Dependable Marines get the job done

Story by Sgt. E. M. Villeneuve

Getting the job done—complete and on time—is the basic factor of dependability.

The job can be as simple as feeding the dog every night or as detailed as a 25-page report for Headquarters Marine Corps. But whether easy or hard, finishing the task is the first priority for the dependable Marine.

According to the "Guidebook for Marines," dependable Marines "get the job done, regardless of the obstacles." If it means the Marine must work a little harder or a little longer, so be it. Putting that extra effort into completing a project is what makes one Marine stand out from another.

The dependable Marine will also not put a job off to the last minute. Managing time effectively can cancel the necessity for working late and then turning in an incomplete or messy final draft.

Time management can be important for personal commitments, too. Being on time for a doctor's appointment is part of being a dependable Marine. Whether you are 15 minutes or one hour late, you are late.

Dependable Marines also never make excuses. Excuses are like arms and legs, everyone has some. But the dependable Marine does not need to fall back on the reasons why something was not done.

All assignments are completed on time so no excuse is needed.

"I know I can depend on you," is an oft-repeated phrase in the Corps and in private life. For the dependable Marine, this phrase becomes familiar one. But it doesn't make the Marine become sloppy and let things slide. Instead, knowing that people depend on you, makes the dependable Marine try harder to justify other's faith in him.

Getting the job done, not slacking off and being on time are all ingredients of the dependable Marine. When combined, these ingredients can mean a successful recipe for any Marine.

Direct Deposit puts your money where you need it

Story by LCpl. Eve Middleton

"Work smarter, not harder," Brigadier General Louis H. Buehl, base commanding general, said in a recent address to Camp Lejeune Marines and sailors.

One way to "work smarter" is to participate in the direct deposit program.

Direct deposit is a government program that many Marines and sailors use to have their pay directly deposited to their checking and savings accounts. Anyone receiving a government salary may participate.

Permanent change of station orders do not necessarily have to mean an interruption in the service member's direct deposit.

A new pamphlet, (NAVMC 2783) describes in a step-by-step format how to efficiently transfer direct deposit.

Most banks use the Banking Introduction and Transfer System and will provide you with a BITS card which will speed up your direct deposit transfer. Ask about this program prior to leaving your old command.

Upon arriving at your new duty station, present your BITS card to your new bank or ask for help in setting up a new direct deposit account.

Ensure your new bank completes an application for direct deposit and mails it to the Marine Corps Finance Center, Kansas City, Mo.

It will take approximately three paydays for the transfer to be completed.

If a Marine or sailor invests a little time and effort, he can see that this financial investment makes it safely through the transfer.

Two hundred men and women from the Bermuda Regiment and members of the British Royal Anglian Regiment arrived at Camp Geiger April 1. They are here to take part in a 10-day internal security training scenario. (Photo by Sgt. C. J. Edwards)

Marine Corps Exchange expands services

Story by Sgt. Scot Jenkins

The Marine Corps Exchange program here has a lot to offer its patrons, and exchange officials have plans to improve the services they currently provide.

Part of the change includes building expansion and new services. There are three immediate construction changes: a new car wash facility and two MCX outlets.

"We have an automatic car wash planned," Major D. Robinson Jr., Camp Lejeune's Marine Corps Exchange officer said. "It's going to consist of six bays. Five of the bays will house wands while the sixth one will have an automatic brush set."

The car wash will be located on Ash Street, just off Holcomb Boulevard and will have services such as foam wash, wax and engine cleaning. One bay will be built to accommodate motor homes and campers.

Currently, the car wash is in the bid process and, according to Maj. Robinson, construction could begin in the early part of the summer and be operating by the end of 1985.

Besides the car wash, two MCX outlets will be built in the near future. One of these new exchanges will be located in the Tarawa Terrace housing area. "We will be constructing a new convenience store in TT," Maj. Robinson said. "The current store is inadequate. Basically, we'll be reproducing a store similar to the one located in the Berkeley Manor area."

The new store will be built adjacent to the current site and will include gas pumps. "We hope to have this project started early this summer," Maj. Robinson said. According to the major, if construction for the project begins soon, the store should be operating six to eight months later.

Another exchange outlet, located in the Industrial Area, is currently under construction. "This is a location exchange," Maj. Robinson said. "Construction is currently between 75 and 80 percent complete. Hopefully, construction of this facility will be completed by June 1."

Once construction has been completed a period of 60 days will be required to complete interior design, and the outlet could be operating September.

While these are the three major construction projects for 1985, Maj. Robinson said other projects are planned. There are plans for construction of a new exchange mall aboard base.

"We are working toward a late 1980s-construction and early 1990s-operation goal," Maj. Robinson said. "Much has to be accomplished before construction can begin on the project."

