Logic says take the short line

Opening Round

Judge: I'm going to award your wife $500 a month.

Man: Fine, judge. Whenever I get a chance I'll send her a few dollars myself.

Being a keen judge of character and an advanced student of statistical probabilities is no help when you pick the wrong line in which to stand. I invariably pick the wrong line. It doesn't matter what kind of a line it is, I will come out a loser.

Take last week for an example. I went to the bank on Monday. There were two lines open. One with a half dozen people and the other with only two. Logic says take the short line. I did. The man ahead of me stepped up to the window and asked for $800 worth of traveler's checks — in tens. I waited while he signed 30 or 40 of them and then skipped to the other line, right behind a sweet little old lady. When she got to the teller, she pulled a canvas bag out from under her shawl. It clanked on the window ledge. "Had a big day at the tea room," she confided to the teller as they stacked coins in piles. I went to the drug store to cash my check.

Tuesday it was the grocery store. I studied the six lines and got behind a lady with a half-filled cart. She had two un-priced items that had to be researched and a bag of apples assembled from several different priced bins. Then the tape ran out of the register. I changed lines when the lady produced a Birmingham bank check and an Oregon driver's license. I stood behind a lad who was only buying a loaf of bread and a half gallon of milk. He paid for it with 94 pennies, two of which I lent him when repeated counting of his assets fell short of the goal.

You wouldn't expect to have to exercise any judgment on a movie line because there is only one line per theater, but on Wednesday they stopped selling tickets just as I got to the window. Seems the fire marshal wanted to count the empty seats before anyone else came in. I went home and watched the Wednesday night movie.

Thursday was a bad day. The line wound around and around the courthouse. When I finally got up to the driver's license window, it turned out to be the county assessor's place of business. This was a total loss as far as the tax man was concerned. He listened to me describe the accessories on the car to a fellow bystander and made some notes which said would reflect on my personal property tax.

Friday everything changed. The line was short and moved fast. The service was polite and swift. Before I knew it, I had received typhoid and tetanus boosters and a smallpox vaccination.

Parting Shot

Then there was the man who rode to Las Vegas in an $8,000 Caddy and rode home in an $80,000 Greyhound.

ON ANNIVERSARY

Force Troops unit gets new vehicle

The new Landing Vehicle, Tracked, Personnel, Model 7 (LVTP-7) is now rolling off the assembly line and yesterday "C" Co., 2d Amphibian Tractor Bn. here became the first tactical unit in the Marine Corps to become fully operational with the new model.

As part of the 21st anniversary celebration of Force Troops, FMFLant, the new P-7 was activated into service with a bottle of champagne across the bow by Mrs. Joseph B. Bruce, wife of Maj. Joseph B. Bruce, "C" Company commander. BrigGen. Robert L. Nichols, Force Troops CG, and LtCol. Richard A. Sulik, 2d Amtrac Bn., were also at the ceremony.

"We feel that this is really a milestone for the Marine Corps in the use of amphibious tractors," said Maj. J.H. Alexander, operations and training officer, 2d Amtrac Bn. "This vehicle is so much better than anything we have ever had, it's sheer pleasure to watch the men take pride in its operation."

The new LVTP-7 is not only more versatile than its 16-year-old predecessor, but will also provide a savings of more than $16,000 on each vehicle purchased.

The new P-7 provides additional protection and more speed in and out of the water over the older P-5 model.

In the water, the P-7 uses a hydro-jet drive that propels it at 8.4 mph, a 25 percent increase over its predecessor that churned through the surf solely by the power of its tanks.

A cruising range of 300 miles on land or 70 miles at sea the new vehicle far exceeds the old range of 190 miles on land or 57 miles in the water.

For safety when hitting a hostile beachhead, the new amtrac offers armor protection and a rear exit door for its 25 combat-equipped Marines.

