General stresses energy conservation

This week has been proclaimed Energy Awareness Week for the Department of Defense. Camp Lejeune's commitment to energy conservation was recognized last year by several awards. Three individuals from the base were awarded the Department of Energy's Federal Energy Efficiency Award. Camp Lejeune was also awarded both the Secretary of the Navy's Energy Conservation Award and the Department of Energy's Federal Energy Efficiency Award.

In observance of this year's Energy Awareness Week, we have planned a variety of activities to solicit your cooperation and to show off what we are doing to conserve energy.

Energy conservation means a lot to all of us. Our energy bill last year exceeded $21 million. Electricity alone cost $15 million. Our electric bill exceeded $1 million per month for four months last year. We burn 27,000 tons of coal or 380 train car loads and 9 million gallons of fuel to 1,300 tanker truck loads to produce steam in our heating plants. As you can see, the price for energy at Camp Lejeune is very high. But since the cost is high, small savings amount to significant amounts of money. For each one percent reduction in energy consumption, we save approximately a quarter of a million dollars. These savings can be spent to improve the facilities in which we live and work.

Great savings would be realized if each of us were to practice four simple conservation ideas: First, turn our thermostats down a few degrees. Second, reduce our use of hot water. Third, turn off unnecessary lights, and fourth, try to use electricity during off-peak hours. If we all would do these simple things, energy consumption aboard the base could be reduced by as much as 10 percent. That would be $2.5 million that could be used elsewhere to improve the base.

As part of our Energy Conservation Program, we are continually striving to upgrade facilities and equipment to make them more energy-efficient. These measures will continue as buildings are constructed or renovated. However, even the most energy-efficient facility or piece of equipment will be an energy abuser if its occupant or operator doesn't work at conserving energy. Each of us living or working at Camp Lejeune must do our part to save energy.

The Navy Department's theme for Energy Awareness Week proclaims that: "Energy makes America work." Energy is a vital part of the American economy. Efficient use of it contributes toward making our economy the most productive in the world. The 1988 Energy Awareness theme recognizes this close relationship between energy, economic prosperity and national security.

With the combined efforts of all concerned, we can meet our conservation goals. I urge each of you to participate in conserving energy, not only during Energy Awareness Week, but throughout the year.

Thank you,

Brigadier General Donald R. Gardner

Adoption benefits available

By Evelyn Doyle Harris
American Forces Information Services

On Sept. 27, Assistant Secretary of Defense (Force Management and Personnel) Grand S. Green Jr. signed DoD Instruction 1341.4. It established policy for implementing a two-year test program for reimbursing adoption expenses.

Under the plan, active duty service members can be reimbursed up to $2,000 per child or $5,000 per member in a calendar year. The adoptions must be initiated between Oct. 1, 1987, and Sept. 30, 1989. DoD defines the date of initiation as the date of the initial home-study report or the placement of the child in the military member's home for adoption—whichever is later.

For example, if Sgt. Jones and her spouse decide to adopt a foster child they've been caring for in their home, they will be reimbursed if the home-study report is completed by Sept. 30, 1989. On the other hand, if a military couple undergoes a home study by the closing date but the child is not placed until November 1989, costs would not be reimbursed.

The program applies only to families of service members serving on continuous active duty for at least 180 days. DoD officials expect the program to be very popular, based on numerous inquiries they've received since Congress authorized the program in 1988 Defense Authorization Act this spring.

With the exception of the adoption of stepchildren, the program covers most adoptions of children up to the age of 18 by married couples and single service members. It also covers adoption of children from countries other than the United States and those with special needs.

Most reasonable expenses relating to a legal adoption are reimbursed, unless they have been covered by another government adoption benefits program. "Reasonable expenses" include placement as well as legal and medical fees, including hospital expenses for a newborn infant. Overseas travel fees will be covered if they are necessary to assess the child's health, to qualify for legal adoption or to escort the child to the service member's home.

The services have until the end of 1988 to fully implement the test program, said the Army's adoption point of contact, Bill Hunnicut, of the Army Finance and Accounting Center, Indianapolis. Therefore, he advised members not to be surprised if they are told to wait a few weeks to get registration forms and assistance in applying. The services will announce their implementing instructions through internal information programs and other media. The Army has decided to make finance offices the points of contact for registration forms and program information. Spokesmen for the other services say they are leaning toward making legal assistance offices the points of contact; in the interim, their members should contact those office.

While they are waiting for their service to implement the program, service members who want to apply for reimbursement should keep careful records of all expenses. They should register for reimbursement as soon as both the home-study and placement are complete. Service members should request payment no later than 180 days after the adoption is final, unless that occurred before their service issued implementing instructions. In that case, the limit is 180 days from the service implementation date.

It's once again time to fall back

"Fall-back" time this year is Sunday, Oct. 30. That's when you set your clocks back one hour and standard time resumes, officially at 2 a.m.

Under standard time, it gets dark one hour earlier in the evening; thus, an "extra" hour of daylight in the morning. This suits some and is opposed by others.

Farmers, for example, like more daylight in the morning to do their chores. Others like more daylight in the evening—to get home from work and school and to run errands in the evening. The controversy has continued over the years.

Last year, a bill was passed that affects the time daylight saving time resumes in the spring. It is now the first Sunday in April instead of the last. Standard time, however, still resumes the last Sunday in October.

Fuel leak clean up

Base officials are nearing completion on an engineering study report for the clean up of fuel leaks discovered at the Camp Lejeune Bulk Fuel Storage Facility at the Hadnot Point Industrial Area.

This report and subsequent clean up are part of the base's ongoing program to identify, evaluate, contain and correct past deficient waster disposal sites and practices involving ground water contamination, associated with the placement of Camp Lejeune on the National Priorities List (NPL).

Monitoring well studies have determined the fuel product to be gasoline, and a preliminary report was filed to North Carolina in May.

Previous studies in 1986-87, showing these fuel compounds to be detectable in the groundwater of Hadnot Point Industrial Area, led the Commanding General to make the decision to close the fuel farm on June 12. By early 1989, the fuel farm operation should be replaced by; an interim fuel operation at the Industrial Area.

The clean up is expected to begin following final design of a fuel recovery system.

Base officials will continue to monitor all ground water wells for possible contamination. The drinking water at Camp Lejeune is continually tested with base meeting all treatment standards required by EPA.

Wells and disposal sites do not pose health hazards to people living or working on or near the base as long as they drink water from approved sources. People should not drink water out of streams or from un-checked wells on the base.

There is no danger of any contamination in the drinking water on or off base, and all contaminated ground water wells have been sealed.

Camp Lejeune has set up a 24-hour phone line for people with questions or comments about the sites. The number is 451-5100.

