on the priority and the availability of manpower," Lydolph said. "Safety and security are our first priority. Duty phones are fixed first, no matter what else is on the daily list. We also have a duty installer who is on call 24 hours a day for emergency troubles."

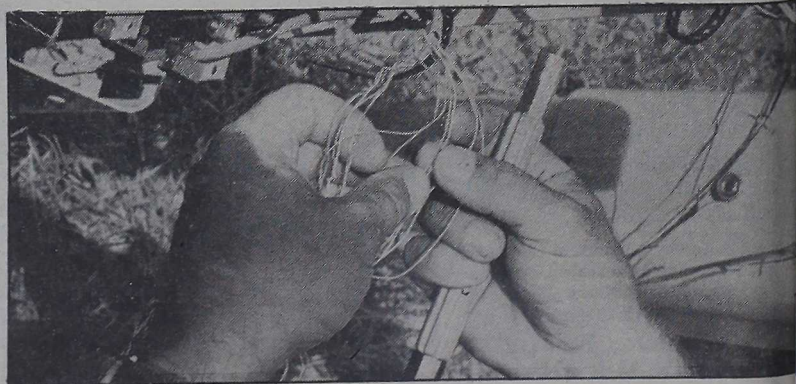

"Even if a Marine thinks he knows what's wrong with a phone, it's better to call in the problem than to tamper with it," Lydolph said. "Marines have to remember that they do not actually own the phone sitting on their desk. It's a government phone. If something goes wrong, they are not authorized to repair it themselves. That's what we're here for."

One of the biggest problems is that phones get moved, Lydolph said. Anytime a phone is moved it costs the government money. A multi-line intercom phone installation costs $5,000. Once that phone is installed, it can't be moved and still function properly, he said.

Sergeant Jeffrey McLarnon, base telephone installer, Support Company Support Battalion, checks phone line during daily "trouble" runs. (Photo by Sgt. D. K. Holl)

"Troubleshooting is a rewarding job because it's challenging," said McLarnon. "No one realizes how much they use their phones until something goes wrong. No matter what rank you are, if you're an installer, you are expected to handle a certain amount of responsibility. You have to stay self-motivated since you are on your own much of the time. Every day you know what kind of work you'll be doing but it varies enough to keep it from being boring. With this job, you see what you've accomplished by the end of the day. There's always enough 'trouble' to get into."

SPOTLIGHT ON MENTAL HEALTH

Seeds for Success

Does "Having the winning lottery ticket" spell success for you?

Have you ever thought, "If I had a million dollars, I could do this or that?" Success, for most of us, is not measured in this way—it's measured by successes of everyday living.

People bloom at different times in their lives, using past mistakes as a seed for meeting success. Each of us has this same seed within us—we make mistakes but learn from those mistakes in order to increase our chances of success in our next endeavor. Even Grandma Moses and Colonel Sanders achieved success long after others of their generation had retired.

So, take each setback and plant a seed. Then watch your life become a garden of success.

Lack of calcium now causes problems later

Are you prepared to include the following amounts of food as a part of your daily menu?

- 37 eggs
- 7½ cups of cottage cheese
- 4 8 oz. glasses of milk
- 3 to 4 cups of yogurt
- 8 to 10 cups of leafy green vegetables
- All this in a 24-hour period

If your first reaction is "that's impossible!" - you've got good company.

Yet, the above menu indicates the richest food sources for the essential mineral calcium, and theoretically would provide the U.S.D.A. minimum daily allowance.

Most adults will recall being prodded to drink milk in their childhood for growing bones. Once grown, for reasons of weight control or simply lack of taste for dairy products, accelerated calcium intake fast becomes an issue of the distant past.

Yet, it's recently come to light that most adults do not get enough calcium in their daily diets to stay healthy. New information about this mineral, and the dangers of related deficiencies-most especially in women-have become a vital health issue.