The major said with the completion of the Tarawa Terrace and Industrial Area exchanges, the majority of exchange facilities will have been replaced or renovated.

Month of the Military Child slated

Staff Report

Growing up the son or daughter of military parents can be as rough on children in their formative years as are the challenges and sacrifices mothers and fathers make to support their offspring.

It can mean missing dad's advice while the "ole man" is deployed or suffering the absence of much needed hugs at times of high emotional need.

But when everyone's in town at Camp Lejeune, special emphasis is placed on keeping the peppy generation busy and secure with quality service programs and a hectic schedule of youth community activities.

So it is in April 1985 as Camp Lejeune joins the rest of the nation in conducting the Month of the Military Child. Focal point for the month's attention to military kids is the Family Service Center which has developed an active calendar of fun-packed afternoons and, for parents, programs designed to suggest better ways of raising children.

Beyond the Family Service Center impetus, separate commands at Camp Lejeune are encouraged to formulate active programs for their membership. Battalions may wish to host field events for children, regiments may choose to include the rock and roll set with a bit of their training schedule.

Individual Marines and sailors, though, should note the following calendar of events sponsored by the FSC for the benefit of the entire family unit—parent and military child alike:

All Month: sales on selected children's items at the Marine Corps Exchange.

Each Monday night: Family Night at Officers' Club.

Each Thursday: 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m., Single Parents Group, Family Service Center.

April 3: Family Service Center Open House, Bldg. 14.

April 5 - Story Time at the Base Library from 10:30 - 11 a.m.

April 7: Easter Egg Hunt, Midway Park Community Center from 2-4 p.m.

April 7: Children's Annual Easter Egg Hunt, 2-4 p.m., Camp Johnson Staff Noncommissioned Officers Club.

April 8: Rain Date for Midway Park Easter Egg Hunt.

April 9: Parenting Seminar from 1-3 p.m., Family Service Center.

April 13: Pet Show from 10 a.m.-noon, Marston Pavilion.

April 14 - Open House at the Midway Park Child Care Center from 3-5 p.m.

April 16: "Understanding Adolescence" Seminar from 1-2 p.m., Family Service Center.

April 17: Family Service Center Open House, Bldg. 14.

April 20 - Adult and child No Tap Bowling Tournament at the Bonneyman Bowling Center at 10 a.m.

April 20: Provost Marshal's Office Open House and Bike Rodeo from 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Marston Pavilion.

April 20: Babysitter's Class for ages 9-19 from 10 a.m.-1 p.m., Family Service Center.

April 21 - Special Services Day of the Military Child at the W.P.T. Hill Field beginning at 2 p.m. featuring refreshments, pony rides, a kite flying contest and a pentathlon for children under 15.

April 27: Pet Show from 10 a.m.-noon, Marston Pavilion.

Tax law changes affect medical, housing expenses

Effect of Internal Revenue

An abundance of tax law changes in the Tax Reform Act of 1984 will affect current 1984 U.S. income tax returns filed by individuals and families overseas.

Further, additional new provisions and modifications of existing tax law effective in 1985 may influence tax planning for that year's return.

The foreign earned income exclusion is frozen at $80,000 through 1987. The exclusion is not available to military personnel or other federal government employees.

The exclusion for reasonable foreign housing expenses for 1984 is $6,044. For 1985, the exclusion increases to $7,108. This exclusion also is not available to military personnel or other federal government employees.

Military personnel overseas who leave their home after July 14, 1984, are given additional time to reinvest the proceeds into a new principle residence in order to defer tax on any gain from sale. The total replacement period is extended from four to no more than eight years.

The itemized deduction for medical and dental expenses, including drugs, is limited to the amount exceeding 5 percent of adjusted gross income. Deductible drug expenses are allowed only for prescription drugs and insulin.

Lodging expenses of up to $50 per night can now be deducted by a patient and accompanying individual if the trip is primarily for, and essential to, medical care.

Profits from the sale of assets purchased after June 22, 1984, and held at least six months instead of a year now qualify for favorable tax treatment as long term capital gain.

The deduction for contributions to qualifying U.S. charitable organizations for taxpayers who do not itemize deductions is a maximum of $75 (25 percent of the first $300 in contributions). For 1985, 50 percent of those contributions will be deductible. In addition, the standard mileage rate for use of an auto in charitable work increases to 12 cents a mile from nine cents.

It is now harder to take advantage of income averaging. Beginning with 1984, taxable income for the current year must exceed 140 percent of the average income for the prior three years by $3,000 to qualify.

Generally, no-interest or below-market rate loans (10 percent for loans before 1985), most commonly among family members, made after June 6, 1984, now have income tax consequences because of the potential for tax avoidance. The imputed interest will be considered as income to the lender.