LOOK OF THE FUTURE IS NOW — Experimental prototype of the LVTP-7, tested here in 1968, now sports an added feature — a gun turret with a 50 caliber machine gun. (Photo by GySgt. Ed Grantham)

BOY SCOUTS SPONSOR CAR WASH

Boy Scouts of Troop 490, Paradise Point, will hold a car wash Saturday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Midway Park Community Center. Proceeds from the car wash will go toward the purchase of new camping equipment for the scouts.

UNIFORM WEAR TO CHANGE

Optional wear of the summer service uniform will run from Apr. 12 through May 2, with the mandatory date for change to the summer service uniform being May 3.

To insure that uniforms are tailored and ready for wear at the prescribed time persons should have their uniforms in the cleaners well in advance. At the Exchange Laundry, for example, alterations will take about one week; chevrons take about one or two days to be sewn on; and tropical uniforms can be cleaned in three days or the same day they are turned in, if turned in on special.

FORCE TROOPS ANNIVERSARY HIGHLIGHTS EAGLE, GLOBE AND ANCHOR

This week Eagle, Globe and Anchor will feature the 21st anniversary of Force Troops, FMFLant, with special guest BrigGen. Robert L. Nichols, Force Troops CG, tomorrow morning on the Montage show from 9:30 to 10:30 on WCTI, Channel 12, New Bern.

ABOUT PAGE ONE

Happy 21 1/4 Anniversary

Traditionally, Force Troops has observed its anniversary during April, but not after this year.
On Apr. 1, 1951, BrigGen. Gregon A. Williams became the first CG of Force Troops, FMFLant. On that date, Force Troops Headquarters was activated and the command officially came into existence. With this event in mind, Force Troops subsequently celebrated its birthday on Apr. 1, or during the month of April.
However, recent correspondence with Historical Branch, HQMC, indicates Headquarters Co., Force Troops was activated on Jan. 15, 1951, and even though Force Troops as a command didn't come into existence until April, the January date will, in the future, be the official anniversary.
A look at Force Troops, as it enters its 22d year, reflects some changes and modernization within the command. A page 2 story deals with the new LVTP-7, while the overall Force Troops Anniversary story is covered in section II.

The page 1 "Huskie" picture, by Sgt. Edward E. Driver, further depicts the Force Troops Anniversary theme for 1972, of innovations and improvement.
The Marginal Terrain Vehicle, "Huskie," is a relatively new amphibious vehicle in use by Force Troops. It arrived at 8th Motor Transport Bn. about six months ago and is being used to instruct drivers in its operation. The MTVM-116 is used to transport men, equipment and supplies over swampy, rough, nearly impassable terrain. A similar model, the MTVM-733, is an armor type used to escort the M-116s.

Perfect guy or girl awaits

By Danny McVane

For those who haven't made a move yet or who have just forgotten about it, the Prom is only two weeks away. For the most part, the scrambling and comiving and counter-coniving are over for most of those who are going have their dates. But, for those of you who are still sitting on your cans, there is still the "Perfect Guy" or "Perfect Girl" (as the case may be) waiting out there. Just don't ask me for directions.

I've been neglecting spring sports so far, so I thought I'd put in two cents for them before I get lynched. Last week, the baseball team defeated White Oak, 8-7 and Pamlico 6-4. Tomorrow, they have a home game against West Craven (with a name like that, how can we lose?). Next Tuesday, they play Dixon at home. Their record is now 4 wins and 2 losses. So much for baseball.

Now for track. This year's team hasn't been placing first but, on the other hand, have only finished dead last in one of their six meets so far. There have been some outstanding individual performances though. Joe Ransom has broken the school record in the shot with a throw of 46'6" and the discus with 133'3". Gary Rupp has tied the school record of 10'6" in the pole vault. He has jumped 11 feet in practice so he should have the record all to himself by the end of the year.

Scott Buss broke the school record in the 180-low hurdles and then broke his own new record with a time of 22.2 seconds. Other consistent point makers have been Joe Caldwell in the 2 mile and sophomore Richard Stens in the mile.

LHS will be sending six track men to Southern Pines for the Mid-South Relays this weekend. The six are Scott Buss, Sherman Cannon, Tim Ogle, and Richard Stens in the mile spring medley, Joe Ransom in the shot put and discus, and Gary Rupp in the pole vault.