Surprisingly, experts unanimously agree that women need as much calcium as children. Studies also indicate that many women, perhaps somewhat aware of their special needs for this mineral, believe they are getting sufficient amounts of calcium in their multi-vitamin supplements. Experts indicate they are not.

When all this data is compiled and examined, it would appear certain that most women are totally in the dark about the possible inherent dangers that result from chronic calcium deficiency and its accompanying disease: osteoporosis. Osteoporosis leaves bones brittle, weak, and prone to breakage.

Eight out of 10 women over the age of 35 have osteoporosis

It now is universally recognized that the disease affects 15 million Americans, including one out of every four women-some as early as age 25.

Elizabeth Connell, professor of gynecology and obstetrics at Emory University School of Medicine, Atlanta, Ga., recently was in Las Vegas as part of an ongoing cross-country tour designed to educate women about the dangers and prevention of this disease.

"Eight out of 10 women over the age of 35 have osteoporosis," Connell says "it's easy to understand when you realize that the average American diet yields just 450-550 mg. of calcium a day.

"This statistic has grave consequences in light of the fact that women under 35 require a minimum of 800 mg. of calcium per day, and that post-menopausal women require between 1,500-2,000 mg. per day. When these needs are not met, there's no question but that osteoporosis is the tragic result."

Connell says that until recently doctors believed that osteoporosis was simply a part of the aging process. But studies of older women have without question linked the condition to four factors: calcium deficiency, lack of exercise, decrease in estrogen after menopause and decrease in the absorption of calcium from the intestine.

"Osteoporosis has rightly been referred to as the silent epidemic," says Connell. "It not only can result in progressive fractures, which by the way costs the American public $3.8 billion per year in health costs, but its prevalence is responsible for the hunched-over appearance that plagues many older people. Bone loss also is responsible for seniors shrinking in height as they age.

Connell cautions that after age 35 the body does not build new bone. Therefore, the key time in an individual's life to prevent the disease is the mid-30's. If osteoporosis should occur in the early 40's, and it's not advanced, it then becomes essential to take calcium supplements.

Osteoporosis is a serious problem. At best, calcium supplements may slow or stop bone loss, but did you know that in order for calcium to work properly it must exist in a two-to-one relationship with phosphorus, and in order to be absorbed, the body must have sufficient Vitamin D.

Well "Crystal Springs" does, and that's why we went a few steps further, in order to bring you "For Ladies Only", and not just another calcium supplement. We at Crystal Springs know that being a woman isn't always easy, so we developed this product just for you. # Morse Code gives Marines 'ace in the hole'

Lance Corporal Nicholas S. Viviano, Headquarters and Service Battalion, 2d Force Service Support Group, first place student in Radio Telegraph Operators Course 4-86, listens to a day full of "dits and dahs." (Photo by Sgt. D.K. Holl)

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

"I am being treated fairly," said a prisoner of war during a taped message to his fellow Americans at home. Although the spoken message said one thing, his eyes were saying something very different. He carefully blinked a message in International Morse Code that he was being tortured and that his words were not his own.

International Morse Code, which was used frequently during the World Wars, Korea and Vietnam, is still taught to several of today's Marines, especially those who serve with air and naval gunfire and reconnaissance units.

"We train approximately 175 Marines per year to use Morse Code as radio operators and forward observers," said Chief Warrant Richard W. Dailey, director of the Camp Geiger Radio Telegraph Operators Course. "We will train Marines from any unit in the II Marine Amphibious Force who need this as a secondary military occupational specialty."

Invented in the 1800s by Samuel Morse, the code uses the letters of the alphabet, 10 numerals, and punctuation are represented by short and long elements in the forms of sounds or flashes of light. flashes of light.

"Morse Code is the 'ace in the hole' method of transmitting messages for situations when the air waves are jammed or climate and temperatures are too extreme for other forms of transmission," Dailey said. "It's one of the 'old reliables' that offers the element of flexibility that is so often needed when all else fails."

