

LtGen. Weede Is Honored

Marines from the three Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic commands -- the 2d Marine Division, the 2d Marine Air Wing, and Force Troops, Atlantic -- staged Force Day here today to honor their retiring commander, Lieutenant General Richard G. Weede.

Many prominent state and local civic leaders, including North Carolina State Senator Albert J. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis, and Jacksonville Mayor W. Bruce Teachey and Mrs. Teachey, attended the ceremonies.

The events started at 10 o'clock this morning with a ceremony honoring General Weede, who will retire August 31.

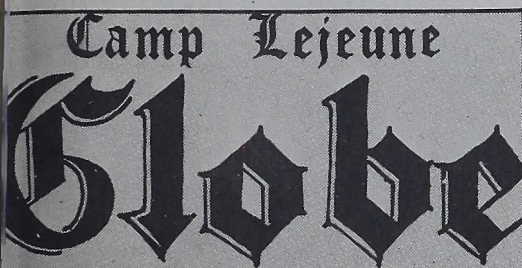

Among the general's decorations are the Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V", the Legion of Merit, two Air Medals and the Distinguished Service Medal.

A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy in 1935, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps. During World War II, he participated in the island invasion of Tarawa and later served as a battalion commander during the Saipan and Okinawa campaigns, earning the Bronze Star.

He later earned the Legion of Merit and the Air Medals for reconnaissance and liaison flights in Korea. General Weede received the Distinguished Service Medal for his performance as Chief of Staff, U.S. Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from February 1962 until May 1964.

Laird Will Submit 'Modern' Pay Plan

Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird declared that he plans to submit a multi-billion dollar military pay modernization proposal to Congress within the next two months.

Navy Times reports that the bill will be the most costly military pay measure in U.S. history and will contain many of the recommendations of the Hubbell pay plan, including the salary system.

If approved, the plan would become effective July 1, 1970. The exact price tag of the proposal is still undetermined.

The defense chief told Navy Times that a little less than half of the total cost would be coming back to the treasury in taxes. Nevertheless, the proposal could be as much as three times as expensive as the $1.3 billion Hubbell proposals.

Laird explained that the new salary table would update the pay schedule in earlier proposals and that it would include higher rates for men at the entry level.

The higher rates for the more numerous lower ranks could account for much of the increase in cost.

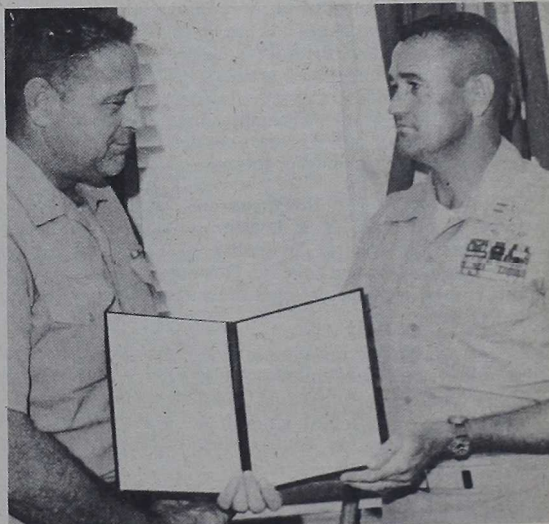

Laird said the pay study work is still in progress and he doesn't want to "prejudge" the final shape of the package, but he made it clear that the salary plan recommended earlier by his department and recently by the Logistics Management Institute study would go forward.

He pointed out that he is committed to getting the bill before Congress for its consideration by early October and that he is striving for that

Facts About The Racial Situation At Lejeune

(Editor's Note: In light of incidents here at Camp Lejeune July 20, 1969 in which three Marines were injured, many rumors have circulated. The following article is intended to give the facts of the incident.)

By LCPL. DON ABOOD

The Armed Forces has one of the best environments capable of dealing with racial problems, a Department of Defense official said here last week.

L. Howard Bennett, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Reserves and Civil Rights, met with the press during his two-day visit to Camp Lejeune to interview a cross-section of Marines about recent on and off base activities.

In Bennett's opinion, the scene of disorder has shifted from the city to the junior and senior high school campus, the place from which most recruits are drawn. Training programs, he said, are needed to eliminate the hostilities created in civilian environments and carried into the armed forces.

Bennett's visit was prompted by, but not directly related to, the July 20 incident which ended with the death of one Marine and the hospitalization of another. Bennett said he had planned to visit the base earlier this year, but commitments elsewhere had twice forced postponement of the trip.

On July 20, a fight ensued outside the enlisted men's club in the 1st Battalion, 6th Marines area. A series of assaults occurred over a period of about 45 minutes which involved about 30 black Marines and a total of about 14 white Marines. These assaults were apparently sparked by incidents earlier in

Stay Alert

Nothing, not even the finest machine is perfect, and therefore, it is a good idea to stay alert, to keep an eye open for events that one day may come back in the form of a plague.

For example, the fiscal department at HQMC have a word of caution for Marines who "even suspect" everything is not A-OK with their pay.