Combined Arms Operation continues

Globe Staff Report

The entire 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force is currently involved in Combined Arms Operation-89. The CAO has moved 2nd MEF to the field, building the foundation of separate command posts required to control the enormous undertaking of testing the ability to fight over extended distances.

The exercise is designed to provide training opportunities for ground, air and service support elements of the Marine Air-Ground Task Force.

Units from the 2nd MarDiv. and 2nd FSSG, along with those of the 2nd MAW, are participating in the operations.

All counted, CAO-89 would involve over 15,000 Marines and Sailors, 1,000 tactical vehicles and 250 tactical aircraft, extending over 200 miles from North Carolina to Virginia. The exercise is scheduled to end Nov. 3.

Several land owners agreed to let 2nd MEF elements use their land as rest and coordination areas. All movement to contact and retrograde portions of the exercise use state highways and civilian property.

Maj. Gen O.K. Steele, commanding general, 2nd MarDiv., stressed safety, civilian-military relations and the importance of keeping everyone informed as three points of concern during the CAO-89 exercise.

A large number of private landowners of North Carolina and Virginia have willingly turned over their property to us without charging the government a dime," said Gen. Steele. "We promised them that we will leave their property cleaner than we found it and without damage.

"I expect every Marine and Sailor to do his best to keep our honor clean by living up to that pledge," the general said. "I view CAO-89 as a unique opportunity to not only test, evaluate and learn about our warfighting skills but also our communication skills.

"We all have but one common goal for this exercise . . . That is to learn more about ourselves and our ability to move, shoot and communicate as a combined arms team. If we can achieve that, and do it safely, CAO-89 cannot help but be a success," Gen. Steele concluded.

Marines in the field are reminded to notify the nearest marine civil affairs team if any problems with civilians or private property should arise during the exercise.

Marines may encounter civilian media along the routes of travel and should have them contact respective G-1 sections or the PAO office. Any comments or concerns with regard to the exercise should be referred to PAO, Camp Lejeune at 919-451-5882.

Watch in next week's Globe for a pull-out about CAO-89.

the BLT headquarters Oct. 23, 1983, in Beirut, Lebanon.

Anyone who was physically within the building at the time of the bombing and wishes to be interviewed should contact Sgt. Bob Beyer at the Joint Public Affairs Office, 451-5655/5782/1607.

Distribution restricted

A U.S. District Court has ruled in favor of the Commanding General, MCB, Camp Lejeune, holding that the commanding general of a military base may legally give preferential distribution treatment to its command newspaper by restricting the distribution of commercial newspapers.

In 1987, Shopco Distribution Co. initiated a lawsuit against the commanding general of MCB, Camp Lejeune, contesting his authority to prohibit the door-to-door distribution of their publication, The Shopper.

The number of a non-subscription publications, other than The Globe, and the locations where they may be distributed on base have been limited by the commanding general.

Shopco Distribution Co. had contended that such limitations were in violation of the freedom of expression rights of the First Amendment and the equal protection rights of the Fifth Amendment. The company argued that since the commanding general permits door-to-door delivery of newspapers to the housing areas on base, he should also afford the same opportunity to other publications.

The court held that the restrictions place on the number of distribution of non-subscription publications do not violate the rights of the First or Fifth Amendments.

Shopco Distribution Co. may appeal the decision.

NCO School graduation

The Base NCO School class 1-89 will graduate at 10:30, Nov. 4 in the MCSSS Chapel at Camp Johnson. The public is invited to attend. The uniform is uniform of the day. Sgt. Maj. J.H. Raiford, sergeant major of MATCS-28 will be the guest speaker.

Harrier purchase approved

President Reagan has approved a multi-year purchase of the McDonnell Douglas/British Aerospace Harrier II AV-8B for the first time in the program's history.

The U.S. Defense Appropriation and Authorization bills for fiscal 1989, recently signed by the president, contain funding authorization for the purchase over three years of 63 AV-8Bs and nine two-seat TAV-8Bs for the Marine Corps.

The bills allocate $479.2 million for the purchase of 245 Harriers from prime contractor McDonnell Douglas in fiscal year 1989, plus an extra $39 million for research and development, and $40.2 million in advance procurement for fiscal year 1990. The remaining 48 aircraft will be ordered during fiscal year 1990 and 1991. The U.S. Marine Corps has a requirement for 300 AV-8Bs and 28 TAV-8Bs with 208 aircraft ordered up to September 1988; the new multi-year purchase brings total orders for the AV-8B and TAV-8B to 280 aircraft, with a further 12 EAV-8Bs delivered already to the Spanish navy.

Maternity uniforms adopted

Pregnant women Marines are now authorized to wear the Army and Air Force Camouflage maternity uniform. Although this uniform's design differs slightly from the Marine Corps' standard utilities, it was adopted because the uniform is readily available and fills the immediate need for a maternity uniform, is readily available and fills the immediate need for a maternity uniform that provides comfort and ease of maintenance. Currently, the uniform may be purchased through the Army or Air Force uniform outlets, where available through the Corps' supply system by fiscal year 1990 as an addition to the current maternity uniform supplemental allowance.

'Point' Marines use Stone Bay as temp rang

Story and photos by
Cpl. Mike Carr

At the Stone Bay pistol range, shooters normally arrive in the afternoon to qualify with the M9, 9mm pistol, giving the block safety NCOs the morning to perform maintenance duties on the pistol range or to fill in as block officials on the rifle ranges.

The morning routine changed when a call for help came from the training and operations section at Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point.

It seems that the pistol range at Cherry Point is undergoing repairs, and more than 1,000 Marines from the air station needed to requalify with the pistol in fiscal year 1988.

Working together, the training and operations sections, (G-3 shops) from Cherry Point and the rifle range worked out a plan to bus the 'Point' shooters down to Camp Lejeune's facilities by 8 a.m.

'The whole operation was smooth sailing. Our logistics people worked with the folks down there to transfer and store the ammunition at Camp Lejeune.'

1st Lt. R. M. Dezelon

The challenge was to move a high number of shooters through Lejeune's range, and still give quality training and instruction, according to Staff Sgt. S. D. Brandon, noncommissioned officer-in-charge of the Stone Bay range.

Even though the daily number of pistol shooters was doubled at the Stone Bay facility, "It didn't interfere with our afternoon schedule of qualifying Camp Lejeune Marines," said Brandon.

The Camp Lejeune safety NCOs were assisted by members of the Cherry Point Marksmanship Training Unit (MTU).

Ten coaches from the "Point" accompanied the shooters to Lejeune daily.

On Temporary Additional Duty from various units at the air station, none of the people assigned to the MTU had any coaching experience. A one-week course about the M9 pistol and coaching techniques was taught to the hastily chosen instructors.