"Once the students learn this code, they will probably never forget it," said Sergeant George D. Newton, RTOC instructor. "The students spend eight hours a day at their desks listening to 'dits and dahs.' The course is self-paced, on a nine-week schedule. Some students catch on to the material very quickly and have graduated in less than five weeks."

The students first practice receiving messages from taped recordings at a very slow speed. As the student progresses, the rate increases. They must be able to receive and transmit messages at a rate of 13 words per minute in order to graduate, Newton said.

Not only do the students learn Morse Code, but they are also instructed on various methods of visual communications including semaphore, pyrotechnics, air panels and flashing lights.

"All a Marine needs is a flashlight to flash messages using Morse Code," Newton said. "We instruct the students on the correct use of signalling with flags, flares and colored panels, but we also go over ways of improvising the equipment in an emergency situation. Marines can make flags out of T-shirts, or use their covers to signal. As long as the distance is short enough, and visibility is clear, almost anything will do if the correct procedure is followed."

"It's nice to have all the modern equipment available to us," said Newton. "But it's even better when we have something basic and reliable to fall back on."

Combat communicators hone field skills

Story by Sgt. Rodney Germain

Crucial battles are won and lost by quick dissemination of information from field commanders to their Marines.

Though field communications are the key to mission accomplishment, Comm is largely taken for granted by all but the Marines who keep everyone talking.

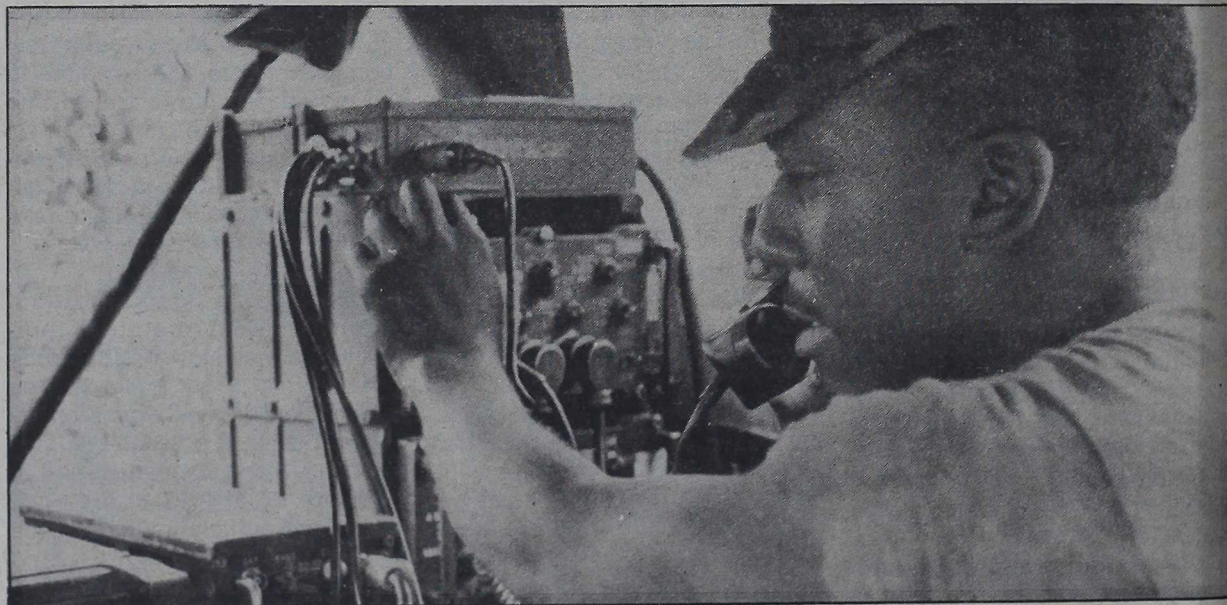

These Marines constantly field train to maintain their equipment and to keep their people knowledgeable.