The people who know say check any hints of errors in pay. Check with the disbursing officer, not the "squad-bay-know-it-all" who generally doesn't know it all.

If your pay is wrong -- and this is possible considering the many allotments authorized -- the computers in the Marine Corps' automated services center at Kansas City will eventually catch the error and put the finger on the heretofore "lucky" Marine.

Then, it's "pay-back" time and deductions from pay are made until the books balance. This, needless to say, can be a pain in the pocketbook.

The computers in KC look out for Marines the other way, too. The machines catch underpayments with the same efficiency. During the last six months, the Corps collected $350,000 in overpayments and had to shell out $450,000 in underpayments.

It pays to keep an eye open and check into suspected errors, particularly overpayments. Lean pay days could lie ahead. (Navy Times)

Litter Costly

Litterbugs and littering are menaces!

It costs U.S. taxpayers an estimated $500 million annually to remove litter from streets, highways, parks, beaches and other public property. Military bases, once showplaces for spic-and-span tidiness, are now included in the litter arena. Although they are more rigidly controlled than our streets and highways, littering on our bases is a serious problem.

In addition to the enormous cost, litter, in whatever form it may be, is a health menace as well as a disgrace! It creates breeding grounds for disease-carrying insects and rodents. It is repulsive to those who remember the oases of cleanliness and beauty military bases once were.

The problem of littering is of far greater importance on military establishments where we live and work in a more confining situation. It is closely akin to the family unit. Thus, for efficient, smooth operation there must be a clean and healthy environment in which to live and work.

Disposal of litter is a costly problem, but this is minor when the over-all loss of time and money is considered. For example: Check the dump area of any military establishment and you will find piles of soft drink bottles, perfectly good, reusable, returnable bottles - a great deal of loss in revenue.

These bottles get there by careless and indifferent personnel, both civilian and military, tossing them aside, either in or at trash cans or out of a car window.

Profit derived from the sale of soft drinks at many military establishments is credited to the recreation fund. So, military and civilian personnel who carelessly lose or discard refillable bottles are knifing their own pleasure and that of their co-workers.

Empty soft drink bottles and cans, although far from being the entire cause of the litter problem, greatly contribute to it. Do your part in the war against litter by first accepting the fact that litter is filth in the making and as such should be disposed of in its proper place, not dropped at the individual's convenience to become a health hazard and eye sore. (AFPS)

Preventive Measures Help

We are living in a day that rightly places much emphasis upon preventive maintenance, preventive medicine, and preventive dentistry. What a shame that similar importance isn't placed on religion! So many of our ideas of religion are still in the age of curative rather than preventive religion.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick once said: "True religion is not simply an ambulance at the foot of a precipice to pick up those who have fallen over; it is a fence at the top to prevent their falling in the first place."

Too many people come to a chaplain only for a last resort cure and not a prevention. How many feel that the only time they need a chaplain is when they are in some sort of trouble. As far as that goes, how many feel the same way toward God.

Preventive religion should begin in the home at infancy. Preventive religion puts down deep, strong roots. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6).

Preventive religion must continue through adulthood. I am sure that if many young men and women would keep up their church attendance and private meditations after coming into the military they would be prevented from getting into all sorts of trouble. People with a strong religious faith can find something constructive to do with their spare time.

But let your spiritual guard down, forget about preventive religion, and the first thing you know you will weaken and be in trouble in one form or another. Preventive religion is living your faith and putting it into action every day.

There is no reason why an immoral and irreligious element should drag down the moral and religious to their level. It should be the other way around.

Preventive religion must start

Naval Hospital Must Retain Clinic Records

Marines reporting to a new duty station may not take their outpatient treatment records with them from the Naval Hospital aboard base.

As the property of the U.S. government, they cannot be released to Marines, their dependents, or any civilian doctor or institution.

The hospital will forward your family's outpatient records to the hospital at your next duty station. If you are being released from active duty the hospital will provide you with a copy of essential records.

Wives receiving prenatal care will be provided photocopies of prenatal records, and, if any member of your family has a medical condition which might require treatment en route, the hospital will prepare copies for hand carrying.

with the individual, but it will effect society in general. Preventive religion will make community life better. It will change the tone of family life. It will lift literature to its best. It will clean up the profane and obscene in society.

Preventive religion will have a positive influence upon national and inter-national affairs. Old saying, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", applies in the realm of religion too. Try it!

Career Planners Offer Opportunities

A recent career planning newsletter touched on retraining opportunities and the future importance of knowing your Social Security number.

Beginning on January 1, 1972, the Social Security Account Number (SSAN) will be the service number for members of the Marine Corps. The Army and Air Force have already switched for the most part. Move is designed to identification of individuals easier in data systems throughout the Department of Defense.

Those members without Social Security numbers have issued temporary SSANs by the Chief of Naval Personnel. Numbers will be good only until a valid number is secured from Social Security Administration.

Applications are now accepted for Marines with 0 and 18 MOS's for retraining MOS 0221 (AIR) and (GROUND). You must be a Vietnam returnee in either 3 or E-4 pay grade. Approval or disapproval will be made on application within thirty days after submission.