DOLLARS AND SENSE

Would you believe

'Color TV only $79, bargain price'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of articles by lawyers of Tri-Command Legal Assistance Office concerning legal problems experienced by service personnel at Camp Lejeune.)

"COLOR TV SETS ONLY $79!
BARGAIN PRICE
TWO-DAY SALE ONLY!"

If you're planning to buy a TV set this ad might catch your eye. When you go to the store you may find the $79 sets are sold out, but the salesman has another set that "just suits your purpose." But it costs $350.

This sales tactic is known as the "bait and switch" operation that some merchants use to get customers into their stores and then switch them to more expensive items.

Another of the more commonly used forms of bargain advertising is where an advertiser offers a reduction from his own former price for an article. If the former price is the actual bonafide price at which the article was offered to the public on a regular basis for a reasonably substantial period of time, it provides a legitimate basis for the advertising of a price comparison. Where the former price is genuine, the bargain being advertised is a true one. If on the other hand, the former price being advertised is not a true one but fictitious — for example, where an artificial inflated price was established for the purpose of enabling the subsequent offer of a large reduction, the bargain is a false one and the purchaser is not receiving the unusual value he expects. In this type of situation, the "reduced" price is in reality probably just the seller's regular price.

Deceptive sales tactics are offered in many disguises, but the purpose is always the same: to trick you into thinking you are getting more for your money than you are, and to make you believe you are getting an "amazing" bargain.

Your first line of defense in protecting yourself is to shop around before you buy that "amazing" bargain.

Your second line of defense is to protest when you have been gyped or evaded a gyp artist.

The first thing you should do is to protest to the seller. He may have been unaware of the deception, and can take steps to prevent it from happening again as well as to satisfy your complaint.

Should the seller shrug off your complaint, don't stop there. Contact the Tri-Command Legal Assistance Office, Bldg. 203.

Be sure to take all the facts you have on the case with you; such as, newspaper advertisement or mail flyer.

Another approach that may not help your case, but will aid others in evading the trap is to contact the newspaper, radio or TV station that carried the ad. Let them know what happened to you! Truth in advertising is too important to them to risk getting a reputation for carrying phony ads.

Also contact your local or state government agency that handles consumer problems. Many of the states, including North Carolina, now have consumer protection laws they enforce.

Keep these suggestions in mind when shopping or when you think you have been deceived:

—Shop around before you buy that "amazing" bargain.

—Bring your complaint to the attention of the seller.

—Report false advertising to the media carrying it.

—Report the deception to the organization concerned with better business standards.

—Report the deception to your city, county, or state government agency.

MPMA CONTEST TO ATTRACT MEMBERS

'Promoting harmony among the ranks-- and races'

By Sgt. C.D. Gilbert

Montford Point Marine Association's (MPMA) Camp Lejeune Chapter will kick off their annual "Queen's Contest" Monday along with 17 other MPMA chapters throughout the nation.

The contest, which has run for three consecutive years, is the main fund-raising source of the association. Contestants receive votes in the form of donations to the chapter who will be the chapter queen. Each chapter then competes for the national title and the winner will represent the association in all national fund drives.

For this year's title of MPMA Camp Lejeune Queen will be three Woman Marines from Camp Lejeune and two ladies from Jacksonville and three from Point. Each contestant is scheduled to have hair frites, and beach parties in support of their fund drives.

Prizes collected from the Queen's contest are used to support the association, both national and local, in carrying out its many objectives of furthering and improving the relationship between Marines and civilians in and around military communities; establishing scholarships and educational grants for Marines and former Marine wives; and aid the underprivileged of the com-

Other objectives are to promote harmony among the ranks and races in the Marine Corps and, generally, to assist in improving the social spheres within and around all Marine communities as well as exemplify the laws and statutes that govern our nation.