Automobiles purchased since June 18, 1984, must be used for business purposes more than 50 percent of the time to qualify for both the investment tax credit and depreciation. The investment credit is limited to a maximum of $1,000 per auto. Maximum depreciation is $4,000 the first year and $6,000 for each year thereafter. If the auto is used less than 50 percent for business, no investment credit may be claimed while depreciation would be on a straight line basis for a five-year period. When car use qualifies for the credit and accelerated depreciation, but is used only partially for business, both the credit and depreciation must be prorated. Further, the 50 percent business use test to qualify for the investment credit and accelerated depreciation also applies to property other than automobiles used for transportation as well as entertainment and recreation property and home computers.

All contributions to an Individual

Retirement Account now must be made no later than the due date for filing the return (April 15, 1985, for most taxpayers for 1984), even if the individual has an extension to file.

The total itemized deduction for a casualty and theft loss must be reduced by 10 percent of adjusted gross income. Now, the casualty loss deduction is also available to those in a federally-declared disaster area, if, within 120 days after the disaster declaration is issued, their residences are condemned or they are ordered to relocate.

The credit for the elderly is modified to account for repeal of the disability income exclusion. Individuals 65 and over remain eligible for the credit. Retirees under 65 with a permanent and total disability who receive income from a private employer may now claim the credit. Those under 65 who receive a taxable pension from a public retirement system cannot use the credit unless they are pensioned because of total and permanent disability.

Property transfers made between divorcing spouses after July 18, 1984, generally will now be treated as gifts and are nontaxable at the time. When the property transfer because of a divorce settlement occurred on or before July 18, 1984, the new rule may be applied if both former spouses agree to it.

SRB multiples to change

HQMC, WASHINGTON, D.C.— Seventy-one Military Occupational Specialties were deleted and 129 zones had their multiples reduced during the latest revision of the Selective Reenlistment Bonus Program. A detailed list on who gets how much for reenlisting is contained in MCBul 7220, published as ALMAR Message 053/85.

THE REVISED SRB rates become effective April 15 and are limited to Marines within 12 months of their EAS. There is an exception for Marines who required additional service to comply with Permanent Change of Station orders, but that approval must come by message from CMC.

For more information on reenlistments and bonuses, contact your career planner and consult ALMAR 053/85 (CMC Message 111600Z March 1985).

Fire Support Coordination Exercise tests combat readiness

Story and photos by LCpl. R. H. Trask
Marines train to be a force in readiness.

Exercises devised to test readiness recreate the combat experience in realistic and demanding terms.

The 10th Marine Regiment, 2d Marine Division, tested its combat readiness during a fire support coordination exercise at Fort Bragg, N.C., March 5-28. The regiment's 1st, 4th and 5th Battalions and Headquarters Battery participated in the live-fire exercise.

Besides improving gunnery procedure and artillery tactics proficiency, the Marines worked on their nuclear, biological and chemical warfare procedures and local security skills.

The regiment practiced setting up new battery positions on a "moment's notice" after receiving orders to advance during the Fort Bragg training. Artillery Marines tested their skill at three different levels—regiment, battalion and battery. In addition to setting up at impromptu locations, the Marines also trained in squad and night defensive tactics as well as convoy procedures.

The artillery Marines performed live-fire and fire coordination exercises by firing illumination, white phosphorous and explosive rounds for distances between 5,000 to 17,000 meters at two Fort Bragg ranges.

The regiment's Marines fired their self-propelled and towed M198s, M109A3s, M110A2s and M114A2s without any advance knowledge of when they would be called upon to fire. Regardless of the weather—sunny or overcast—the Marines fired their rounds.

Corporal Joseph Robinson III, telecommunications technician, dips his mask to decontaminate it.

Part of the NBC training the artillery Marines received included decontamination procedures and equipment usage. The Marines' training in NBC included sleeping in full mission oriented protective posture gear (NBC protective overgarments) from 11 p.m.-6 a.m.

Although training centered around areas designed to make the artillery Marines more proficient in their abilities to fire artillery pieces, training also touched areas of protecting themselves and their batteries during combat.

"Every aspect of training done here was held with local security as a companion," said Lieutenant Colonel Sam Decoteau, 10th Marines S-3 officer. "The exercise provided an excellent opportunity for training in this area."

During the exercise Marines set up sentries and roadblocks. They created a shield for their batteries against an approaching enemy.

United States Army involvement in the exercise was primarily limited to serving as host. However, the Army did aid in some of the training.

"We did get some coordinated support from the 88th Airborne Corps and Division artillery," LtCol. Decoteau said. "We also received some aid in close combat instruction and were assisted by the Airborne Meteorological Section."

A Marine Corps Combat Readiness Evacuation System test was given during the exercise. Each battalion tested its batteries on gunnery procedures, which included fire direction, forward observer procedures, communications, logistics and local security. The MCCRES was preparatory for more formal tests to be conducted later.