Contact your unit Career Planning NCO for further information.

LT. THOMAS H. ROADLEY is presented a Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V" by Colonel W.A. Kluckman, commanding officer, H&S BN, MCB.

Roadley Gets Bronze Star Medal

Lieutenant Thomas H. Roadley was presented the Bronze Star with Combat "V" for his heroic actions while a member of the 9th Marine Amphibious Brigade.

Roadley served as fire support coordinator, meshing fire support and tactical actions.

Lieutenant Raymond T. Cook and Corporals Carl A. Cook and Richard R. Cook were the runners-up in the same ceremony. Cook served with the Motor Transport Company, Force Logistics and in Vietnam.

Cook was attached to First Battalion, 1st Marine Company, 1st Marine Division, while Cpl. Cook was a member of Headquarters and Service Company, First Battalion, Seventh Marines, also a 1st Division unit.

Sgt. Battenfield Cited For Service

By CPL BILL SHARRETTE
Sgt. Jerrel D. Battenfield, a Force Troops Marine, was awarded the Bronze Star Medal last week for the heroic rescue of four seriously wounded Marine riflemen during Operation Maui Peak in Vietnam last October. His citation, presented by LtCol. J.S. Saul, commanding officer, 2d Tank Battalion, Force Troops read in part: "While serving with 2d Battalion 7th Marines, 9th Marine Amphibious Brigade, Corporal Battenfield's tank was supporting a Marine battalion when they came under intense automatic weapons fire from a North Vietnamese force.

"Reacting instantly, Cpl. Battenfield directed his crew to provide covering fire from the tank and leaped from the vehicle. Running thirty meters across the fire-swept ground, he brought a wounded Marine to his tank, then returned for a second casualty who he also placed on his vehicle.

"After moving the two men to the landing zone, Cpl. Battenfield directed the tank back to the hazardous area and evacuated two more Marines. Returning again to the fire fight, he directed his vehicle's cannon and machine gun fire upon the hostile force until the Marines silenced the enemy fire."

Cpl. Foley Decorated

Corporal Paul R. Foley, presently serving with Marine Corps Base, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Combat "V" for his heroic actions while at the An Hoa combat base in Vietnam.

The Rome, N.Y., Marine risked his life several times to assist fellow Marines who had been wounded by enemy rocket and mortar fire.

During one such enemy attack, Cpl. Foley observed a rocket explode seriously wounding a Marine who was running for cover. Disregarding his own safety, he rushed across the fire-swept area and administered first aid until assistance arrived.

On March 10, the base was again subjected to heavy enemy rocket fire. One round exploded in Marine living quarters causing five casualties.

Observing the explosion from his own bunker, Cpl. Foley ran to the quarters where he and another Marine provided first aid to the wounded, removed them from the collapsing building, and assisted them aboard evacuation helicopters.

Nine days later, while under a renewed enemy mortar and rocket attack, he was instrumental in saving the life of another wounded Marine by giving him emergency medical treatment and getting him to the battalion aid station.

Colonel W.A. Kluckman, Commanding Officer, Headquarters and Service Battalion, Marine Corps Base made the presentation.

YOP Gets Good Start

The President's Youth Opportunity Program, designed to provide summer jobs for boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 22, is working well at Camp Lejeune according to local program spokesmen.

Jim Sharpe, of the Employee Relations staff at the Civilian Personnel Office said 91 area youths have been hired to work on the base.

The youths are employed in a variety of jobs at Camp Lejeune, working in Base Maintenance, Base Supply, Base Motor Transport, Data Processing and the Civilian Personnel Office.

The summer employment helps youngsters acquire skills for immediate productive work and future employment.

Each employee works with a supervisor who gives on-the-job training and counseling to his helper.

Additional job counseling is given by the Project Transition Office. Employees are also given a free dental and physical exam as part of the program.

Lazy Dog Named Scoop Kept An Eye On Combat Correspondents

PL HANK BERKOWITZ
and LT. CRANE DAVIS

ANG, Vietnam — This is a lot of 18-year-olds, who fight and struggle with the But once their weapons mits and flak jackets are de, a young man misses his parents, his kid brother and his girl.

About the only thing he doesn't miss is his pet.

The 1st Marine Division is 25,000 Leathernecks with an undetermined number of cats, monkeys, snakes, birds, pigs and whatever the Marines can find to shower their pent-up affection on.

For the Combat Correspondents of the Division's Informational Services Office, it was a mangy, unscrupulous, incorrigibly lazy excuse for a dog who occasionally answered to the name of "Scoop."

Scoop was born in the red dust of the An Hoa Combat Base, 20 miles southwest of here. Amidst the rocket attacks and continuous battles, no one took time out to note the birth date of one little black mongrel.

One day an unknown Marine spotted Scoop and called to him, "Come here, dog." With the shuffling, unhurried gait that was his trademark, Scoop granted the Leatherneck's wish. From that day on, he bore the temporary name of "Dog."