"The whole operation was smooth sailing," said 1st Lt. R. M. Dezelon, assistant training officer, Cherry Point G-3 section. "Our logistics people worked with the folks down there to transfer and store the ammunition at Camp Lejeune," Dezelon added.

"Gung-ho!" said 1st Lt. E. J. M. OIC of the Lejeune pistol range. "Cooperation between the Cherry Point Marines and my men has been tremendous, and the detail has been extremely successful."

The numbers back up the lieutenant's description of the 10-week operation: over 1,000 Marines on the Cherry Point detail, 99.72 percent qualified, and 99.72 percent of these shot expert.

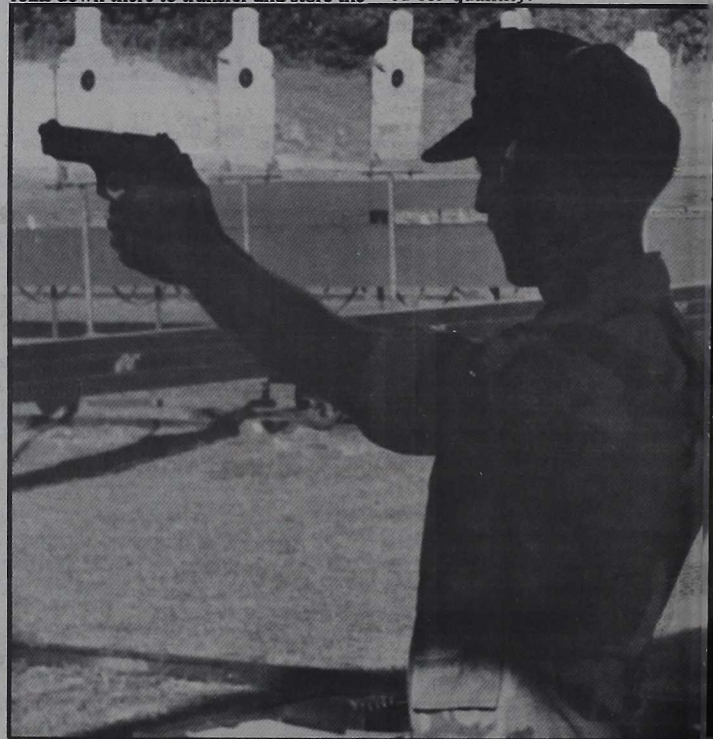

Staff Sgt. Brandon noted the numbers are especially significant when one considers that most of the Cherry Point shooters used the .45 cal. pistol to qualify the previous year. "It was the first time most of them had ever fired the M9. That was a fantastic detail!" said Brandon.

The high percentage of qualified shooters was mute testimony to the combined efforts of the two Marksmanship Training Units. Quality was not sacrificed for quantity.

President Reagan urges generous contributions

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

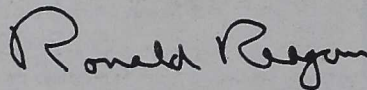

This year's Combined Federal Campaign, the last to begin during my term of office, offers Federal employees the opportunity to continue an unmatched record of generosity and to show our concern for the less fortunate in the United States and around the world.

No matter where we are, whether here in Washington or serving in uniform far beyond our Nation's borders, the Combined Federal Campaign makes it possible for us to demonstrate the generosity that has made the United States of America the world leader in charitable giving.

Your record of generosity and concern for others has been a matter of great pride to me. I am confident that this grand record will continue in this final campaign during my presidency.

While the decision to give is personal and voluntary, I'll be doing my part, and I hope you will, too, in whole heartedly supporting the 1988-89 Combined Federal Campaign.

Thank you, and God bless you.

New craft could raise 'HAVIC' for Corps

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. E.V. Walsh

Shakespeare once said, "Cry havoc and rip the dogs of war."
That saying holds true even today, and the Marine Corps is currently testing a new type of havoc.

The High-speed Assault Vehicle and Interdiction Craft (HAVIC) is being developed here by the Marine Corps to deter enemies and its performance and feasibility.
The HAVIC was recently brought to test of transporting a Light Armored Vehicle and conducting riverine operations on the Intracoastal Waterway near Fort Mifflin's Tower.

The HAVIC is designed to and is able of carrying the LAV or other heavy weights at a speed of 20 knots in five-foot wave conditions as well as making two round trips from an over-the-horizon launch 20 nautical miles from an assembly point without refueling.

The HAVIC is compatible with nearly every piece of equipment except for tanks, AAVs and artillery," said Lt. Commander Steve Maitland, division naval liaison. "If adopted, this will give the Corps additional lift capabilities."
The unique feature about the HAVIC is that no coxswain is required and the craft can be operated from any position on the craft via a portable console. This

The High-speed Assault Vehicle and Interdiction Craft (HAVIC) blasts down the intercoastal waterway during a phase of its testing. If adopted, the HAVIC will augment the Landing Craft Air Cushion. (LCAC.)

allows the craft to be controlled from the LAV being transported, giving the LAV commander more versatility.

"The HAVIC's controls enable the LAV to fire under way," said Maitland.
"They're able to fire while on the move."

"No other landing craft has the capability to fire while assaulting," said George K. Krikorian, operating division president of the engineering & management systems group of the CACI corporation, which built HAVIC. "It's a unique craft."

The HAVIC, if adopted into the Marine Corps arsenal, will augment the Landing Craft Air Cushion (LCAC) in many of its missions.

These missions will include riverine operations, mine-sweeping, special operations and covert operations. The HAVIC's ability to travel at high speed in shallow, hard-to-reach areas will enable it to do so, if adopted.

However, adopting the craft into the Corps' inventory will be a feat within itself. The HAVIC will continue its operational testing, which commenced in July, until its feasibility is either proven or not.

"We built the HAVIC with the Marine Corps needs in mind," said Krikorian.
"We made it very low-cost and used off-the-shelf hardware. We didn't have to undergo research and development by doing it that way. We used things we already had."

He went on to say that the HAVIC is very user-oriented and will put the Marine Corps where it wants to be with amphibious capabilities, since the craft can carry nearly 75 percent of the equipment needed in an amphibious assault.

A spokesman from the Amphibious Warfare School said that the HAVIC's flexibility appears encouraging, and its performance was as well.

As the High-speed Assault Vessel and Interdiction Craft continues to be reviewed and tested, the Marine Corps will be reviewing not only a piece of equipment, but a means of wreaking havoc.

Farrier Harry Daughtry applies the final strokes to a horse at Camp Lejeune base stable.

Farrier pays call to Camp Lejeune

In today's "high-tech" world, many jobs are becoming easier to perform. That's not the case for Harry Daughtry.