"We go to the field for a week just about every month," said Master Sergeant Robert Kane, operations chief, Communications Company, Headquarters Battalion 2d Marine Division. "While there, we interface all aspects of communications, VHF radio, HF radio and field teletype and wire lines to communicate with other units. This week we're linking up with some of our people operating at Bogue Field, N.C.," he said.

This training isn't new to the battalion, according to Kane. But their personnel turnover is high, and many of their experienced people leave, while new people come in as replacements.

"We train to teach our younger, inexperienced people our techniques of communicating," Kane said. "We have a lot of wiremen who haven't been to school yet, and this practical knowledge is good for them. When they get to school they'll know how to do the job. We also get a lot of basic 2500's (communicators) and this field experience really helps."

When in garrison, Comm. Co.

Marines continue training in their primary jobs, but the best knowledge comes from practical application, Kane said.

"It's good to get theory training," he said, "and we give our Marines training classes on their jobs when we're in the rear. But the field is where they really learn."

Part of 2d Marine Division, the mission of Comm. Co. is to provide complete support.

"We provide the communications link to the division's field units. By setting up our equipment, getting it working properly and maintaining it 24 hours a day we give the support they need. Making sure everything keeps working is the hard part," Kane said.

According to the communicators, the field offers them a realistic operating environment.

"This is exactly how we'd operate in combat," said Corporal Scott Johnson, communicator. "We'd set up everything the same."

"We get a lot of new gear all the time," he said. "And we train and upgrade to stay on top of it. The experienced people train the others and it goes right down the line."

"With combat communications, a simple mistake can cause a lot of lives to be lost. We have to keep communications going and the best way to do that is to practice it over and over again; constant training and retraining," said Johnson.

With field exercises, it's often difficult to put a value figure on the training received; but that's not a problem with communications.

"If we can communicate and pass messages in a timely manner, the exercise can be considered a success. And if we can do that, all the training and retraining we've done was worthwhile," Kane said.

Southern hospitality awaits Camp Lejeune arrivals

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

Marines reporting in may be wondering if that old saying about "southern hospitality" is true aboard Camp Lejeune.

The Family Service Center Hospitality Room sets that example and is here to assist Leathernecks and their families to get started.

"We offer many household items on a 30 day loan system to help military personnel, new to the area, get their households in order," said Staff Sergeant Fred Mosher, brief coordinator, Family Service Center. "Items include pots and pans, sets of dishes, silverware, portable ironing boards and irons, cots, cribs, playpens, car seats, strollers, high chairs and vaporizers.

"Everything is loaned on a first come-first served basis," Mosher said. "There is absolutely no charge for the equipment use. The only stipulation is that the Marine, not his dependent, present his identification card when signing items out. The only variance to this is if the wife has been granted power of attorney such as in a case of deployment."

The idea behind this program is to help military personnel in need while they save enough money to purchase their own items, Mosher said. Thirty days is usually ample time for purchases to be made because it covers two pay periods.

"Our most used item is the car seat," Mosher said. "We have one hundred seats available for babies weighing 7-47 pounds. The Naval Hospital won't release a newborn baby unless there is a car seat Staff Sergeant Fred Mosher, brief coordinator for Family Service Center, gives a helping hand to Air Force Staff Sergeant Steve Jarman. Jarman, who is visiting his parents in Jacksonville, borrowed a crib with mattress and bumper pads to make his child's stay more comfortable before heading back to Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery Alabama. available. Many Marines don't know this until the day before the baby is to come home. We loan several car seats in situations like this, when the cost of a car seat isn't planned for in the immediate budget."

All gear is available for all ranks, but usually serves corporals and below,

Mosher said. "It's important that families return our equipment as quickly as possible to enable someone else to use it. We want to help as many military families as we can. It's another way that Marines take care of their own."