"The Queen's contest is not only a way of raising funds for the objectives of the association, it's also a way of letting Camp Lejeune know that we're here and functioning," said SSgt. R. Taylor, secretary of the Lejeune chapter. "Through the contest, we also hope to attract more members and to let everyone know that we are an authorized veterans association and that our purpose is to lend our efforts to constructive programs for the betterment and progress of the communities in which we reside."

The MPMA began in 1965 when a group of black Marines decided to hold a reunion in Philadelphia. These Marines had trained at Montford Point, which was the only base in America used for the recruit or "boot camp" training of blacks from 1942, when blacks were first officially enlisted in the Corps, until 1949, when the practice of segregation in the Corps was discarded.

More than 400 former Marines representing 17 states attended the first reunion. The enthusiastic response of this reunion led to the decision to organize officially as a veterans organization and to hold an annual convention. In 1966 a national chapter was presented to the association by Pennsylvania.

The Camp Lejeune Chapter originated in April, 1968, and since has become an active and energetic satellite of the national association.

During 1971, the Camp Lejeune chapter awarded two $300 scholarships to dependents of Marines in this area with a three-year follow-up program; sponsored one Girl Scout Troop; donated up to $150 to churches of the area and allocated approximately $400 towards the purchase of Christmas baskets.

Gilbert "Hash Mark" Johnson, regional vice-president of the association and one of the black Marines who trained at Montford Point, said, "A common misconception about the association is that it's an all-black association. This is far from being the truth because the MPMA is open to all races. The association was originated by blacks but we try to promote an integrated society and we couldn't very well do this as a segregated association."

MSgt. Paul Guillory, current President of the association, indicated that the association is revising some of its programs to include more of the younger Marines.

AND ABOVE ALL ...

Don't back up in the circle

It's too bad man wasn't born with eyes in the back of his head. Perhaps the Creator would have considered this had He anticipated the age of automobiles with reverse gears.

More than three out of every four recent accidents occurred while backing, traffic safety officials here estimate.

It shouldn't be necessary, but here it is — a reminder to look before backing.

On the subject of traffic, officials are concerned about the congestion in the Hadnot Point circle. This week drivers were urged to avoid the circle by traveling alternate routes, particularly River Rd. However, should it be necessary to use the circle, the PIO has repeatedly emphasized the importance of motorists using turn signals when exiting or changing lanes in the circle.

And once you have looked, then safely backed into your parking slot, either avoided or safely traveled your way through the traffic circle, and heading towards your destination, there are a few other things to look out for ...

Motorists anxious to get out on the road now that warmer weather is here are reminded that while a robin may be the first sign of spring, the roads you have to drive on are usually the last signs of winter. Snow, ice, salt and sand take a great toll on streets and highways. Potholes are not only numerous and a driving nuisance, but they are also hazardous. Drivers can do a lot of damage to their cars and especially to their tires when hitting chuck holes in the road.

Obviously, a car striking a pothole, curb, or an object in the road can suffer damage not only to the tire and wheel assembly balance, but also to the vehicle's alignment.

Safety specialists say that should a driver notice an extreme wear pattern on the outside edges of his tires, or a veering of the car when the brakes are applied, it is advisable he consult his dealer or garage about possible misalignment.

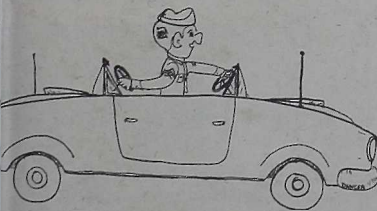

Heavy rainfall is another highway hazard normally associated with spring driving. It is especially dangerous to those drivers who insist on driving with bald tires. The Council defines a tire as bald if its tread depth has worn to 1-16 inch or less in any two or more adjacent tread grooves. The risk of skidding, which is 5 to 10 times more likely with average tread depth on wet roads as on dry roads, is double with bald tires.

The best advice for the careful motorist is not only to pay attention to where he is driving, but give equal attention to what he is driving on.

An underinflated tire causes excessive wear, excessive heat build-up and excessive sidewall flexing. Underinflation decreases tire safety and increases tire costs.