As "Dog," he kept a close eye on the 5th Marine Regt. in An Hoa. Day and night he could be seen patrolling the base, checking the lines and looking out for his men.

Unfortunately, this put him in direct competition with the commanding officer of the 5th Marines, who felt these duties were more properly his.

As a result, "Dog" was transferred to Division Headquarters where he became a Combat Correspondent, writing under the pen-name of "Scoop." You may have read some of his stories on his specialty, scout dogs.

Around the office, Scoop was just another one of the guys. In the morning he'd hit the office early, sitting in the doorway and waiting for someone to bring him breakfast. Whenever a package of goodies arrived from "the world," Scoop would be there to secure his fair share.

Unlike the other correspondents, Scoop never went to the bush. It was his opinion that the office dog belonged in the rear, where he could supervise the activities of the office as a whole.

But he always kept an eye on his men. When a correspondent took off out the front door, the last sight he'd see would be Scoop, sitting there and whimpering with liquid eyes.

Upon return, Scoop would let out a yelp, skid across the floor, fly out the door and meet the man halfway up the hill with a wagging tail and the biggest, wettest tongue in the world.

At night, when his work was all completed, Scoop would head for the Enlisted Club to have a few rounds with the boys. Though he was never known to buy a round, there wasn't a man there who'd begrudge him a potato chip or a sip of beer.

Finally, rounding up his men, Scoop would head for the hooch. Like any good Marine, he was even known to take a shower every month or so.

He slept with his men and let them sleep with him. Sometimes he even let them share his cot with him.

The men loved that little black puppy. Holding him in their arms or across their laps, they'd look into his eyes and find the peace and love they missed so much.

Scoop was a good listener and he heard dozens of tales of sorrow and love and plans of what would someday be. An 18-year-old in Vietnam could tell him anything... and he'd never tell another soul.

Scoop was laid to rest in a quiet retreat spared from the violence of war. Under the gently hanging branches of a small tree behind the office stands a crudely inscribed stone:

Here lies the best dog in Nam SCOOOP.

Coast Guard Sets Exercise

The U.S. Coast Guard will be conducting Exercise WEBFOOT VI along the coastal areas of Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina August 23. Their primary purpose is to test measures currently in effect to prevent and detect illegal entry of persons and things into the United States by coastal infiltration.

The Base Film Exchange graduated eight 35 millimeter movie camera projectionists recently, according to Mrs. Sara Bradshaw, exchange instructor and supervisor.

The course covered seven weeks and included classroom and practical application periods of instruction.

"The men learn how to operate and maintain the projector during the running of the movie," related Mrs. Bradshaw. "We met twice a week for classes, but the practical knowledge could only be gained in the booth."

ANCIENT CASTLE of Thessaloniki, Greece.

BLT 3-6 is now just another entry in the immense book of 2d

Story by Corporal

John Vaughan

Marine Division history. It began at Morehead City, N.C., some five months ago with no fanfare or teary sendoff; it returned early this week, and was greeted on the pier in Morehead City, by the music of the Division Band and a congratulatory return speech given by Major General Michael P. Ryan, the division commander.

From their first landing on Timbakion, Crete, to their final debarkation at Morehead City, the Marines of BLT 3-6, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Russell E. Johnson, enjoyed one of the most successful and unusual cruises in a long time.

On Timbakion, Crete, members of BLT 3-6 surrendered their conventional Marine "Deuce" gear, and donned the historical uniforms of the World War I fighting man — complete with M-1, and antiquated "leggings" — this was done in cooperation with 20th Century Fox Film Studios in connection with the film "Patton."

Following the Crete chapter of BLT 3-6, the men found themselves walking in the magnificent Coliseum of Athens, seeing the Parthenon, and other ancient Greek art treasures.

The Leathernecks then found themselves enjoying liberty in exotic Palma de Mallorca, a small island off the coast of Barcelona, Spain. On this island, the men shared the beaches with lovely vacationing Scandinavian girls.

Express" was completed by the BLT in Thessaloniki, Greece, and was termed a great success. It was a NATO Operation and the Marines of BLT 3-6 joined forces with their NATO allies in a mock skirmish.

This operation aided in the effectiveness of the NATO powers, and was a great success, in that the main objectives were accomplished; that is, their effectiveness as a fighting unit was strengthened, and a lasting comradery between the participating nations was formed.

The two weeks training in Malta that the BLT held at the Royal Air Force Base, Hal Far, was enjoyable as well as constructive. The men found this English-speaking port to be quite fascinating, and weren't the least bit aggravated when a mishap at sea forced a portion of the BLT back into Valetta, Malta, for an additional three weeks of liberty.