Daughtry shoes horses professionally. Commonly called a blacksmith, the proper term for his vocation is farrier.

Daughtry was plying his trade at the base stables recently. He works a regular route in eastern North Carolina, stopping at stables every four to five weeks.

Towing his workshop in a trailer, Daughtry performs his services on a contract basis with the stables. As a farrier, he earns a good living through the high volume of work available to him. "There are more horses in Onslow County than one farrier could handle," he said.

As he removed a glowing horseshoe from the furnace, he spoke of the hazards in his profession. "It's a physically demanding job. The horse will kick you if he's spooked, or if I cause him pain." Subsequently, farriers pay high premiums, if they are even able to find a company that will insure them.

The animals hooves are made of a tissue similar to human fingernails, said Daughtry. As he nails the shoe to the hoof, he can only judge the process how much resistance he feels while hammering.

The horse's environment will affect the way farriers care for the animal, Daughtry explained. "Heavy rainfall cause the hoof to become soft and tender. In that case, I will use a smaller diameter nail to lessen the pain."

Two-thirds of the animal's weight is on their front legs. Depending on the type of work a horse does and the hardness of the ground, some only require shoes on the front hooves. "Here in eastern North Carolina, I can sometimes do that," the Goldsboro resident.

The type of riding, a horse is used for determines the shoes placement. "I have to file the hooves on a racing horse differently to accommodate the long strides," he said.

Daughtry has been around horses his life. Formerly a horse trainer by profession, he studied the farrier trade as a money saving idea. "I thought it would be cheaper to shoe my own horses, but soon found there was more money as a farrier than a trainer," he said.

Harry Daughtry is a symbol of a simpler time in America, when horses were the transportation and the quality of a person's trade determined success.

Teamwork-88

CSSD keeps the front line advancing

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. F.E. Charles

BJERKVIK, Norway—This story could've easily begun with, "It was a dark and stormy night and the Marines of Combat Service Support Detachment Bravo (CSSD-B) found themselves, like others, working under intolerable conditions..."

The weather for Teamwork-88 was something less than spectacular. One local Norwegian potato farmer put it simply as, "rather unusual for this time of year."

Brigade Service Support Group-4 (BSSG-4) provided all the beans, bullets and other supplies necessary for a brigade-size exercise. They were the Combat Service Support Element for the 4th Marine Expeditionary Brigade during NATO exercise Teamwork-88.

At a BSSG-4 tactical location, a five-ton truck loaded with "hot-wets" (hot soups and coffee) plus ammunition, waited for a guide vehicle. They would deliver their goods to 1st Battalion, 25th Marines, a New England reserve unit, somewhere in the snow-capped mountains above.

"The CSSD had to anticipate the supply and support needs of the Regimental Landing Team," Capt. Brian Tonnacliff, commanding officer, Mobile Detachment Bravo, said.

The two mobile CSSDs kept the front line advancing with fresh supplies, spare parts and repaired equipment.

The warehouses on wheels carry two days of supplies and a caravan of support vehicles.

"We've 13 vehicles in all. We have a Logistics Vehicle System with lift capabilities, a refueler and an ambulance," said 1st Lt. Raymond Knight, executive officer. "The Medical Regulating Team with the ambulance along with two empty five-tons allows us to evacuate casualties."

A High Mobility Multi-purpose Wheeled Vehicle (HMMWV) from CSSD's Mobile Detachment Bravo pulled into the BSSG position. The guide vehicle had arrived to take the five-ton to the front lines. Gray pillows of cumulus clouds rolled in low from Herjansfjorden fiord and brought more rain and a want for heat by those Marines on perimeter security around the camp.

Under the cover of darkness the two vehicles pulled out of the BSSG-4 tactical location.

"Tactically, night is the best time to resupply units," Knight said.

This made resupply convenient for the RLT, but finding them wasn't always easy.

The convoy stopped alongside a TOW-equipped HMMWV to ask about the position of 1/25. According to the driver, the unit was just ahead, first road on the right.

At this elevation, above the town of Bjerkvik, the rain had turned into sleet.

Snaking its way through the narrow, winding E-6 highway of Oesa Pass, the two-vehicle convoy came to its turnoff.

Following a HMMWV from 1/25, the mobile detachment drove up a gravel road lined with trucks on either side and made its way to the drop-off point. The terrain and Norwegian conservation and public land usage restrictions making it tactically difficult, according to Knight.

At the drop-off point the mobile detachment unloaded its "hot-wets" and ammunition and was given a simple list of items needed by the battalion on its next visit. That wasn't scheduled to occur for another 10 hours.

But within two hours Mobile Detachment Bravo was returning to 1/25.

It was called back, because of medical treatment and transport capabilities to evacuate Marines who suffered from exposure and cold stress. "Again Mobile Detachment Bravo was the road."

BSSG-4 supplies food, fuel and fresh water

By Lance Cpl. F.E. Charles

RKVIK, Norway—Brigade Service Support (BSSG) 4 Marines were aboard the USS Inchon (LPH-12) steamed its way through the gray, cold-steel, white North Atlantic toward Norway in early September.

These Marines were part of the 4th Marine Expeditionary Brigade (4th MEB) as its Combat Service Support Element (CSSE) for NATO exercise Teamwork-88. They were to provide food, fuel, fresh water and other necessities to the Marines and Sailors of the 4th MEB. The CSSE included the Ground Combat Element (GCE), Amphibious Landing Team-8, Camp Lejeune; and the Amphibious Combat Element (ACE), Marine Aircraft Group-14 with elements from New River and Cherry Point, N.C., and Beaufort, S.C. An added component to the exercise was the participation of 1st Battalion, 4th Marines, reservists from New England. Teamwork-88 was to display the combined capabilities of the nine nations from the NATO alliance in an exercise to bolster its northern flank. The 4th MEB's participation demonstrated the United States' commitment to the forward maritime strategy. The Teamwork-88 area of operation was about 300 miles southwest of the Soviet Union and 150 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

The exercise's primary focus was on where we could tactically concentrate our forces in Norway," said Lt. Col. Charles S. Mill, commanding officer, BSSG-4. BSSG-4 operated out of Bogen and Bjerkvik to support the GCE, and at Evenes it supported the ACE. This area is historically militarily significant, according to Warrant Officer Matthew Canning, S-2 operations officer. "During World War II this was where the 4th Marines fought the Germans for control of Norway," he said.