Regardless of the weather, 10th Marines Leathernecks trained on, keeping themselves proficient in gunnery procedures and artillery tactics.

Following the training at Fort Bragg, the 10th Marines artillerymen can handle combat situations by exercising their abilities in NBC defense and local security.

Jiffy Mart provides rapid resupply for combat units

Story and photos by LCpl. R. H. Trask

When the time comes for Marines to be sent to combat, where would they get the supplies needed to fulfill their mission without making themselves and the logistics train a target for enemy fire?

They'd shop at Jiffy Mart.

Jiffy Mart is not a combat version of a base commissary. Through a Jiffy Mart, Combat Service Support Element-23 for the 10th Marine Regiment at Fort Bragg, N.C., rapidly resupplied artillery units with ammunition, fuel, water and food and conducted equipment maintenance checks.

Corporal William Duque, a motor transport driver with 10th Marine Regiment, fills the gas tank of an Alpha Battery truck.

The CSSE-23's Jiffy Mart is based upon a 2d Force Service Support Group concept for resupplying units in 15 minutes. CSSE-23 completed the Jiffy Mart runs as rapidly as 11 and a half minutes.

The Jiffy Mart runs consist of supply trucks, ammunition trucks, water tankers, motor gas refuelers and diesel refuelers. Jiffy Mart Marines include motor transport drivers, a wrecker driver, corpsmen and a military police escort which provides security for the CSSE.

In the current resupply system, according to Captain Martin L. Rosenfield, CSSE-23 commanding officer, an artillery battery keeps its own logistics section. During combat, a system like this would give the battery's commander maximum control over his combat support sections, giving him flexibility in resupplying. But, this system also increases the battery's size by adding more vehicles, making it an easier target to spot by an enemy.

According to Capt. Rosenfield, the unit distribution system requires the CSSE Marines to deliver supplies directly to the units. This method consolidates batteries' supply sections into one battalion. When a battery requests supplies, a CSSE supply train goes directly to the battery's firing point to issue supplies.

The UDS gives battalion commanders more control of a unit's supply section while reducing the size of batteries. The UDS also makes it harder for an enemy to detect a unit, according to Capt. Rosenfield. However, this system also introduces a large number of support vehicles into the firing point. The supply train becomes a large, stationary target waiting to be detected and fired at.

Unlike the two systems currently used in most exercises by Marines, the Jiffy Mart concept has less liabilities and more assets in security for logistics sections, according to Capt. Rosenfield.

The Jiffy Mart system requires a CSSE to bring supplies to an artillery battery while it is en route to a new firing position. The battery picks the time for resupplying and the CSSE picks the point where it will occur.

When the Marines of the supply train arrive at a supply point they set up their trucks in a series of stations. The battery moves through the resupply point stopping at ammunition, fuel, water or food stations for deliveries.

The rapid movement of the battery through the supply point, according to Capt. Rosenfield, creates a smaller target less easily spotted and fired at by the enemy. As a result of the battery moving constantly, mobility is increased for the battery and the supply train.

"I think we need to do a lot more of the Jiffy run concept and not just at Fort Bragg. It should be incorporated into larger units," Capt. Rosenfield said. "We just don't appreciate the large number of trucks it would take to resupply a battery that fires thousands of rounds a day as in a combat situation."

According to the supply officer, the planning and organizing of the Jiffy Mart creates more difficulty than actually performing the run. "Organizing the Jiffy Mart is the hardest part," he said. "We have to decide on materials and equipment. We have to recon the site of the Jiffy Mart and decide on tactics. These things take more than 15 minutes and a lot more work."

As a result of planning, Jiffy Marts quickly resupply batteries. Speed and mobility are essential in a combat situation; according to the supply officer, these save lives.

"You can call it a 7-11. You can call it a Jiffy Mart. Those are only trade names for an idea that works. It can save lives and equipment; it's a worthwhile way of resupplying combat units," said Capt. Rosenfield.

A truck carrying Alpha Battery, 1st Battalion, 10th Marine Regiment Marines and towing an M198 howitzer leaves the Jiffy Mart.

PMO conducts elementary fingerprinting

Story and photos by LCpl. Eve Middleton

A child responding, "Oh nothing" when asked by a parent what he or she is doing can send any responsible adult into a frenzy.

When children come home and say, "I was fingerprinted by the military police today," the response can be just as overwhelming.

Parents of children attending Dixon Elementary School are aware this type of unusual activity is taking place. Before the prints were done, each of the 900 students had to have their parents complete a consent form. The on-going program aids in the missing children program which has recently come to light through media broadcasts. After the prints are completed the children will bring them home for the parents to keep. A permanent record of a child's fingerprints may be helpful in identifying a lost child.

