Electric Power Cut In Some Locations

Electrical power to certain areas of Camp Lejeune will be cut during the next six days according to a recent announcement by Colonel W. W. Morten, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, Marine Corps Base.

The reason for the outage is to allow contractors to complete installation of additional electrical facilities into the Base system to increase the power and electrical services.

The work is being done jointly by Carolina Power & Light Company, private contractors, and Camp Lejeune personnel. Those areas affected and the dates are:

THURSDAY, JUNE 24 - From 11 a.m. until dark, power to the industrial area will be suspended. This will necessitate the closing of the Commissary, the filling station, cafeteria, outdoor theatre and special services operations in the area defined.

SUNDAY, JUNE 25 - From 7 a.m. until 3:30 p.m., all areas of Camp Lejeune except Camp Geiger, Tarawa Terrace and Geiger Trailer Park will be without electricity.

Residents of Camp Lejeune are cautioned that the power outage will affect the water supply. Washing of cars, watering of lawns or any other nonessential use of water will be prohibited during the hours of the power outage. This will include all of Saturday and Sunday.

THE FASTER YOU GO...

Traffic statistics for 1967 show Lejeune Marines are slaughtering and maiming themselves at a pace equal to last year's incredible toll.

The statistics since Jan. 1 are brief and grim. . . 23 dead. . . 24 injuries. . . 78 accidents.

Leading this year's "death on wheels" parade was the worst single-car accident ever at Camp Lejeune. On Jan. 7, four Marines were killed and one critically injured when their car left Dixon-Sneads Ferry Road at a speed in excess of 100 m. p. h.

This and similar accidents involving Lejeune Marines were due to "driver error."

Driver error is a nice term highway officials use to say the drivers involved in the fatal accidents were speeding, drinking running traffic signals, failing to yield right of way, driving recklessly, passing improperly or wandering all over the road.

Driver error is not a harsh term. It doesn't grate on the ears. But the result of driver error is not pleasant.

The victims of driver error usually face three alternatives. The morgue. The hospital. Or home.

The trip to the morgue is painless for those who go there. They are quite dead.

The traffic victim who ends up in the morgue is placed on a spotless and gleaming stainless steel slab. His clothing is removed. The body is examined. Personal effects are carefully itemized and placed in bags for delivery to next of kin.

The body is put on a tray that slides into a cooling compartment. The temperature is 40 degrees. The door closes. It's dark inside.

The victim of driver error who goes to the hospital might be very quiet during the ambulance ride, or he might be screaming. It won't matter to the doctors and nurses. They hear screams every day.

The victim might be in surgery. There, clustered round a table beneath a white light, doctors fight against time and loss of blood to repair the mangled flesh and several arteries.

If he goes home someday, he may never be the same as that moment before screeching tires and a deafening crash stopped him.

He may have to learn to walk again, or tie his shoe laces with one hand. He might never work. His body and mind will carry the deep scars of that very impersonal thing called driver error.

The accident victim who escapes serious physical injury and goes home may also have to face painful and deep wounds. These are the wounds of grief. Some never heal. He may live with the unforgettable sound of chattering glass and smashed metal.

A smiling face of a small child may have vanished. Toys rest dusty and unused in a corner. Familiar laughter has been silenced. The nights are endless. The sun doesn't seem to shine as before.

For every drab statistic recorded by the Camp Lejeune Traffic Investigation Department there are people who would give all they have to wipe out a brief and tragic instant. . . an instant caused by driver error.

Stay Loose

By 1stLt. Ralph Deaver

Someone was talking about a young Marine shipping for six, a back. His name seemed to ring a bell.

"Was that the guy who reenlisted while parachuting to earth his commanding officer?"

"No, you're thinking about 'Nose' McHamey. He did that, ab year ago."

"Oh, yeah; that's right. This was the one who had just fini 1100 sit-ups, 200 pushups, 900 squat thrusts and the 50-mile or something like that."

"Wrong. This one just walked into the old man's office and sworn in."

"He had his three little boys in their miniature blues looking Didn't he?"

"The only son this guy has is a girl. Far as I know she do have any dress blues."

"Did he ship for embassy duty in Paris? Language School? Cruiting duty in his home town?"

"No, No. ... He asked for a tour with the FMF."