This area is the narrowest part of Norway. It is about 10 miles wide between Sweden and the sea. Geographically, Norway is about the size of two Virginia states, according to Canning. "The training area was about 40 square miles," he said. BSSG-4 concentrated on occupational and basic combat skills. About 10 kilometers east of the BSSG-4 tactical location, on Norwegian Route E-6, a team of engineers placed a hasty mine field. The mines were placed on the side of the two-lane road, along an upgrade. Beyond its shoulders to one side was a sheer, rock cliff. The other side faced Herjangsfjorden fiord. This is a good choke point to slow down or halt attacking troops," said Staff Sgt. Harry Palmer, 1st Sgt.

Lance Cpl. F.E. Charles

for Charlie Co., 8th Engineers. "It's also a good ambush site and pre-designated target for artillery and naval gunfire."

The engineers laid the hasty mine field within two hours, according to Lance Cpl. Berry Jamison. "The field is about 50-100 meters in length along the highway."

On the outskirts of Bjerkvik the BSSG-4 established its water filtration machine.

"The Reverse Osmosis Machine filters the water and adds chemicals to make it drinkable," said Cpl. John Parriett.

The machine can filter 600 gallons per hour. The water is then tested three times before being pumped into two, 3,000 gallon, rubber bladder holding tanks.

"It's a five-man operation with a set up time of about one hour," Parriett said.

Overall, BSSG-4 was responsible to supply and maintain maintenance support for the GCE. But at the heart of the operation was the unit's own supply. It is an exercise in rapid resupply, according to Staff Sgt. David Williams, warehouse chief.

"We support regardless of a unit's situation by any and all means available," he said.

"The units can either come in and pick up what they've requested, or we can deliver," Williams said.

At Bogen Pier the "we deliver" concept translated into the unofficial motto, "you call, we haul." This was the site of the BSSG-4 motor transport and maintenance detachment. It was also the supply base where the rolling stock ship, the USS American Eagle, was anchored. The Eagle was a floating warehouse.

"Our trucks are on stand by 24-hours to provide maintenance, refueling, fresh water and hot and cold chow," said Cpl. Jeffery Westbrook, a BSSG-4 dispatcher.

"The trucks drive into the ship, pull up to the right supply bin, load up and are on their way. It's that simple," Westbrook added.

Between Sept. 6 and Sept. 18, the Bogen Pier Marines moved 3,000 passengers and hauled over 595 tons of cargo over 10,000 miles with only three minor accidents.

But the miles took their toll on the vehicles, and maintenance Marines worked round-the-clock to keep them rolling.

During Teamwork-88 the biggest maintenance problems faced were from alternators and glo-plugs.

"In the cold weather, the alternators took a beating from constantly running vehicle heaters and radios. We don't know if the faulty glo-plugs on the High Mobility Multi-purpose Wheeled Vehicles (HMMWV) are manufacturer-related or not," Master Sgt. Walter Hastings, maintenance chief, said.

At Evenes, BSSG-4 Marines supported the ACE with a post exchange, post office and disbursing office and was the site of landing support work.

Both the post office and post exchange provide the same services as do their state side equivalents, but on a smaller scale. They're also one up on their counterparts. In Norway, they had mobile capabilities.

But all of this wouldn't have made it to Norway and Teamwork-88 would've gone without some of the comforts of home, if it weren't for the efforts of Charlie Co., 2nd Landing Support Battalion.

This unit was responsible for bringing 2,000 people, their personal gear and vehicles to Norway by air.

But occupational efficiency wasn't the only reason BSSG-4 Marines came to Teamwork-88. They also came to hone their combat skills in perimeter and rear area security.

"We stressed not only improving MOS skills in the field, but the basic fighting skills of the BSSG-4 Marines," said Capt. Brian Tonnacliff, S-3 operations officer. "We incorporated both into the tactical situations presented by the exercise."

For some BSSG-4 Marines combatting the cold temperatures and constant rain became more of a real threat than the actual enemy. The Marines draped ponchos over their soaked, canvas shelter halves for an added layer of protection. But this couldn't keep the chill off them while on perimeter security manning machine guns.

"In this weather it's easier to get hypothermia than at 40 below," one experienced Marine said.

The exercise gave Lance Cpl. Roberto Rivera, H&S Co., 2nd FSSG a break from working behind a computer. "All I've ever done up to this point was do rosters and reports. Now I'm manning a .50-caliber machine gun," he said.

Marines from warehousemen to mechanics and engineers replenished and repaired the GCE and ACE on one hand. With the other hand, when necessary, they fought the enemy.

Teamwork-88 brought together a multi-national force that demonstrated its unity and common goal of allegiance to the NATO partnership.

In the bracing, harsh atmosphere of arctic Norway during the exercise, "BSSG-4 Marines proved themselves ready to fight the next war, not just support it," Mill said.

Staff Sgt. Dewayne Washington
Members of Charlie Co., 2nd LSB, were responsible for packing and unpacking Marines and their equipment during Teamwork-88.

2nd LSB floats in on landing craft cushion

Story and photos by
Cpl. Juvonnie Kinchen

A walk on the beach normally catches people in brightly colored bathing suits, surfing and soaking up rays.

Recently, however, Marines from 2nd Landing Support Battalion, 2nd FSSG, and the Navy's Assault Craft Unit 4 from Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va., decided to bring a different scene to Camp Lejeune's Onslow beach.

The Marines got the chance to sharpen their skills by loading and off-loading vehicles from the Navy's Landing Craft Air Cushion (LCAC).

The Landing Craft Air Cushion (LCAC) is the new state-of-the-art amphibious machine. A Marine watched at Onslow Beach as one heads out to sea and the other awaits loading.

Members from 2nd Landing Support Bn., watch as a vehicle is being loaded onto a Landing Craft Air Cushion (LCAC).

"The Landing Craft Air Cushion is a unique and specialized machine because of its ability to move vehicles from land to ship and vice versa," said Petty Officer Second Class Donald L. Hainline, the deck's electronics mechanic.

"The LCAC originated from the Jeff 'A' and 'B' series of hovercraft in Panama City, Fla., and is especially useful to the Marine Corps mission. The prototype was cut down and made more maneuverable and quicker.

"The LCAC is the new state-of-the-art equipment for the Navy and Marine Corps. It takes the place of the old LCUs," said Hainline.

Utilizing the LCU during wartime situations was time consuming. The LCAC cuts down that time tremendously. Downtime, as more experience is gained by the Fleet, will be less than with the LCU and with the additional speed, can make more trips per hour.

"The LCAC is equipped with four main engines and two smaller auxiliary power units which supply the electrical power generation," said Chief Petty Officer Larry N. Delooze, the craft engineer.

Although, the LCAC is faster and more maneuverable, it is not equipped to carry platoons or commands. It is designed to haul 23 personnel, five of those being the crew which consists of the pilot, navigator, craft engineer, loadmaster and the deck mechanic. All others include the working crew and the vehicle drivers.