Kensil J. Evans III, explained, "My parents care about me 'cause I'm the third. My dad is the second. Because of that, they don't want to lose me. I'll probably be their only kid, since they are getting so old. My mom's 29. But my dad's even older, he's 31." Pretty good reasons to be fingerprinted in the eyes of a 6 year old.

Lance Corporal Lorene McKelvey, Provost Marshal's Office, makes fingerprints of 5-year-old Carol Ann Whaley for on-going missing child program.

The finger printing project was prompted by the Sneads Ferry Homemakers Club. Vice President Lottie M. Schimpf who is also the club's safety chairman, said the program was initiated by a written request to the Camp Lejeune Provost Marshal's Office. "We (the club) requested help with the correct procedures used in obtaining the prints," Schimpf said.

After corresponding with PMO, club members set up guidelines for the program. "This year, the entire school is being done. Only kindergartners will be involved in the coming years," Schimpf explained. "I hope I speak for all the parents and residents in our community, when I say we're pleased with the cooperation from the Marine Corps."

Frank R. Weeks, 10, said he had been fingerprinted before. "My dad's a 'gunny' in the Marine Corps. He's also an amtracker, so he knows all about fingerprints. I know because he told me so. Fingerprinting will help kids not to get lost," he said.

Elizabeth J. Davis, 8, said with a sour look, "I don't like getting all this dirty ink on my hands." The problem was soon resolved when the club members supervised a thorough washing with industrial soap, sending the mess down the drain.

Luckily, the results will last for years to come.

4th MAB Marines prove confident in Norway snow

Story by Sgt. Paul Younghaus
Royal Netherland Marine Corps

Marines operate in any clime or place and this winter's exercises in North Norway were no exception to that phrase.

The 4th Marine Amphibious Brigade Forward

A Marine fires a blank round at advancing British aggressors in Northern Norway.

supplied 1,500 Marines and sailors from Camp Lejeune, New River and Cherry Point, N.C., and Norfolk Va., for Exercise Cold Winter 85. The exercise was a combined operation between the U.S. Marines and NATO forces from Norway, Great Britain, Canada and the Netherlands. The week-long exercise was designed to enhance the operational readiness of forces which would be used to protect NATO's northern flank.

The Marines of Regimental Landing Team-2 provided the maneuver element during the operation and deemed it one of the best exercises U.S. forces in northern Norway have participated in.

"Before, when I have seen your Marines here, they have been huddled in the cold," said Norwegian Brigadier A. Lerheim, commander, Defense Troms, a northern district of Norway. "Now they are confident and moving across the snow. Your ability to ski this year has added a new dimension to U.S. Marine operations in Norway."

Other comments were equally flattering.

"It is quite proper that you be singled out (among the forces operating here), because after Cold Winter-85, you are no longer simply brave Marines in funny boots; you are true arctic warriors," said Norwegian General Richard Lawson, commander in chief, northern forces.

The reason for these accolades: RLT-2's methods for moving.

"From the past, the forces we operated with expected us to stick to the roads during the daylight hours," said Colonel Harry W. Jenkins Jr., commanding officer, RLT-2. "This year because the 1st Battalion, 2d Marine Regiment was ski-mobile, and because we used Norwegian over-the-snow vehicles, we were much more mobile than ever before."

That, in addition to what Col. Jenkins called the best helicopter flying he's seen since the Vietnam War, combined to help the Marines move faster than the opposition had expected.

Opposition, or "North" forces were made up of British and Dutch Marines, while the "South" forces were comprised of U.S., Norwegian and Canadian troops.

At one point, Marines from 1/2, flanked and overran a company of British 1st Parachute Battalion commandos. Battery C, 1st Battalion, 10th Marine Regiment cannon cockers pulled back their gun emplacements more than three kilometers one night, leaving their camouflage nets in place. The deception worked so well, that the following day the 155mm howitzer gunners watched as North forces made repeated simulated air strikes on the empty cammie nets.

"Our mobility caused us to move faster than was ever expected, throwing the whole exercise schedule off," Col. Jenkins said. "If our Marines are given the proper training, as they were this time, they can function in Norway as well as anyone else."

While the Marines were in their second day of Cold Winter-85, General P. X. Kelley, commandant of the Marine Corps, visited them. While there, he was interviewed by a Swedish journalist who asked him if he was surprised that the Marines were operating in northern Norway.

"No, this isn't surprising to us," he said. "We've been operating in northern Norway for well over a decade. We have a commitment to NATO and the defense of Norway and we take that commitment very seriously."

British parachute troops defend positions against advancing U.S. Marine forces during Exercise Cold Winter-85 in Northern Norway.

"The strategic importance of this area is great," said Brigadier General Carl E. Mundy Jr., commanding general of the 4th MAB. "Norway is NATO's northern flank, it has a common border with the Soviet Union and is near the Soviet's largest fleet in the Kola peninsula."