"Did he get a steak dinner with the CO and the First Sergean"

"I don't know, I don't think so."

"Sounds kinda weird doesn't it?"

"Well ... They DID ask him if he'd like to be reenlisted a Gunny's house. Kinda to show that sergeants and their troops influence upon reenlistments. They also offered to ship him on the steps at Headquarters, holding a chain with his platoon l and his platoon sergeant -- you know denoting that his enlist helps hold the links together. But he said it wasn't necessa

"How about his three older brothers and two younger sisters are in the Corps?"

"No ... If he has any, they weren't there."

It sounded pretty dismal to me.

"Did he happen to be the Marine of the Month, or the squad l of the year or anything like that?"

"No, none of those things."

He explained there just wasn't anything unusual about the m the ceremony.

"Imagine that! Just imagine that! A guy ships over and de get a thing. I guess he just wanted the bonus. Well, everyb their own taste."

"He looked happy enough; I think he got what he wanted, what I heard him say."

"What's that?"

"Well, I heard him tell the colonel: 'My enlistment was u HAD to ship over. Not going to catch me being an Ex-Mari I bet you don't either."

Wounded Marines Fight Bravely In Soon-To-Be-Forgotten Battle

By Cpl. L.T. Brown
DA NANG, Vietnam, June 14 - "F" Co., 2nd Bn., Fifth Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, along with "A" and "D" Co. of the 1st Bn. were sweeping through a complex of open rice paddies toward a treeline a few hundred yards ahead on June 2.

The quiet afternoon was suddenly split open by enemy automatic weapons fire. Mortars smashed in a criss-cross pattern throughout the paddy.

Many Marines were wounded by the fire. Most of the others were pinned down behind dikes by it and unable to advance.

Towards the front of the "F" Co. a squad leader had been blinded by bamboo splinters. Next to him lies a machinegunner with a hand blown off.

Both are in shock, but both react. The squad leader positions himself behind the machinegun. The machinegunner, sighting along the nearby treeline, calls targets to his squad leader.

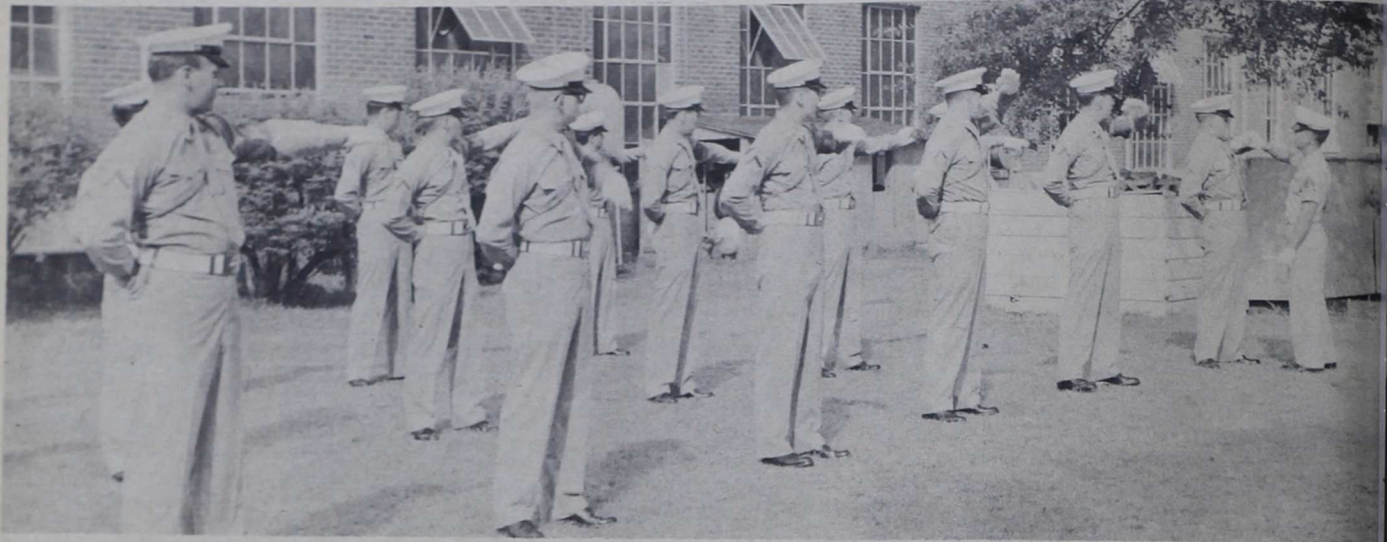

The pair effectively fire several belts of ammunition into the enemy positions 150-200 yards away. The machinegunner, dragging his weapon with him, dies as he crawls across the rice paddies before reaching friendly units.