The Council's advice is further confirmed by safety expert, Dr. C.F. Brenner of the U.S. Department of Transportation, who says:

"The force of impact between tires and stones or potholes increases sharply with speed. Modern tires are built to 'take it,' but there is a limit to what rubber and fabric will endure. If you want to avoid cuts, bruises and blowouts, slow down on bad roads and give your tires a chance."

FOR STAFF NCOs

Chance of a lifetime

The Marine Corps has extended the deadline for SNCOs for the Degree Completion program.

The program has budgeted enough to send 100 SNCOs off to college this fall. However when the selection board met in mid-July they found the number of applicants came far short of this. The results of this board will be announced shortly, and the board convenes in July to make final selections.

The program allows SNCOs who are selected for staff sergeant through first sergeant-master sergeant) to finish their last two years for a bachelor's degree.

Applicants must arrange their own admission to a regionally accredited college which will grant them 60 semester hours of transfer credit. Of these 60 hours, 20 must be for in class study, either full-time or off-duty.

Full details are contained in MCO 1560.21. With Project Zero Draft in effect, the provision in the order that students pay their own tuition has changed and they will be repaid for this expense by the Marine Corps.

ALMAR 19 extended the application deadline, and also provides that graduates of the Marine Corps Associate Degree Completion Program (MAD-COP) must wait two years after completion of that program before applying for the SNCO Degree Program.

And, if you want to plan ahead, application deadline to start school in the fall of 1973 is Feb. 1, 1973. Interested Marines should begin now to arrange their admission to college.

From: Commanding General, Marine Corps Base

To: Chief of Staff

It has come to my attention that our enlisted club system creates problems for male and female Marines of different ranks to find a common place they may enjoy entertainment and companionship together.

Please have this situation reviewed.

ACTION BRIEF

The Assistant Chief of Staff, Personnel Services reviewed the situation and reported that satisfactory conditions already exist, namely:

- The NCO Club permits male NCOs to escort Women Marines below the NCO grades, provided those Women Marines are in civilian dress.
- Central Area Order 1746.11 of Feb. 15 authorizes Women Marines in grades private through sergeant to have male personnel (military or civilian), regardless of grade, as their guests at the Carousel Bar of the Central Area Service Club.

Innovation

Born during the bleak period of the Korean Conflict, Force Troops, FMFLant, marked its 21st Anniversary Saturday while brief ceremonies were held yesterday by individual units.

Force Troops completes its 21st year in the midst of innovation and improvement. For example, the new LVTP-7 was introduced into the 2d Amphibian Tractor Bn., marginal terrain vehicles were incorporated into 8th Motor Transport Bn., and the 2d Air and Naval Gunfire Liaison Company moved from Courthouse Bay to Camp Geiger. A sad note was sounded recently when the Force Troops Drum and Bugle Corps disbanded.

Throughout the past year, Force Troops units have provided specialized support ranging from the air-delivery of trucks, to repairing items so small that they are worked on under magnifying scopes.

Commanded by Brig Gen. Robert L. Nichols, Force Troops units have filled commitments by providing men and equipment for Caribbean and Mediterranean ready forces as well as detachments at Vieques and Guantanamo Bay.

During the past year, elements of Force Troops transported more than 60,000 tons of cargo and 14,000 Marines some 200,000 miles.

In addition, the maintenance facilities of the 2d Force Service Regiment repaired more than 68,000 items of equipment for Fleet Marine Force units.

TRACKIN' ON— The new LVTP-7 demonstrates some Amtrac Bn. They became the first tactical unit in the with the new vehicle.

Versatile Warrior

"Versatile Warrior," an air-ground exercise involving units of the 2d Marine Aircraft Wing, 2d Division and Force Troops, concluded here Tuesday.

A major part of the exercise centered around operations involving the Corps' newest close air support jet aircraft, the AV-8A.

Gen. Robert E. Cushman Jr., CMC, viewed operations during one of the last days of fixed-wing air action in the exercise.

Gen. Cushman witnessed AV-8A aircraft operations at the Bogue Field and at several landing zones in the Onslow Beach area.