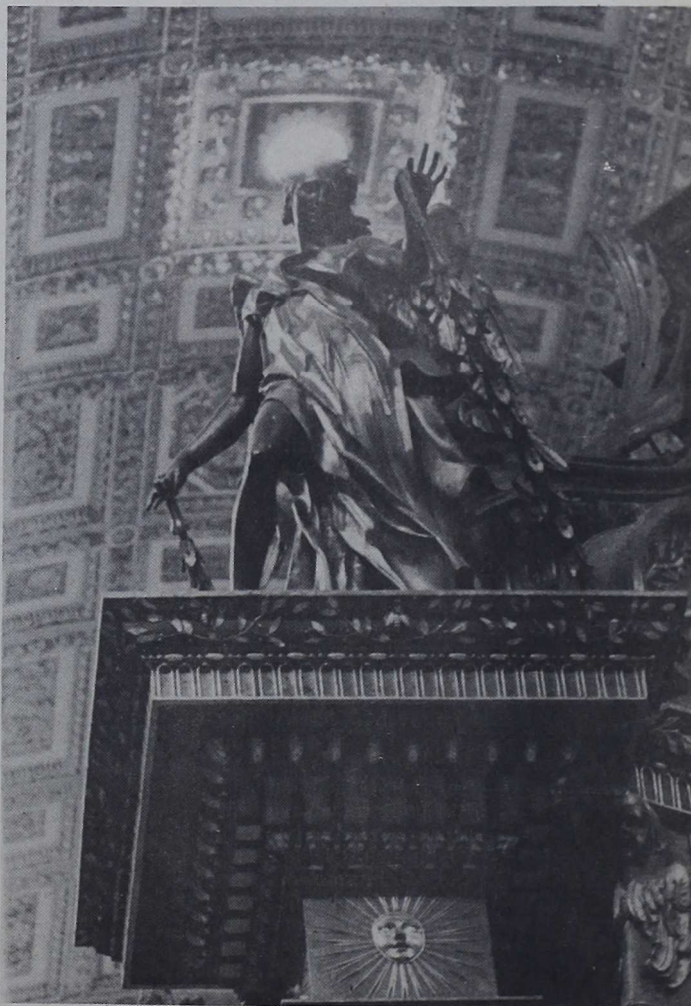

The portion of the BLT that did not return to Malta continued on their way to an operation in Navplion, Greece, then to Taranto, Italy, where they rejoined the other members of the BLT, who had, by this time, assumed honorary citizenships of Malta.

BLT 3-6 has returned, and in a month's time, few people will remember BLT 3-6. That is, few people outside of the BLT itself will remember it.

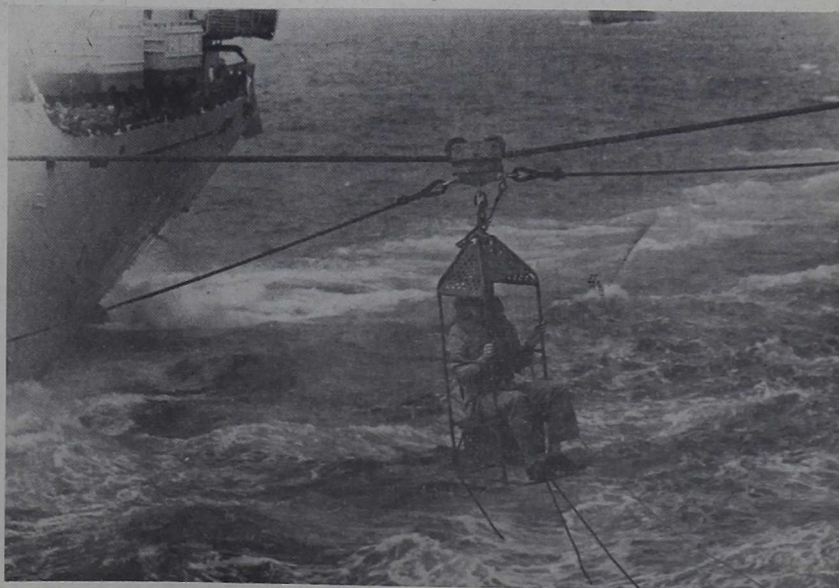

But for the men who rode the seas, made the operations, and enjoyed the liberty ports with BLT 3-6, it is, and will remain for some time to come, one of the most memorable five months of their lives.

2d MAW Dominates FMFLant Tennis Play

The 2d Marine Air Wing (MAW) Tennis Team (red) from Cherry Point dominated singles, doubles, and team play last week to run away with the 1969 FMFLant Tennis Tournament.

The Cherry Point racketmen amassed 24 points during the team competition to defeat the 2d Marine Division, their closest competitor, by 17 points.

1st Lt. Roy Kiessling from 2d MAW outpointed his teammate, LCpl. J.D. Geder, to become the singles champion of the single-elimination affair.

Their rivalry forgotten, Kiessling and Geder teamed up to take the doubles championship from MGySgt. C. Eppinette and Col. J. Hansen, also from the Air Wing.

In the team competition, the Blue Team from Cherry Point came in third with six points, the Force Troops Blue Team came in fourth with five points, and the Force Troops Red Team finished last with three points.

The Air Wing team is currently competing in the Atlantic Fleet Tennis Tournament at the Naval Station, Newport, R.I.