"If the Soviets 'owned' this part of Norway, they would have advanced their own positions by several hundred miles," BGen. Mundy said. "Controlling Norway would give the Soviets a greater ability to interdict reinforcements to Central Europe."

To help in the defense of this vital area, the United States began a Norwegian prepositioning program. Shipments of hardware began arriving in November 1982, and this year, much of that equipment was used.

"By prepositioning equipment here, and holding exercises here," BGen. Mundy said, "the United States sends a very strong signal to the rest of the world that we are willing and capable to defend Norway."

After Cold Winter-85, and the way the Marines of the 4th MAB operated, that signal is reinforced.

Dance your way to health

Story by Sgt. C. J. Edwards

Photos by LCpl. Todd A. Carr

Would you like to have someone—besides yourself—watching your figure this summer?

If the answer is "yes," then Frieda can help.

Frieda Hunter teaches cardiovascular fitness to active duty Marines, sailors and their dependents. "Fitness with Frieda" is a cardiovascular fitness program designed to increase strength, endurance and flexibility. Weight control, muscle tone and fat loss are also promoted.

"A cardiovascular program is the fastest way to burn off body fat," Frieda stressed. "Whether it is swimming, jogging, jumping rope or aerobics, it is very important that everyone participate in an activity which increases and then maintains the heart rate."

A dancer for more than 20 years, Frieda has taught dance for 10. She is also an avid gymnast and has taught cardiovascular fitness for the last four years.

Classes are held Monday through Thursday at Marston Pavilion from 9-10 a.m. for $20 a month.

Frieda also offers a 45-minute class for active duty Marines and sailors Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Goettge Memorial Field House for $1 per class.

Marine judo squad powers meet

Gunnery Sergeant Ed Mayfield (L) goes airborne for leverage against Master Sergeant Joe Rios.

Story and photos by Sgt. R. W. Turner

MCAS, EL TORO, CALIF.—The Interservice Judo Championships were held here March 21. Two Camp Lejeune Marines clinched their weight classes but a returning veteran from the West Coast reclaimed the overall title.

Sergeant Ron Heflin from Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif., easily defeated all challengers in the 209-pound weight division to become the Overall Grand Champion.

Heflin's victory was shared by Gunnery Sergeant Ed Mayfield who coaches the All-Marine Judo Team and is from Marine Barracks, Yokosuka Naval Base, Japan. Mayfield won the Open Division, but did not "play judo" against Heflin for the Overall Grand Championship.

"My first duty is as a coach. To compete against someone that I will coach later just isn't a good idea," Mayfield explained.

Other winners were: 132-pound weight class, Corporal H. "Shorty" Lopez from Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune; 143-pound weight class, Lance Corporal Chris Borghese from Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N.C.; 156-pound weight class, Sergeant Charles "Bucky" Dent from Recruiting Station, Little Rock, Ark.; 172-pound weight class, Lance Corporal G. B. Cross stationed at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe B. Hawaii; 189-pound weight class, Gunnery Sergeant Chester Evans from the 2d Marine Division Camp Lejeune; and in the 209-pound and under weight class, Staff Sergeant Melvin Burrows stationed at Recruiting Station, Minneapolis/St. Paul.

The winners in each weight class will remain here training until their April 12 participation in judo tournament at Las Vegas.

"Following that will be the National Championships in Detroit on April 27," said Master Sergeant Joe Rios, from Marine Corps Development and Education Command, Quantico, Va.

Rios, who took second in the Open Division also the assistant coach for the All-Marine Judo Team. Both Mayfield and Rios will compete in Masters division at the National Championships while they continue to coach the team.

"I have been considered as coach for the U.S. National Team," Mayfield added.

Devotion to the sport is evident by the hundreds of hours spent training. GySgt. Evans said that since 1978, he hasn't played any other sport.

Evans, who is rated second nationally for Masters (over 30) division, 189-pound weight class, said, "Judo to me is more than a sport, it's a way of life."

Lejeune units begin preparation for upcoming intramural softball season

Story and photos by Cpl. Phil Smith

It's just around the corner; the season for popcorn, cold soda pop and the dry dust of a freshly raked infield, which marks the beginning of softball season.

The Camp Lejeune Men's Intramural Slow-Pitch Softball season will begin April 15, and many teams have been preparing for weeks for a chance to be named the best on base.

"We have our team selected and we've been conducting regular practices for a couple of weeks now," said Gunnery Sergeant Michael Boyd, head coach for the defending all-camp champs, Support Battalion, Marine Corps Base. "It's still way early to tell how we'll do against the other teams, but I know we'll be competitive." Support Bn. boasts seven returning veterans of last years' winning squad.

Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division, which had two teams in intramural competition last year, has been busy seeing that its players will be loosened up for competition also.