Navy Relief Volunteers hand out gifts for newborns

Story by Sgt. D. K. Holl

For years, children and adults have been strutting their stuff in designer jeans with names on the pocket. But what about fashion-conscious infants?

For the last several months, some infants whose parents are stationed here have received their own special clothing line: "Fashions by Oscar."

Oscar is one of the many Navy Relief Society volunteers who knits blankets, booties, and caps for the layette department. The New York native got started at knitting at the encouragement of his daughter who was a volunteer. Although she has since moved from Camp Lejeune, her father continues to knit and send his knitted treasures to this area to help military families.

"We have people like Oscar all over the world knitting for our layette department," said Don Larson, Camp Lejeune's Navy Relief Society director. "Without these caring volunteers, we would have a difficult time keeping up the demand. In 1985, we gave out at least 600 layettes to Camp Lejeune's military families. Our layettes are usually given to corporals and below; however we will give them to anyone who shows a need."

The Navy Relief Society layette department gives layettes to parents within 30 days before or after the birth of their baby. The layette box, which can be used for a temporary crib, is filled with a variety of T-shirts, sleepers, blankets and crib sheets. Depending on the season, an afghan or sweater set that has been handknitted by a volunteer is also included. Diapers are also available upon request. (Photo by Sgt. D. K. Holl)

NRS is always looking for volunteers, Larson said. "There are all types of jobs available. We try to cover babysitting and mileage costs so volunteering won't be costly. We will pay postage and send yarn to knitters, like Oscar, throughout the world."

"Volunteers are rewarded by helping others," Larson said. "At the same time, they are given the opportunity to learn skills that will better themselves. It's really a two-way street."

"We are able to give very good recommendations to our volunteers when they leave," Larson said. "Many of them have learned valuable secretarial, computer, and counselling skills and have a solid work record as a volunteer. This usually helps them acquire another job further down the road.

There will be a volunteer mini-course given to new volunteers July 14-18, from 9-12 p.m. at Bldg. 322. For more information call 451-5346/5584/5644.

Reservists put civilian occupations behind them to train at Lejeune

Story by PFC K. J. Bloomer

Leaving their civilian occupations and identities behind in Florida, they came to Camp Lejeune with their seabags packed and gear ready.

They came to jump from helicopters, rappel, throw grenades, rig parachutes and fire machine guns.

They came to train . . . primed to train hard.

Marine Corps Reservists from the 4th Air Naval Gunfire Liaison Company were aboard Camp Lejeune for Annual Training Duty (ATD) recently. Participating in a wide spectrum of exercises, this airborne unit kept a tightly-packed schedule of non-stop training.

"All the 4th ANGLICO troops have a lot of motivation and enthusiasm for this training," said Sergeant Todd Preston, a parachute rigger and member of 4th ANGLICO I and I Staff. "As reservists, these Marines don't often have the opportunity for this type of field training. Being here at Lejeune gives them a chance to rain with and really experience the 'MF'."

The training 4th ANGLICO participated in reflects its mission to support U.S. Armed and Allied Forces by providing control and liaison teams to direct naval gunfire and close air support during an amphibious assault. One of the highlights of this training was a parachute jump from a CH-46 helicopter preceded by an extensive jump safety brief. Marines from Camp Lejeune's 2d ANGLICO were on hand at the paraloft and in the field to assist with the jump preparations.

"The jumps went very well," said Sergeant Paul Cronin, a 4th ANGLICO rigger. "We had to contend with a low cloud ceiling, thunderstorm warnings and brisk winds . . . for a while we thought the whole jump might be aborted. Anytime the wind is consistently above 13 knots, it is considered unsafe for training jumps. But after the birds arrived the wind calmed down and no rain was falling, so it was a 'go'."

"Some of the jumpers in the first sticks landed in the trees around the DZ because they failed to compensate for the wind," said Cronin, a fireman from West Palm Beach. "No one was seriously injured, which is lucky, but it's still tough to remove a parachute that is tangled and draped over the top of a 50-foot pine tree."