The basic training for the drivers of 2nd LSB consisted of driving the vehicles onto the LCAC and then gripping them down so they remain stationary while the LCAC is in motion. Then once the LCAC reaches the ship, the drivers can off-load the vehicles and repeat the exercise again.

Learning the capabilities of the LCAC is a challenging job for both the Marines and the Navy. Continued training will cement the bond between them and will keep the LCACs "floating" on cloud nine.

Medieval origins of holiday were hallow

By Sgt. Charlene A. Getchell

As the ominous clouds rolled away to reveal a full moon suspended high in the night sky, a lone wolf howled mournfully in the distance.

Yes, it was an appropriate evening for Halloween... or was it?

Like so many other holidays, Halloween, its meaning, and the way it's celebrated has changed through the years.

In medieval times, Oct. 31 was originally called All Hallows Eve, a holy or hallowed night, which preceded All Saints' Day. All Saints' Day, Nov. 1, was a day the western Christian churches commemorated all the saints of the church.

Difficult as it may seem to discern this ancient celebration from the way Halloween is celebrated today, history does show how it happened.

Ancient Britain and Ireland contributed a great deal to today's Halloween celebration. The Celtic festival of Samhain, held in the fall, was a celebration marking the returning of the herds from the field. But, what gave it the sinister-like theme was that the souls of the dead were supposed to return to their homes. Additionally, ghosts, witches and goblins of all kinds were said to be roaming about.

The Celtic and Anglo-Saxon's festival was a pagan observance, which nonetheless influenced the Christian festival of All Hallows Eve. Thus, gradually it became a secular observance, and different ways to celebrate Halloween developed.

According to Encyclopedia Britanica, the Irish immigrants were the ones who began the mischief-making associated with the holiday now. Young men and boys would run around overturning outhouses, breaking windows and doing other such mischievous deeds.

Things have calmed down a bit in the modern day celebration of Halloween. It's no longer the men and boys, it's small children, who go around from house to house, demanding "trick or treat," and the "tricks" are relatively minor compared to those of the past.

So, late at night when unknown things are going "bump" and the moon is casting an eerie glow through the bedroom, remember, there are no such things as ghosts!

Safety keeps Halloween happy, fun

By Sgt. Bob Beyer

Ghosts, goblins, ghouls, and witches abound this time of year. Halloween will be celebrated at Camp Lejeune on Oct. 31.

Although you are probably aware of the safety precautions for this annual event, here are some extra "lighthearted" rules of thumb to help you.

☐ "Trick or treating" aboard the base will be from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. You may not keep changing time zones to stretch that time limit out.

☐ Camp Lejeune "treating" limited to dependent housing areas only. If you don't tell your kids not to walk from main side housing to New River Air Station housing, they will.

☐ "Trick or treaters" can't be recognized as youngsters dressed in strange costumes. You may choose to "card" taller participants in camouflage uniforms.

☐ Ensure all children wear clothing easily visible to drivers of motor vehicles. This is not so they can be hit, it's so they can't.

☐ Costume masks should not restrict vision. Those not needing masks should seek physical therapy.

☐ "Trick or treaters" should be properly supervised by an adult. Frustrated parents cannot track kids after leaving their home.

☐ Make sure kids stay in lighted areas. This prevents frustrated kids in similar costumes from switching places and trading parents.

☐ Inspect all treats as soon as your children return home. Throw away anything questionable, hide the good stuff for yourself and give the rest to your little goblins.

☐ Motor vehicle drivers should also be extremely careful when driving on Halloween evening.

Happy Halloween!

Master Sgt. Gary Mosley

Last year, three-year-old Jessica Giltner gave her father Gunnery Sgt. Jeff Giltner a hand in finishing up the family Halloween display. Jessica and her father are sure to be busy again this year with their display as they and others in base housing prepare for the 'trick or treaters.'

Karate breaks boards, builds confidence

Story and photos by
Lance Cpl. M.E. McLean

As the young Marine knelt, the adrenaline flow from the top of his shaved head to the tips of his gloved fingers. With a roar of confidence and a decisive strike, the leatherneck's hammer-like hand smashed through a pine board as if it were butter. Breaking boards is just one of the exercises that the Isshinryu Karate class practices in an effort to build confidence and strength.

The class, which is held on base, is instructed by Sensei Maj. Ronald Pereira and his wife Karen. The Pereiras have recently moved to the area from Virginia Beach, Va., where they taught karate at the base's recreation center for several years. They also spent many off-duty hours as assistant instructors at the Marine Corps Air/Ground Combat Center, 29 Palms, Calif.

Pereira has studied karate under black belt instructors all over the world. He started his quest for knowledge and training in 1968 studying Shotokan karate while he was stationed in Rota, Spain. He also trained Shorinryu under Master Ezio Shimabuku in Okinawa.

Sensei Karen Pereira began her study of Isshinryu in 1980. Since then she has conducted women's self-defense classes and children's summer clinics in coordination with special services. She received her 1st degree black belt in 1983.

Sensei Maj. Ronald Pereira demonstrates a roundhouse to Lance Cpl. Allan Endaya. Endaya is a blue belt and is preparing to take his written and practical test to become a green belt later this month.

Beginning students in the art of Isshinryu are required to wear a white karate uniform called a Gi and a white belt, which denotes the ranking of 8th Kyu.

As the students progress and become more proficient in the martial arts, a new colored belt replaces the old one. The change starts with yellow, progresses to blue, then goes on to different degrees of green, brown and black.

The padded and mirrored workout room that the classes are held in is called the dojo. The students spend about six-eight hours a week training in the dojo, perfecting their martial arts skills.

The classes begin with a formal bow (Zarei), which demonstrates the respect the students have for their Sensei.

The students are then put through a strenuous and grueling 20-minute workout which consists of knuckle push-ups, squat-kicks, side-splits and other stretching exercises.

"Stretching and warming up are extremely important," Pereira said. "It makes the student limber and nimble and is the best preventive measure to take against injury."

The last segment of the class differs in regards to what day of the week it is. On Tuesday the students are taught self-defense. Thursday nights they are taught "Kata," which is formal exercises and techniques, and Saturdays they engage in "Kumite," which is free fighting.

According to Pereira, Isshinryu's main objective is the perfection of oneself through physical and mental development. "As my pupils learn the art of self-defense, they will acquire self-confidence, serenity and discipline," the major said.

The sensei said that Isshinryu Karate offers some important advantages over other forms of karate. "In Isshinryu we stress proficiency with both hand and foot techniques. We use closed-hand, straight-forward strikes and we stress the importance of close-in street fighting defense." See Karate, Page 4B

Chris Heath, Headquarters, Marine Corps, strains for a personal best squat. He earns it in his first All-Marine showing with a 450-pound squat, a 275-pound bench and a 430-pound deadlift. Heath finished 45 pounds over his best to date with 1,120 pounds.