The blind squad leader is later found by men from his company combing the paddies at dusk looking for wounded. He is led back to an awaiting medic chopper.

The battle is over.

Red Cross volunteers have been volunteering their services to the U.S. Naval Hospital for more than 20 years. According to Miss Elizabeth Taylor, Red Cross Supervisor at Naval Hospital, "Unless we have a sufficient number of volunteer women we cannot provide patients with the best possible service, which is one of our important missions."

Miss Taylor said that this past month they have lost many of their volunteers. At present the program is suffering from lack of personnel.

The volunteers work in the clinics or wards, assisting in jobs such as the blood bank, obstetric and gynecology wards, surgical clinic, well-baby and electrical cardiogram. On the wards they operate the crafts cart, library cart and sponsor other recreational activities.

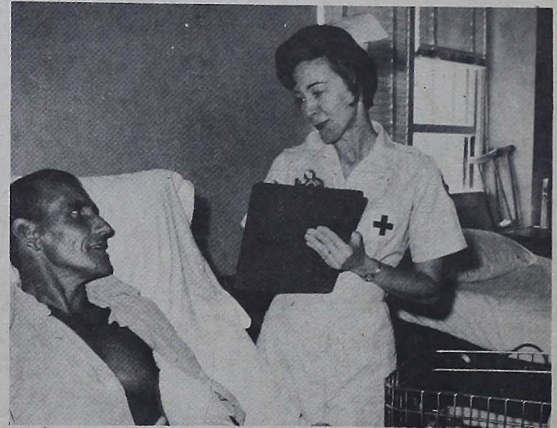

Volunteers are needed in all of these areas, but organizing and training a class is time consuming. For this reason, trained volunteers are being sought.

Miss Vera Moberly, Staff Recreation Chairman, stressed the point that "thoughtfulness is priceless". These patients, many of them Vietnam veterans, are restricted to the hospital. Organized groups sponsor games and other activities for these patients. Groups of Marines or dependents interested in entertaining these men are asked to call the hospital for more information.

Red Cross Volunteers are dependents and civilians who are willing to devote their time in an effort to help others. Their functions are not restricted to the hospital; they also work in the schools and will be working in the Dental Fluoride Clinic. They are a devoted group of women and are asking for others to aid a worthwhile cause.

MRS. ALFRED S. Pettinelli, assisted by LtCmdr. P. Mitchell, out-patient supervisor, logs in charts of patient Mrs. Terry Caselli and her daughter Sheri. Commander Mitchell aids the volunteers with their work on her three wards.

GUNNERY SERGEANT Arthur L. Fitzgerald, recently returned from Vietnam, tells Mrs. Rayford M. Butler what he would like her to purchase for him at the Post Exchange, Mrs. Butler and other volunteers in charge of the "shopping cart" shop for those patients restricted to the hospital.

If you are a trained volunteer or are interested in becoming one, call Mrs. J.R. Motelewski, Over-all Chairman for the Red Cross Volunteers Extension 6-6266 or Mrs. L.L. Page, Extension 6-6260.

In April he finished first in the 10,000 meter run in the Quantico Relays.

Leading the Marine contenders in the meet, Clark took the 10,000 meter run, winning by more than two minutes, with a time of 31:05.8. In the 5,000 meter run, Clark posted a time of 14:47.8 to best his two Army competitors.

Marine John Perry sweated his way to a 1:48.5 clocking to win the 800 meter run. He had the Army's Tommy Farrell close on his heels as he rounded the final turn but as he rounded the final turn but put on a burst of speed to cross the line and take the win. Farrell posted a 1:48.9 time and Marine Rex Garvin notched a third place finish with a 1:49.5.