Another part of the jump training involved unintentional water landing exercises at the training pool. This drill was designed to prepare jumpers should they have to make an unplanned landing into water.

"The water training was a very good experience for me," said Lance Corporal Raymond Mowen, a 20-year-old management trainee from West Palm Beach. "This is not something I would normally get to do as part of a reserve unit. Releasing from a parachute as the water approaches is a lifesaving technique that I am glad I've had the opportunity to practice. Even during a routine jump I could end up in a pond or irrigation ditch unexpectedly . . . then it's like 'surprise! there's water.'"

In addition to parachuting, the 4th ANGLICO Marines practiced dropping troops from a helio into an area.

"We learned what it takes to become quickly deployed into a given area," said Corporal Gordon Spitzer. "The rappelling and fast rope training was at recon beach from the tower. It was the first time I had ever done fast rope."

"Fast rope is much quicker than rappelling. It would take an 8-man team 30 seconds to rappel 30 feet, while the same team could fast rope into the area in six seconds," said the Fort Lauderdale port captain for a boating agency. "From 90 feet the fast rope was fun, but very hot on the hands. From 30 feet we did team drills just like they would be done in an actual drop. We learned what is involved when a unit needs to drop into an area where speed is paramount. All of the training we were able to do here at Lejeune was exhilarating; it gave us all a lot of motivation. Now we have a general idea of what

"It was perfect, just so motivating! We went through mud and ponds that were waist deep while wearing boots and utilities. It's exciting to do something different. This was my first ATD, and it was great."

—Lance Corporal James Wright

ANGLICO grunts do everyday."

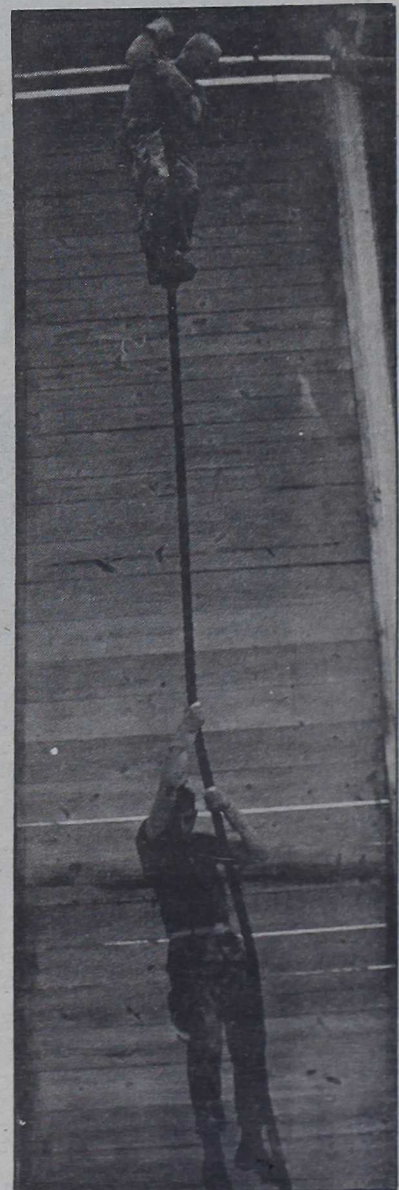

The "swamp run" was also a favorite of the 4th ANGLICO troops. This was a six-mile excursion through the woods.

"It was perfect, just so motivating!" said Lance Corporal James Wright. "We went through mud and ponds that were waist deep while wearing boots and utilities. The bugs out there were really hungry. We crawled through mud, under logs, jumped over logs just to land in deep water and got completely covered with mud. My boots felt heavy on the way back, just like cement shoes."

"It's exciting to do something different than what I usually do," said the 19-year-old bailiff from Miami. "This was my first ATD, and it was great."