Division units participating included a command group and tactical air control party from 3-2 and 2d Engineer Bn. Mechanical support was furnished by 2d Shore Party Bn. while 6th and 8th Marines provided forward air controllers.

Force Troops' 8th Engineers augmented Division Engineers with men and equipment during the early stages of the exercise.

The newest addition to the Marine Corps aviation arsenal, the Hawker-Siddeley AV-8A, completed its activities in the exercise last week. It had been operating out of forward landing sites, some of which had been hacked out of the wilderness and carpeted with aluminum matting. Other operation sites included paved secondary roads and previously established helicopter landing zones.

The unique fixed-wing plane with the ability to take-off and land vertically, was used primarily in a close air support role during the exercise.

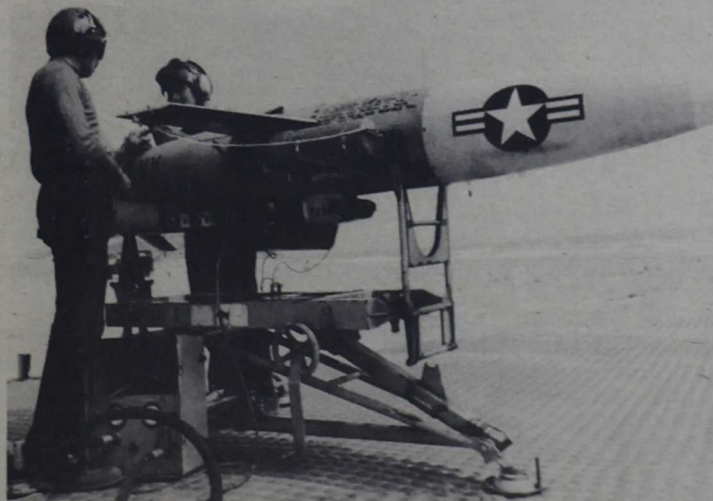

Other facets of "Versatile Warrior" included air-to-air missile firing by F-4 Phantom jets, ground-to-air missile shoots by 3d LAAM Bn., and command and control exercises. Extensive helicopter operations supported units throughout the tactical exercise.

Marines of 3d LAAM Bn., from MCAS, Cherry Point, spent several days in live fire problems at Onslow Beach. Remote-control, jet powered drones were targets for Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

In a training area some 50 miles off the North Carolina coast, F-4B Phantoms intercepted target drones and went into firing runs with live air-to-air missiles. The aircraft were launched from one of two combat air patrol stations, vectored in on their targets by ground control units, and shot down the target drones when the interceptions were made.

Exercise "Versatile Warrior" is one of a series in preparation for an upcoming joint services exercise involving Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine forces.

Gen. Davis retires; Anderson, Axtell move up to new posts

Gen. Earl E. Anderson was relieved as commanding general, FMFLant, during change of command ceremonies last Thursday to assume duties as the new assistant commandant of the Marine Corps Friday. Gen. Anderson, who was promoted to his present four-star rank upon assuming his new post, relieved Gen. Raymond G. Davis who retired after nearly 34 years service.

Taking Gen. Anderson's place as commander of the 40,000-man FMFLant was LtGen. George C. Axtell, a World War II ace and winner of a Navy Cross who commanded the 2d Marine Aircraft Wing at Cherry Point prior to taking his new command.

Gen. Anderson earned both a B.S. and M.A. degree from West Virginia University and also holds a Juris Doctor in Law from George Washington University.

Commissioned in the Marine Corps in June 1940, he is a Naval Aviator and combat veteran of World War II, Korea and two Vietnam tours. He is the youngest Marine ever promoted to the rank of general and the first active duty aviator to be appointed to that rank.

Gen. Davis was honored with a formal retirement ceremony at Marine Barracks. During the ceremony he was presented his second Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious service from May 1969 through March 1972, first as commanding general, Marine Corps Development and Education Command, Quantico, and later as Assistant Commandant.

In addition to the Medal of Honor, Gen. Davis won the Navy

Cross, and twice received the Silver Star, Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star.