The members of the team now at Newport are Kiessling, Geder, Eppinette, Hansen, Capt. R.C. Glover, 1st Lt. J.L. Daniels, and Sgt. R. Johnston.

Scuba

Camp Lejeune scuba club will start new classes next week at the area Number 5 pool starting August 26 at 7:30 p.m. for two nights a week. Students will attend for one month on two separate evenings.

The class will be limited to 30 students. Call Maj. R.D. Burns at 2555 for further information and signing up for the class.

Cuties

The "California Cuties" were victorious over the Camp Lejeune All-Stars Wednesday night, 5-2.

Fuentes Is All-Marine Champ

Retains 2d Round Lead To Dominate

After taking the lead during the second round of play, Camp Lejeune's Ralph Fuentes never relinquished his hold and became the 1969 All-Marine Golf champion.

Fuentes never missed a beat, despite a strong challenge from Quantico's E.P. Percival, and managed to finish the tourney two strokes ahead of his rival with a score of 300.

While the Open Division leaders were battling it out neck and neck, Pensacola's K.J. Postlewaite ran away with the Senior Division title, finishing with a 301, 16 strokes better than the second place finisher.

An overjoyed Fuentes was modest in his triumph. "The condition of the course was outstanding which was also a big factor," he said.

"The greens keeper did an outstanding job, and deserves a pat on the back."

Fuentes also admitted that playing on his home course was to his great advantage. "I knew where the soft spots, high grass, and other trouble spots were, and was able to stay away from them," he added. "The high rough was extremely bad on the players who hadn't played the course before."

"With the small field (14 in the Open Division) we didn't have to stay out so long. It's easier on everybody when you're able to play faster."

Fuentes and Percival, along with third place winner, M.A. Javors, fourth place man, R.P.K. Werner, and fifth place finisher, J.D. Owen, are now at Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, Va. for the Inter-Service Golf Tournament.

Also making the journey will be the Senior Division leaders, Postlewaite, second place finisher, R. Leu, and third man, E.S. Rust.

Rust, incidentally really had to work for his berth on the All-Marine squad. He had to defeat D.T. Kane on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order, and Ralph Fuentes (left), and K.J. Postlewaite make sure that they get what they deserve — a hearty handshake.

Devilpups Begin Practice With 'Question Mark'

McGhee And Staff Will Attempt To Duplicate Last Season's Record

"Son, do you know your right foot from your left?"

"Yes sir!"

"Well now that's just great. What we lack in size, we'll make up in intelligence. That's just great!"

Coach Tom McGhee has returned to Lejeune High School after a summer at Pinehurst Country Club. And he is definitely the man in charge.

McGhee, along with assistants Dave Lee, Mike Smith, and John Griffin, will attempt to duplicate last year's undefeated record on the gridiron. It will not be an easy job.

"The line is our only question mark," said Griffin. "Buddy Head, who had a real big season last year, will be our only returning lineman."

"It's a different story in the backfield, though. Jerry Linn saw a good deal of action at quarterback last year, and we expect a lot from him. Larry Morris, a transfer from Havelock, has quarterbacking experience, so we should have good depth in that position."

"Halfbacks Billy Crites, Gary Saul, and Mike Hollingsworth are also squad veterans. Their speed and experience could make all the difference in the world."

Bill Paulson, a new acquisition from Virginia Beach, is expected to fill the bill at fullback.

But the "question mark" still remains a big, big problem. According to Griffin, the line will have "a lot of good, fresh sophomores." Will they be good enough?

So with the smallest line in four years, the Lejeune High School squad prepares for a tough schedule starting with Pamlico High School September 5.

Every time the Devilpups take the field, they'll probably be worrying about two things - their opponents and their reputation as "the team to beat".

"IT'S NOT ALL PLAY," as these Lejeune teens learn at football practice.

Camp Lejeune To Host FMFLant Softball Tourney

Quantico Gridders Begin Practice

Recruiting Concept Potentially Successful

By PFC CHUCK CASTRINA
QUANTICO — July 28 marked the opening of practice for the 40th edition of Quantico football with morning and afternoon workouts at Corsair Field at the Air Station here.

For new Head Coach Captain Ed Heuring, it meant the completion of efforts to select coaches who will assist him in the challenge of rejuvenating the Marines into a winning ball club. On July 22, 1st Lt. Ed Kesler reported to Quantico and was the final addition to the coaching staff. Lt. Kesler, a 1964 graduate of the University of North Carolina, played fullback for the Tar Heels and will assist Capt. Mike Parker in coaching the offensive backfield.

Capt. Heuring's efforts did not ease with the acquisition of top right coaches. He and one of his assistants, Capt. Cliff Yoshida, traveled to six Marines Corps installations in June to screen blue chip prospects for the Quantico team.

This recruiting concept was established by last year's head coach, Maj. King Dixon, and Capt. Heuring hopes that the culmination of this year's efforts will be successful.

"Following our recruiting venture, the coaching staff chose 10 players we felt could help our cause," said Capt. Heuring. Many of these players have been coming to us daily and we hope to have the majority of them by the middle of August."