"About 75 4th ANGLICO Marines participated in this ATD," said Preston. "Many of the Marines in our unit go out of their way to be a part of ANGLICO. They could easily just go down to the local reserve unit, but a lot of them drive to West Palm Beach from as far as Atlanta to be ANGLICO Marines."

"We have a good number of prior service people with us, including former Marines, Vietnam vets, green berets and Navy personnel. Everyone had a great experience here at Lejeune; all of the Marines and instructors we dealt with treated us very well. We'll come away from Lejeune motivated and with an extremely positive attitude about the training we received here."

Beaufort takes regional crown

Story by Cpl. T. A. Carr

Marine Corps Air Station, Beaufort, S.C., downed Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N.C., 11-5, to capture this year's East Coast Regional Slow Pitch Softball Championship, July 5, at Harry Agganis Field.

Eleven teams started in the double elimination tournament, battling, hitting, scoring, winning and losing . . . until three teams remained.

A losers' bracket showdown pitted Marine Corps Air Station, New River against Cherry Point. The Point sent New River home with a third place finish, 9-2.

Beaufort, previously unbeaten, was forced into a double-header after being lessoned by the Point in a well-executed hitting and defensive exhibition, 10-0. Donald Russel knocked in three runs to lead the Point in the first game.

However, the South Carolina team came back in the deciding game giving lessons of its own.

The Point's bats flamed red-hot in the top of the first, sending three runners home before Beaufort could put out the fire. Beaufort bounced right back however, scoring their first two runs in eight innings, making it 3-2.

cond RBI in the top of the third, before Beaufort retired the side, giving the Point a 4-2 edge.

Beaufort's bats came to life in the bottom of the third, scoring a total of five runs, behind the hitting of C. W. Rollins. Rollins knocked in a total of three RBI's in the game to lead Beaufort.

Cherry Point attempted a counterstrike but was shot down in flames when Beaufort turned one of its three double plays, behind the fielding efforts of second baseman Jim Smith. Smith nabbed up-the-middle line drives and threw out seven runners during the game.

Beaufort scored two more in the bottom of the fifth stretching its lead to 9-4. The Point scored its final run of the game off of Gus May's lead-off homer over the left-center fence. Beaufort answered Mayo's homer with two runs of its own, making it 11-5.

The South Carolina team shut down the Point's final attempt at bat ending the series and capturing the East Coast Regional Championship.

If you qualify under the Federal Bankruptcy Act you may be permitted to keep all of your exempt property, while having all of your current debts discharged. There is no provision for repayment to creditors. The filing of a Petition for relief will provide an automatic stay preventing creditor contact with you or your employer.

CHAPTER 13 - WAGE EARNER PLAN

Allows individuals to petition the Federal Court for a (36) month repayment period to discharge indebtedness, without property repossession. Upon filing of the Petition individuals will no longer be contacted or threatened by creditors and a realistic budget will be established whereby creditors will be treated fairly.

Story by LCpl. V. S. Bode

The Camp Lejeune Women's All-star softball team finished second in military league by winning all four of its games in last week's tournament at Fort Bragg, Fayetteville, N.C.

With a record of 17-6 for its outing, the All-Stars placed a respectable second behind the champs from Fort Bragg.

Despite the heavy thunderstorm threatening all afternoon, Camp Lejeune pounded its first three opponents in consecutive games.

New River Air Station tried to stop the All-Stars' bats and were crushed 15-8.

As the second game began, the All-Stars faced Seymour Johnson and demolished them 13-3. Camp Lejeune didn't stop there. In its third game, the All-Stars ripped Pope in front of the home crowd 10-2.

With only an hour break, the All-Stars found themselves facing the league leaders, Fort Bragg. The Army was ready, as the Marines jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. The second inning was different as the All-Stars added another five runs. Fort Bragg could only manage one run in the sixth as the game ended 15-8.

Despite the tourney victory, the All-Stars finished second.