Titans clash at Corps Powerlifting Championships

By Staff Sgt. Abe Roman

A clash of titans shook the Air Station Oct. 12 during the 1988 Marine Corps Powerlifting Championships held here for the first time. Intense competitors included numerous Armed Forces champions, national champions and even a couple of world champions.

Crowd pleasers like World Champion Sly Anderson and National Champion Bob Johnson competing at 198 pounds, will go on to represent the Marine Corps in the Armed Forces Championships in February.

One highlight of the meet was the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing Band, which supported the opening ceremonies.

Paul Webber, Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton made the All-Marine team uncontested with a 1,005-pound total for the three events. Webber benched pressed 265 pounds, squatted 365 pounds and deadlifted 375 pounds.

John D. Carr, an alternate for the USA team, coasted to a 1,300-pound total. In three weeks, the staff sergeant from 4th Marine Aircraft Wing, New Orleans, La., is leaving for Perth, Australia to compete in the World Championships. Carr kept his lifts in this meet to a minimum to avoid injuries before his international showing.

All-Marine Champion for the 148-pound category, Charles Lawson, MCB, Camp Lejeune, finished with a shaky 1,315-pound total. Although he dominated his weight class, he has lifted much more and dedicated himself to a better showing at the Interservice Championships in February.

Al Guidry finished first for the 165-pound weight class with 1,495 pounds.

World Champion Ausby Alexander lifted 1,600 at 181 pounds. Alexander normally lifts more weight at a lower weight class, but lifted light due to upcoming international competition.

The best show of the meet proved to be tough competition in the 198-pound weight class. World Champion Sly Alexander clashed with Bob Johnson. Anderson took the title with a 2,005-pound total, while Johnson finished with 1,840 pounds.

Jeff Carroll had an easy victory with a strong 500-pound bench, the heaviest bench in the meet and a 1,965-pound total.

Returning Marine Corps and National Champion Danny Martinez earned his title with a 1,930-pound total and crowd-pleasing lifts.

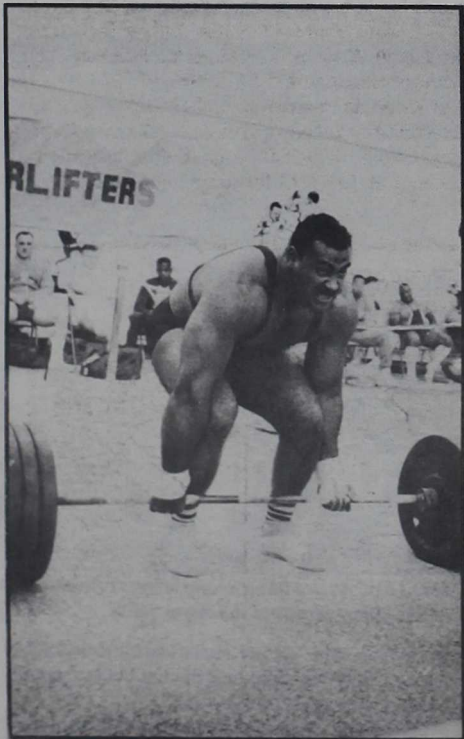

The top total in the meet was 2,100 pounds. Ward lifted the heaviest squat and deadlift of 750 pounds and 750 pounds, respectively, to help reach an impressive 2,100-pound total.

Don Smith, from Marine Corps Air Station Beaufort, rounded out the competition, lifting a contested 1,430-pound total for the super heavyweight title.

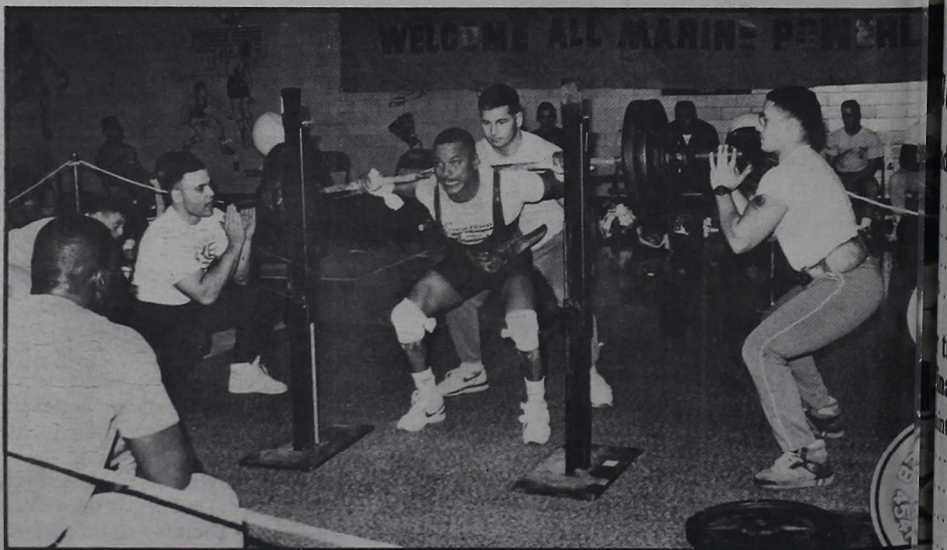

Despite the fact that the official, certified judging didn't show, lifters were pleased with the judging. "She's qualified," said lifter Allen Josker about Renee Burns, National Champion. "She's a competitive powerlifter herself, so she realizes the personal importance that the judging be fair for all lifters. I have no complaints with any of her judging."

The meet ran smooth from start to finish. "The meet turned out good and ran fast," said Gary Lawson, 165-pound All-Marine Champion. "I've been to many sanctioned meets with top-rate officials, but this one was run better, faster."

Kevin Underwood, Brian Rodriguez, Matt Hines, Robert Forsythe and J. Bellman volunteered their time to act as safety spotters for the lifters. They quickly loaded the weights to keep the meet running on time.

Cpl. Charlie Crouch All-Marine and National Champion Danny Martinez, MCB, Camp Lejeune, pulls up a 750-pound deadlift on his way to a 1,930-pound total and the All-Marine team for this year.

Cpl. Charlie Crouch Sgt. M. Barkley, MCB, Camp Lejeune, attacks the weight during the All-Marine Powerlifting Championships. Barkley finished with a 480-pound squat, 260-pound bench, 475-pound deadlift and a 1,215-pound total to take second place in the 148-pound category.

Karate

Although Isshinryu is primarily an empty-hand form of martial arts, the students do practice defensive techniques with a Hand Bo. The Hand Bo is a three foot long, wooden staff that is used for striking or putting your opponent into a submissive possession.