The battalion, which had two squads last year finishing their regular seasons with records of 6-7 and 2-11, held a double elimination tournament with its five companies. The tournament took a week and a half to complete, with Headquarters Company taking the battalion title by out-slugging Military Police Company 11-6, March 28.

The road to the title was virtually unhindered for HqCo. The team, made up of Leathernecks from Nuclear, Biological, and Chemical Platoon, tromped Communications Company 12-4 and nipped both MPCo. and Truck Company 9-8 and 10-9 respectively before meeting the policemen again the final battle. The MPs edged NBC 7-6, forcing the game into a final double-elimination. B

Corporal Juan Paez slides into third for Military Police Company, Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division. Paez scored during the first and only victory over Headquarters Company.

First Sergeant Pat Kelley tees off at the 10th tee during the best ball tourney.

Camp Lejeune golf course hosts golf tournament

Cloudless skies and flawless weather provided an ideal setting for the 14th Annual Intercollegiate Golf Tournament at the Paradise Point Golf Course March 29-31.

Teams from 12 East Coast and Central U.S. colleges and universities, as well as a Navy and Marine Corps team from Camp Lejeune competed in the tournament. Guilford College, Greensboro, N.C., came out on top, beating last year's winners from Elon College, Elon, N.C., by four strokes.

Aside from the overall tournament, the participants, along with several local golfers from Camp Lejeune, competed in a best ball tournament. Master Gunnery Sergeant Howrd Lott, coordinator of the tournament, explained the object of a best ball competition. "Teams of four men compete to get the lowest score on 36 holes," he said. "On each hole, the score of the player with the fewest strokes for that hole goes on the team score." He explained it as a combined effort for one low score.

The winning team in the best ball portion of the competition was the team led by Navy Lieutenant John Lundgren. The team finished with a score of 117 for the 36-hole course. Lt. Lundgren also finished with the lowest score of the Navy/Marine Corps team during the final team competition with a score of 225 for 54 holes.

During the intercollegiate tournament, Elon's

Barry Pilson attained the lowest gross score of 211. His team's combined score of 889, fell four strokes shy of Guilford's 885. The Navy/Marine Corps team finished in the center of the heap, placing seventh with a combined score of 925.

For Camp Lejeune duffers who competed either the best ball or the intercollegiate tournament, just the thrill of competition and beautiful weather was more than satisfying. "It's a lot of fun getting out here and playing with fellow Marines and the college players," said First Sergeant Pat Kelley, who competed in the best ball portion of the tournament. "I'll tell you, though, some of those college golfers can hit the ball pretty far."

Families of deployed Marines, sailors enjoy group picnic

Story by Nancy Simpson Hoke
Community News Reporter

"A book of verses underneath the rough,

A jug of wine, a loaf of bread—but at thou,

Thou art deployed."

This slightly unoriginal ditty would have been the theme song of the Easter party given by the 1st Battalion, 6th Marine Regiment, 2d Marine Division Support Group March 30 at Arston Pavilion.

There were pony rides, games, egg hunting, picnicking and other forms of group therapy for the girls they left behind them, and the children, too. A small tear may gather in an eye as these Marine wives speak of the agonies and annoyances of separation, but for the most part, the upper lips are stiff and the complaints are more likely to be stifled than whiny.

Poets make much of the camaraderie of the barracks and the battlefield, but the loyalty and openness and friendship that sustains women during their husbands' deployments is a special sisterhood.

Outings such as this, organized by Betty Barnd, wife of Captain Dan Barnd, supported by Special Services and the generous donations of Jacksonville businesses, help keep spirits high.

For example, there is Fay Bowermaster, wife of Staff Sergeant William Bowermaster. This young woman with an enchanting Scottish burr makes Mary Lou Retton seem introverted, and her humor and outspokenness are contagious.

"The worst part of having him home? Sleeping with the cat. Thank God for good friends. If you need anything, all you have to do is call. Not even that—they'll call you," she said.

"I went to the beach, talked to the kids . . . made the best of it," Fonoti said.

This deployment is complicated by a tiny dark-eyed baby named Crystal who looks at Cpl. Finoti's picture and says, "Da Da."

"It's hard for me to see other daddies playing with their children, and wonder if Crystal's asking herself, 'Where's my Daddy?'" Fonoti writes her husband every day, recounting every detail of the baby's day, and Crystal occasionally gets to hear her mother's voice on the telephone.

Shawn Ryan, 16, son of Kathi and Sergeant Major Robert Ryan, thinks of a moment when asked how this deployment differs from separations when he was younger. "I understand now why he's gone this time. And I realize he will come back," he said. When asked how his life is changed by Dad's absence, he laughs. "I get to sit in his chair at dinnertime."

Sergeant Major Ryan writes his son and his daughters, Dawn and Kelly, individual letters, a gesture they appreciate.

According to Kathi Ryan, the separations do not get easier with the years, but she recommends that only a limited amount of complaining be put into writing.