PP Courses Owe Much To Ed Mann

In every field of endeavor there is always one who endears himself to all with whom he becomes associated. Such was the case with Eddie Mann, the late Greenskeeper at the Paradise Point Golf courses.

In late 1945 he became the Greenskeeper after serving several years on the base as a Civil Engineer. During this time the number one course was being designed and built under the direction of the nationally famous golf architect, Mr. George Cobb. Due to his background and experience as a Civil Engineer, his advice and counsel was often sought by Mr. Cobb during the construction period.

A few years later, he assisted Mr. Cobb in the design and layout of the number two golf course. About six years ago he completely redesigned both courses mak-

Each year over 100,000 Marines and their families find pleasure and enjoyment playing these beautiful courses which Eddie Mann played such a vital role in creating and maintaining until his untimely death in an automobile accident in the vicinity of Myrtle Beach, South Carolina while enroute home from attending a Greenskeepers' convention.

The men of the golf course maintenance section have donated a trophy, to be placed in the Trophy Case at the Golf Course, which is to be awarded annually in memoriam to Eddie Mann and his contributions to the Paradise Point Golf courses.

The second half of season play begins this Saturday.

Eagle In The Rough

By Major W.A. Merrill

The number 1 course was the scene this past weekend of the Landwehr Scramble, a catch foursome tournament. The namesake of the tourney, the outgoing Chairman of the Golf Committee, led the winning foursome. Coming in with the low gross of 62 was the team of Colonel and Mrs. R.W. Landwehr, ISgt Whitney Nowell and Sergeant Reni Werer.

Two teams came in with a 64 to tie for second place. SgtMaj and Cathy Postlewait teamed up with Lieutenant Colonel Bill Unger and Brigadier General Williams while Colonel and Mrs. B.W. McLean teamed with Colonel T.T. Bray and Sergeant Leonard Klyman. In the low net winners column with a 47 was the team of Sergeant and Mrs. Jerry Owen, MSgt Andy Zihar and Major J. S. Agee. A team net of 49 won second place for the team of GySgt and Mrs. R.L. Berton, Sergeant Jackson and Corporal Patterson. Tied at 51 were the teams of Dr. and Mrs. J. Peyton, Warrant Officer Rike and Colonel Eilsen and the team of Captain and Mrs. Arnell, USN, Sergeant House and Colonel M. Matthews.

Another hole-in-one has been recorded on the number two course. The 147 yard second hole was aced by Captain Art Taylor, Bulkuel Company, 2d FSR, using a six iron. Playing with him was his wife Rose, who incidentally turned in a 75 for 18 holes while Captain Taylor finished with a 76. Two fine rounds.

This week at the Golf Clinic, Mr. Jim Antz will cover the 3/4 and full iron shot. The clinic takes place at 6 p.m. Friday in the vicinity of the Club House.

Don't know for sure, but it's rumored around that the odds makers are going 8 to 1 there will be at least three white putters in the course this weekend. If it actually helps - why not?

The Red Cross Advises . . .

Equip your boat with a motor of a power safe for the boat's size. Your dealer can help you choose the correct motor.

Marine Reserve Movement At Lejeune

CONGRATULATIONS - Cpl. J. Lancaster and Sgt. H. Coggins of the 12th Motor Transport Bn., Memphis, Tenn., congratulate one another after completing a successful 931-mile trip from Memphis to Camp Lejeune.

12th Motor T. Bn. Drives Convoy Here From Memphis, Tenn.

The 12th Motor Transport Bn., USMCR, brought their rolling stock to Annual Field Training here this year, a convoy consisting of 21 M-54 5-ton cargo trucks; four jeeps and a wrecker.

They left their home park of Memphis, Tenn., early one Saturday and arrived here about noon on Monday. A good part of their trip was driven over hazardous mountain terrain.

The trip was accomplished without a major breakdown or accident, a vital training expedition for these 'citizen Marines.' Major Ray U. Tanner lauded all hands for their "fine performance."

GAS CHAMBER - Reserves, still blurry-eyed, come from the gas chamber where they are introduced to chemical gases and instructed on the use of the gas mask during annual field training here.

Raleigh Reserves Kept Busy Firing 155mm Howitzers

Field firing exercises lasting from early morning until after midnight have kept the members of the 4th 155mm Howitzer Battery, USMCR, of Raleigh, N.C. busy as they train here, from June 11 - 24.