The first week of practice consisted of orienting players to the new organization, emphasizing offensive and defensive patterns. Capt. Heuring explained that reflex, agility and conditioning drills highlighted the morning workouts in an attempt to get the players in shape.

Capt. Heuring asserted that the purpose of these practice sessions is to instruct, evaluate and constructively criticize the players in order to prepare them mentally and physically for the September 13 opener with Presbyterian here.

The Marines will conclude their daily workouts with a Sept. 6 practice scrimmage against East Stroudsburg State College, Pa., at Butler Stadium.

"We feel that this scrimmage with Stroudsburg will be beneficial in evaluating our strengths and weaknesses," said Capt. Heuring.

The time is at hand for Capt. Heuring and his assistants to begin the task of instructing and developing the Quantico team into a winner.

Gunnery Sergeant G. Saldivar Jr. of Comm. Company, Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division is well on his way to becoming Camp Lejeune's first 500 miler.

Gunny Saldivar joined the 500-Miler club on July 11, and since that time he has run well over 200 miles, averaging 4.4 miles a day.

The Club, started by Staff Sergeant James L. Powell Jr., Base Athletic Chief, is open to any and all personnel aboard base. The reward? Your own personal satisfaction.

Reservists Quickly Learn 'Ropes' Of Rappelling

By PFC STANLEY WATKINS

A day with "Recon" meant a day of flying and floating adventure for Marine Reservists from Lexington, Ky., at Camp Lejeune.

The members of Company D, Fourth Military Police Battalion, underwent training in rappelling and rubber boat handling. Their instructors were members of the Second Reconnaissance Battalion, the combat scouts of the Second Marine Division.

Rappelling is a method of sliding quickly down a mountainside, building or from helicopters, using a special rope run through a harness around the waist. The Bluegrass Marines learned the skill on a training tower near Camp Lejeune's Onslow Beach.

The reservists started with slides from 30 feet bracing their feet against a wooden wall. After gaining confidence, they graduated to slides from the top of the tower 90 feet above ground.

From that height the rappelling ropes were controlled by experts on the ground. In case of a mishap, the rope handlers could guide the descent of the rappeller, or stop him in the air.

Emphasis on safety was strong. If a reservist forgot one of the precautions, he was "reminded" with a few pushups. Rank had no privileges. Officers, sergeants and privates all did their pushups when mistakes occurred.

Like combat specialists in other services, Marine "recons" are a proud group of highly trained elite troops. But the Kentucky reservists won praise from their instructors for quickly learning the "ropes" of rappelling.

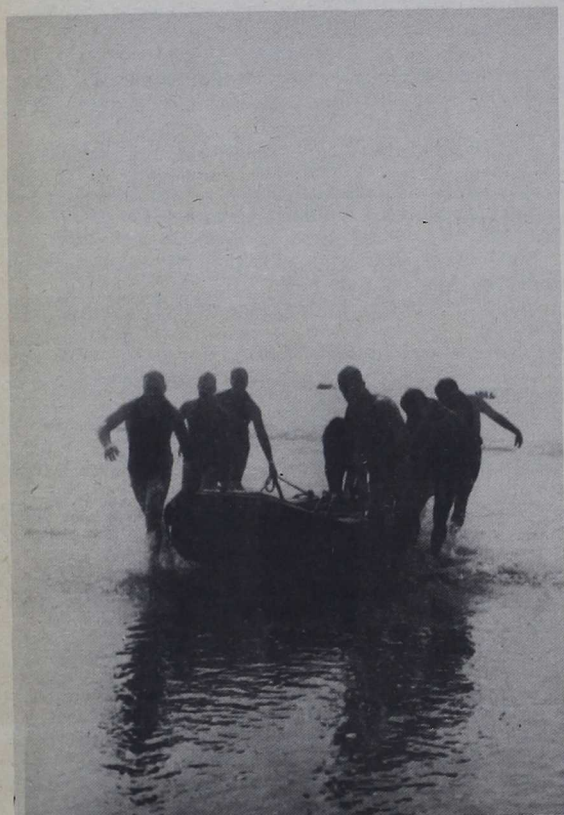

Later in the day the scene changed from clear air to bubbling surf. Another group of "recons" took Company D through the basics of rubber boat training. Reconnaissance forces use the boats to get ashore prior to amphibious landings to provide Marine commanders with valuable combat intelligence.

For the Lexington Marines, the boat drills were a wet and welcome relief after a hot morning of work on the rappelling tower. They combined training with fun as they maneuvered the light craft to and from the beach. They also learned how to cope with emergencies such as a swamped or deflated boat.

At the end of the day, the reservists looked forward to the weekend and the final week of ATD before returning home.

the evening in the club.

These events occurred two days prior to deployment of the 1st Battalion, 6th Marines to the Mediterranean; this incident was unique in the number of people involved and assaults committed.

Corporal Edward Bankston, 20, Picayune, Miss., died of his injuries July 27 in the Naval Hospital at Portsmouth, Va.