In accordance with the Isshinryu warrior's code, the most important rule is to use karate skills only for self-defense. According to the sensei, if a student is discovered to be using his art form in a negative manner, he will be dismissed from the class.

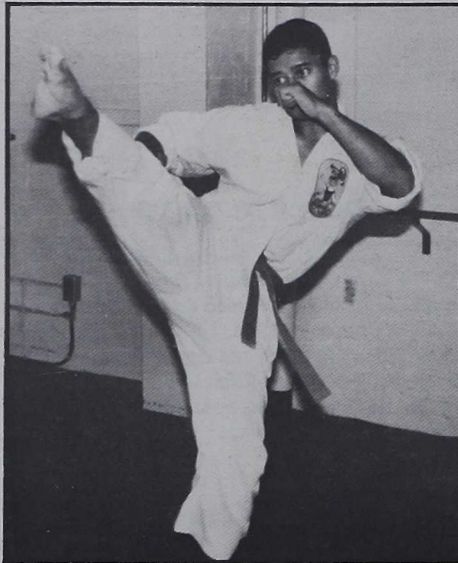

"We break boards to gain confidence and strength. A normal punch has the energy to break a board. But the determining factor is the ability to concentrate and focus beyond the board," Mrs. Pereira said.

"The whole objective is to protect yourself. If a student has the energy and skill to break a board, he has the ability to injure aggressors," her husband added.

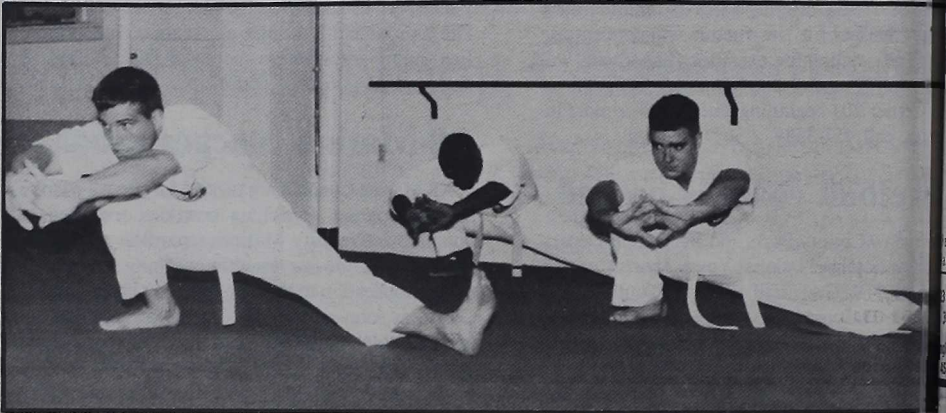

"Not only is karate good for the body and soul but helps a person be a better Marine by instilling discipline, and confidence. The Commandant of the Marine Corps has called for all Marines to be combat ready and I feel that knowledge in the martial arts aids today's leathernecks in preparing for battle," Pereira concluded.

(Right) Members of the Isshinryu Karate class here on base stretch out before working on their kicks, punches and other Martial Arts techniques.

When it comes to medical costs, what do you call your CHAMPUS coverage?

Partial Payment.

The "balance due" is your share. And it can really add up over the course of a year. But now there is a way to offset all these mounting out-of-pocket expenses and the strain they can put on your family budget. It's called CHAMPUS AID. And it's available for as little as $15 a month* through your NCOA membership. The Non Commissioned Officers Association (NCOA) is a non-profit organization offering a wide variety of benefits including legislative representation, social improvement and consumer protection programs like CHAMPUS AID to active, separated and retired NCOs and POs worldwide.

CHAMPUS AID coverage is provided by Academy Life Insurance Company, the organization that holds exclusive endorsement from the NCOA to offer insurance products to its members. It takes as little as 56 seconds to complete our simplified application form. Simply call 1-800-662-2620, contact your local NCOA Service Center or return the coupon for our "56 Second Solution" package for coverage and cost information.

CHAMPUS AID: It's simple. Easy to use. And it's offered with the backing of the NCOA.

*Premium for spouse and dependent child of active duty member.

Your Jacksonville NCOA Service Centers are at 825 Gumbranch Road-347-4480 and 105 Brynn Marr Road-577-3344.

CYBERGENICS

THE MOST AWESOME MUSCLE-BUILDING SYSTEM EVER DEVELOPED

Health—The foundation of athletic performance. This is precisely why we have created the Cybergenics Total BodyBuilding System. A TOTAL system of bodybuilding which is not only safe, but immensely effective. The Cybergenics System is the result of over seven years of pain-staking research by some of the world's leading scientists and sports medical authorities. By utilizing an array of unique natural substances, along with a highly specialized dietary and training routine, the Cybergenics System has become a regular part of the training regimens of those athletes who value good health as well as good physique. Another tangential effect of Cybergenics Total BodyBuilding System is a reduction in body fat, making Cybergenics THE consummate bodybuilding tool. In an age where a number of athletes are turning to dangerous drugs to enhance their performance, we have created Cybergenics, for those strong in both mind and body.

Available NOW at a GNC store near you.

These actual success stories are a few of the multitude which arrive at our offices daily. They are proof...Cybergenics works.

"After trying everything I could to lose weight I had all but given up. Then came Cybergenics. In 8 weeks my body fat completely disappeared and I gained more muscle than I ever thought I could carry! This is the most amazing product available, anywhere. Thank you—it has made a real difference in my life."

Greg O'Crux
Canada

"...using Cybergenics I was able to add incredible amounts of muscle to my physique while virtually eliminating all of my excess body fat. The results were so amazing that I was able to take 2nd place in a major contest after only four weeks!"

Pattie Brown,

"I have been bodybuilding since 1985 and never have I come across a product that is as complete as yours. Results came so quickly that friends thought I was on the "juice." I spread the word that it was your product and not any "chemical" that helped me to attain the physique that I am proud of today!...thanks for a great product."

E-3000 Flywheel Exercise Cycle

Excel's E-3000 delivers the smooth, trouble-free performance that cycle users want. The 3000 is loaded with attractive features as well. The 25-pound cast flywheel has a convenient hand control for adjustable resistance. Handlebars are padded and the deluxe seat is contoured and heavily padded for maximum comfort (handlebars and seat both have a quick-release feature for precise adjustment). The chain drive is completely enclosed for safety and clean appearance; non-skid pedals have counterweighted pedal straps so they always return to the upright position. The E-3000's console includes a 60-minute timer and an odometer/speedometer. This flywheel cycle is quality constructed on a heavy-duty tubular steel frame with non-mar toe caps. The finish is semi-gloss black with silver accent stripes.

We also carry equipment and accessories by ParaBody and York.