PLAN OF ACTION - Major Joseph B. Burns, Adjutant of Baltimore's 4th Engineer Battalion, Marine Corps Reserve, conducts a briefing for Company Commanders prior to a field problem which will test the battalion's communication abilities under combat conditions.

Camp Lejeune, the largest amphibious training base in the world, is the site of this year's Annual Field Training for members of the 4th 155. They are receiving instructions and learning the essentials of battery defensive tactics, combat operational procedures, and night firing problems. Ammunition and supplies used by the unit come from the Base Ammunition Office.

Also included in the training are classes on Maintenance of Equipment, the M-60 Machine Gun, physical training, use of the hand grenade and a day in a "Viet-Cong Village."

Forward observers of the Battery received instruction on the care and use of their equipment during the annual field training.

The job of forward observer in an artillery battery is important, since he determines where the rounds are exploding, and, consequently, where to place ensuing rounds.

The Fire Direction Center group, always located with the howitzers in the rear, then plots the information on its charts, translates it into technical data, and relays it to the howitzer gunners.

Miscalculation by any of these specialists can result in serious casualties to friendly forces.

20th Rifle Co. Here From Rockford, Ill.

The 20th Marine Rifle Company (Rockford, Ill.) completed the first week of its annual two week summer training period today.

While at this Base, they will participate in small unit infantry training which includes rifle qualification, weapons demonstration, physical conditioning, and tactics classes.

Hosted by the 8th Marine Regiment, 2d Marine Division, this outfit arrived June 11 and will depart June 24.

Amtrac's Help With Reserves

About 150 men of Company "A", 2d Amphibian Tractor Bn., Force Troops are helping with annual Reserve training at Little Creek, Va., this year.

The "amtrac's", under command of Capt. Kenneth P. Knuebel, are presently on location with their equipment to aid in the reserve training.

MOVIE REVIEWS

HALLUCINATION GENERATION

One of the most distant of the "far-out" flicks, this movie tells the supposedly realistic story of what goes on at "pill parties," what a person can do under the influence of LSD, and what terrible ramifications one can expect from "blowing a little pot." While the audience may be shocked, and stunned at the evil effects of these hallucination-causing agents, it must be remembered that the Hollywood influence is ever-present throughout the motion picture; hence, the tendency to glorify their use and to glamorize the results of that use, even to the point of making it appear "groovy" to rob a bank shortly after "blowing one's mind."

A few of the characters who "take a trip" by swallowing a few "uppies" (pills which raise one's spirits, as opposed to "downies" which have a tendency to depress) are George Montgomery, Danny Stone and Renate Kasche. The chief rascal in the picture is of course a "mainliner" (one who injects the drugs directly into his bloodstream) and he is engaged in pushing "Big H." (Heroin). Even when he is killed at the conclusion of the film, Hollywood sees to it that his death comes across as something akin to that of a martyr who has died in the pursuit of "maintaining his cool."

The effects of this flick on the immature and unsophisticated audience can be catastrophic if each member of that audience does not see beyond the excitement and intrigue of hallucinogenics and realize the horrifying results of their use. For this reason, this film is recommended for mature adults only.

The accompanying Bronze Star citation read in part, "... in the afternoon of June 25, 1966, near Ap My Phu, Republic of Vietnam, Lance Corporal Wess' squad was ordered to envelope a sniper position in order to protect eight Marines aboard a previously downed helicopter.

"As the squad moved forward, they observed three enemy guerrillas running from spider holes and opened fire, killing all three. At this time the squad came under heavy fire from an estimated twenty to thirty well concealed and entrenched Viet Cong, sustaining heavy casualties.

"As the squad began to withdraw, Wess saw a seriously wounded man to his front. Disregarding his own safety, he rushed through intense fire and dragged the wounded Marine three hundred meters to cover. He again unhesitatingly returned and evacuated another Marine, again exposing himself to enemy fire.

"His courageous actions saved two lives and were a source of inspiration to those who observed him," concluded the citation.

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., Sgt. Wess was also awarded the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Bronze Star for, as stated in the accompanying citation, "a brave and enthusiastic Marine, especially during operation LAM-SON 284 from June 25 to June 28, 1966.