This Week in Marine Corps History

July 11, 1959—The first Marine aviation cadets in 18 years began pre-flight training at the Naval Air Training Station, Pensacola, Florida. This new program was designed to fill the need for new pilots. It was found that NAVCAD could not meet the demand for pilots. All trainees held the grade of Marine Aviation Cadet.

July 11-13, 1968—The oldest living Marine Medal of Honor winner, Sgt. William C. Horton, was the guest of Gen. Leonard F. Chapman, Jr. in Washington where he received the Good Conduct Medal awarded 65 years late due to a clerical oversight. Sgt. Horton received the Medal of Honor in 1900 during the Boxer Rebellion in China.

Story by Cpl. Thomas Nowaczyk

There's something about a $1,500 Italian racing bicycle that doesn't look quite natural after being twisted around the front bumper of an American economy car. Bicycles, especially racing bicycles, are built to be beautiful, and built to be fast. Cars are built to be fast; economy cars are built to go 55 miles per hour with good fuel consumption.

And never the twain shall meet. But it happens. It has happened many times, and the results are never very pretty—for the bicycle, the rider, and the paint job on the car. Forums meet to discuss who is at fault, who is responsible, and who should be keeping whom alert on the road.

But the simple truth remains: if you ride a bike on or near a road, keep your eyes and ears open; you never hear the bumper that nails you.

Most drivers, especially those not endowed with what bikies refer to as "bike awareness," are concerned with a myriad of things: kids, radio stations, lighting cigarettes, carrying on conversations, sometimes even finishing War and Peace before the next traffic light. Every once in a while they'll look around for traffic signs, other cars, motorcycles and policemen. Hint: Most drivers are not looking for bicyclists. Clue: If you're on a bike, never trust anything with more horsepower than your legs!

Biker, Beware! Your safety is your responsibility!

The good news is that there are several things you can do to lessen your chances of doing the bug-splatter-shuffle on somebody's windshield.

First and foremost, be seen. Most recreational bicycles come equipped with enough reflectors to provide quite a nice light show in the headlights of an oncoming car. That however, is not where you want to be. Do this:

—Wear brightly colored clothing. Fluorescent orange, hot pink and eye-burn yellow are extremely good choices. You may look like a fruit basket, but you will be noticed—and avoided.

—Wear a reflective vest. It may seem like a burden, but so is a body cast. Go for the lighter weight on this one.

—Use fluorescent tape. You can buy it just about any hardware store or bike shop. Use it on your bike, on your cycling clothes, and on your helmet.

—ALWAYS wear a helmet. There are several racing, touring, and off-road models available from several manufacturers. Prices range from $3 to over $100. How much should you spend? Use the simple formula: If you have a $3 head, wear a $3 helmet.

—Avoid Traffic Like the Plague. If there is a bike path available, use it, but keep your eyes open. There are people called "joggers" who like to "jog" for exercise and whenever they see a bike path, they usually stop, point at it, and say things like "jogging path." They will be out there. If you hit one of them, you might bend your front wheel, fork and handlebars. Be careful.

If at all possible, avoid main roads in favor of side streets or lesser-travelled roads. Always be courteous of pedestrians since you're moving faster than they are and you might keep watch for "joggers" doing their "jogging" exercise here also.

If you must ride with traffic, keep to the right unless you are Greg LeMond, Steve Hegg or Mark Gorski. They are fast enough to pass traffic, but until you're riding in the Tour de France or winning Olympic gold medals, play it safe. Always assume drivers don't see you, and always signal your intentions.

Despite all the warnings, bicycling is an awesome sport, and recreational riding is great fun and good exercise. Mishaps are bound to happen, even with the most cautious drivers and careful riders; but by doing everything you can to play it safe and make sure drivers see you, you can lessen the chances of an accident. There's nothing wrong with riding your way in history, but it's a lot more fun to do it on an Italian racer, than on someone's hood.

Next week: Biking on base.