Private First Class James S. Young, 19, Roanoke, Ala., remains in the Portsmouth hospital in satisfactory condition.

Five Marines have been charged with murder, rioting and 14 counts of assault in connection with Bankston's death. They are:

Private William L. Short, 21, Opalocka, Fla.; Private Edward B. Combs, 18, Weirton, W. Va.; Private First Class Sylvester T. Hundley, 19, Adina, Ohio; Private Raymond A. Rivera, 19, Denver, Colo. and Corporal Carmen B. Nunez, 23, Camden, N.J. No trial date for the five Marines charged has been set.

Unit commands are studying measures to improve communications between personnel relating to racial understanding. Such measures include those discussed by Bennett, designed to insure a better knowledge of Marine Corps policies and procedures, and to prevent future occurrences of incidents similar to the tragedy of July 20.

Laird Seeks Pay Boost

July 1, 1970, effective date.

Laird said he feels the entry-level pay must be considerably higher than it is now or even in the recommended proposal for President Nixon's all-volunteer armed force to become a reality.

"We should not just give a man enough to make him want to volunteer," he told Navy Times. "We must offer enough to attract a large enough number of men so that we have the choice of accepting some and rejecting others."

Volunteer armed force studies are based on a force of 2.65 million men, the secretary said. The minimum estimate of the cost would be $4 billion and the maximum $12 billion. He feels that six-to-eight billion dollars is more realistic.

Capt. Hamm Is Decorated With Second Bronze Star

By LCPL. DON ABOOD

A Marine captain who accompanied Vietnamese commandos on 34 raids deep into Viet Cong territory has been awarded a Gold Star in lieu of his second Bronze Star Medal.

Captain Troy B. Hamm was presented the award by Colonel J.M. Landrigan, commanding officer, Headquarters Battalion, 2d Marine Division.

Capt. Hamm served as Psychological Warfare Operations Advisor of the United States Marine Corps' Advisory Team 43, working with the South Vietnamese in the Rung Sat Special Zone near Saigon.

The captain said he was working with both regional and provisional forces whose job it was to protect the main commercial shipping channels in Saigon against enemy attacks.

The advisory team consisted of four Marine officers, including Capt. Hamm, then a first lieutenant, and four enlisted Marines and one Navy corpsman.

Navy PBR (River Patrol Boats), "Swift boats," and other craft were employed by the Marines and the South Vietnamese during night patrols and ambushes.

Capt. Hamm said he had volunteered for Vietnam duty as he had done earlier, in 1965 when he was an advisor to South Vietnamese Army units. That year he was awarded his first Bronze Star Medal.

According to the citation which accompanied Capt. Hamm's Gold Star, the Marine's "determination and interest in the welfare of the Vietnamese people insured delivery of commodities, supplies and equipment to unsecured and isolated villages."

The captain said he feels "the new corps of young South Vietnamese officers is typical of our officers in our services. The troops are more aggressive, honest and dedicated. And their training is much better."

Capt. Hamm, Assistant

Officer-in-Charge of the Noncommissioned Officer Leadership School, 2d Marine Division, assumed his present billet upon returning from Vietnam in June.

Of Project Transition

Rep. Lipscomb Voices His Favor

A doubting Congressman apparently has been convinced that the one million dollars allotted to Project Transition is being well spent.

A Washington correspondent reports that two Marine generals and a Navy admiral won the approval of Rep. Glenard Libscomb, R-Calif., in testimony before the House Appropriations subcommittee on Defense Department Operations and Maintenance.

BGen. George Axtell, assistant Chief of Staff (Logistics), BGen. E.H. Simmons, deputy fiscal director, and Rear Adm. W.D. Gaddis, director of budget and reports, defended the expenditure at the hearings.

"What did you get for your million dollars?" Lipscomb bluntly asked.

Gen. Axtell explained the purpose of Project Transition — to provide a Marine who does not have a specific skill or who had incurred a disability while in the service with a training which should be helpful to him in civilian life.

"The presumption of the project is that we return to civilian society a man who is better equipped to enter that society," Gen. Simmons added.

Lipscomb wanted to know if any records had been kept on the project and asked "does this not cost about $7,000 to $8,000 per transition participant?"

Gen. Axtell answered that no records had been kept and explained that the cost per man ranged between $700 and $1,000. He added that about $1.035 million had been spent on 1,000 men in fiscal 1969.

The congressman persisted, asking "what loss would there if we deleted the $1.035 million from the Marine Corps budget?"

"The loss would be that we would not be able to provide service to these people who have not acquired a skill while in service for their transition civilian life," responded BGen. Axtell.

"These are people who have suffered a disability and need to acquire another skill in order to become useful citizens once they are discharged from the service. We are trying to provide capability that will enable someone who has ably served his country to do something else."

The committee was given specific examples and BGen. Axtell told about the program at Camp Pendleton. Adm. Gaddis followed with an example about a Marine at Quantico who stayed in his Project Transition class weeks after his release date.

Congressman Lipscomb agreed that "we are better off having helped just one man with the program. The committee members are likewise."