"I get a little grayer every day. But Clairol helps!" Ryan said.

"You never get used to it, but you do adjust," said Pat Walker, wife of Gunnery Sergeant Charlie Walker.

"Jimmy was always the rock," said Gail Hilliard of her husband, Staff Sergeant James Hilliard. "When things would go wrong, he'd say, 'It's okay. You did the best you could.' Honestly, don't print this, but he's the world's best father."

Beth Holcomb, wife of Chaplain Norm Holcomb, recalls the painful parting when her 6'3" son, Rocky, hugged his Dad so thoroughly that he lifted him right off the floor.

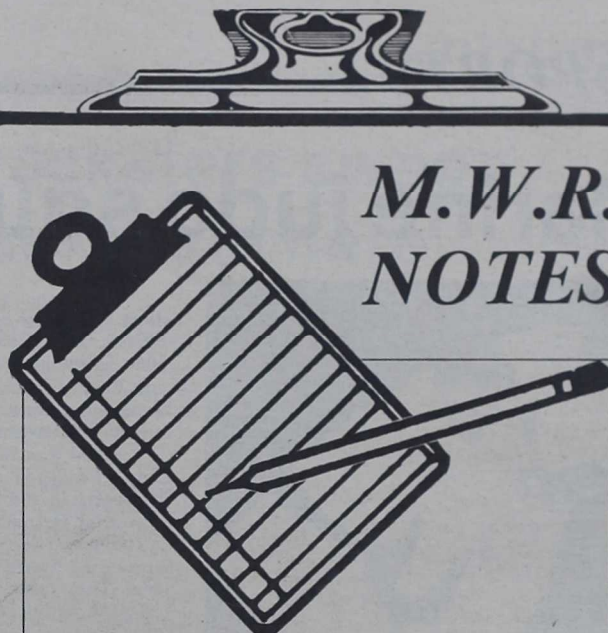

"When the kids want to do something, I'll automatically say 'Ask your Dad,' but he's not there!" she said.

Corporal Sheila Bailey, Marine Corps Air Station, New River, N.C., chapel, is a Marine married to a Marine, Corporal William Bailey. Her mind is as new-penny bright as her copper red hair.

"A lot of women worry that their husband's are cheating, or they panic when they go a few days without getting a letter, and they think, 'He doesn't love me anymore.' You must be strong, strong for him and strong for you. I always tell myself, at least I get to take a shower when I want, and I get to have the house and be with the child. You really learn the meaning of marriage when your husband is deployed," Bailey said.

The commanding officers' wife is Barbara O'Leary who seems genuinely fond of the women who are experiencing the same unanchored feelings she is. They, in turn, are relaxed with her, and grateful for her concern. Her advice to the young women who are new to the deployment dilemma is simple: "Keep busy."

Joint Public Affairs videotaped the occasion to send to the men who are in Okinawa and Korea. The tape may preserve the faces, especially mascaraed and coiffed for the filming, but it could never adequately capture the devoted tenderness these women display when they speak of their faraway husbands. Even Barry Manilow couldn't express that much sentiment.

Group tracksters sweep Fleet track meet here

Tracksters from 2d Force Service Support Group dominated the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic Track and Field Meet at Lejeune High School March 28. The Group won 19 medals in 17 events and defeated Leathernecks from all other East Coast organizations with a combined point total of 61.

During the day of competition, the Group tallied a total of 10 gold medals, five silver and four bronze medals. The nearest competitor was the 2d Marine Division with five of each of the medals.

teams showed excellent fielding, allowing few errors, but NBC's superb batting skill proved to be the deciding factor in the contest. The battalion intramural team, coached by Staff Sergeant Joseph McKoy, will be selected in tryouts April 4.

At Marine Corps Air Station, New River, N.C., diamond action has already begun. The battle for station honors began April 1 when five of the station's thirty teams struggled for the first footholds of the season. Results of those games were not available at press time.

Marine Corps Air Station could field formidable adversaries in the East Coast Regional Championships following the 1985 season. This is primarily due to the preparation involved. Standard practice at Camp Lejeune is to select teams for 2d Marine Division, 2d Force Service Support Group and Marine Corps Base following the all-camp tournament. This would give the three all-star teams a limited amount of time to work together as a team.

Marine Corps Air Station, however, is in the final cutting process of selecting its all-star team designed especially for this East Coast jewel.

According to assistant coach, Gunnery Sergeant Howard Wunder. "We are getting ready to make our final cuts and will play tournament ball in preparation for the East Coast tournament," he said. MCAS made it to the finals in last year's competition, falling to Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N.C. 10-5.

Sergeant Steve Bybee, Nuclear, Biological and Chemical Platoon, slams a base hit en route to the Headquarters Company, Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division capturing of the battalion crown.