Gen. and Mrs. Davis will retire to the Atlanta area where he has accepted a position as Executive Vice President of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce.

Lab dedication tomorrow

The Division Photographic Laboratory here will be dedicated during a ceremony at sunset tomorrow in honor of a photographer who was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

Cpl. William T. Perkins Jr., who was killed Oct. 12, 1967, during Operation Medina, near Quang Tri in Vietnam, is the first combat correspondent to receive the nation's highest honor.

Attending the ceremony will be Cpl. Perkins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Perkins Sr.; his brother, Robert; a representative of the Combat Pictorial Branch, G-3, Division, HQMC; and other dignitaries. MajGen. Fred Haynes, Commanding General, 2d Marine Division, will be the dedication speaker.

The local chapter of the Marine Corps Combat Correspondents Association, named in honor of Perkins, will host the Perkins family at a luncheon tomorrow at the Steak House. The "Cpl. William T. Perkins Jr. Memorial Chapter" was formed here two years ago.

Kids' flouride next week

A Preventive Dentistry Program will be offered here beginning next week to all military dependent school children by dental facilities of the Tri-Command.

A stannous flouride solution will be applied to the teeth after students have brushed with a special cleaning agent. The application will be followed by instruction in home care and the use of recommended stannous flouride toothpaste.

The program is for children of active duty and retired personnel attending school beginning with kindergarten and those 22 years of age attending college.

Treatment will be in base schools at the following dates beginning at 8 a.m.: Lejeune High School, Monday; Tarawa Terrace I and II, Tuesday; Berkeley Manor, Wednesday; Stone St., Apr. 13; Brewster, Apr. 14; and Midway Park Kindergarten, Apr. 17.

For further information contact the base dental office at ext. 3776.

Damp day for families

A rain-abbreviated Family Day was held Friday for dependents of Marines serving with 2d Shore Party Bn.

An honors parade began the program at 9 a.m. followed by a briefing on the unit's mission. A helicopter support team staged a demonstration as it lifted a jeep above the crowd and lowered it to the ground.

All-Marine boxers look to Interservice

With the All-Marine Boxing team selected, the champions are looking forward to the upcoming Interservice matches with mixed emotions. While some of the boxers don't feel that anyone is a serious challenge to them, others feel that all of the contestants are a threat. The place to find out will be at Goettge Memorial Field House Apr. 11 and 12 for the semi-finals and on the 13th for the championship bouts.

The matches will get underway at 7:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend at no charge.

The names of several of the All Marine contenders may be familiar to some who have followed Marine Boxing. Names like Larry Carlisle, Reggie Jones and Jimmy James, who not only represented the Marine Corps but the nation in the Pan Am Games. Most recently, Carlisle represented the U.S. against ranking English and Russian boxers in January.

Carlisle doesn't feel that there is a better welterweight in the Armed Forces than himself, and desires one day to be a world champion. He attributes his success to hard training. His experiences in boxing have shown him to be the All-Marine from 68-72 and the holder of National Golden Gloves and AAU titles.

Paul Marcum, the All-Marine featherweight attributes success not only to dedication and desire to win but to sacrificing good things to eat like pies, cakes and pizza. He boasts a won-loss record of 110-20.

The Marines lightweight representative, Ray Haley will rely on his boxing experience when he steps into the ring. His experience includes 68, 69, and 72 Golden Gloves victories. He expects every fight to be a tough one.

Perhaps, one of the more stylish boxers for the Marines is in the name of Jerry Dobbs. The middleweight slugger expects all of his opponents to be tough, "because they are champions too," in his words. To overcome them he says, "I just train harder." Dobbs is a National Golden Gloves champion and has KOed 19 of his 42 opponents.

In the heavyweight slot for the Marines will be Harold Meeks. He is looking forward to his fourth crack at the Navy's Duane Bobick. Looking back to his All Marine berth he said, "Confidence was well accomplished before winning the title, along with experience and determination."

At 112 lbs. for the Marines it will be Jimmy James. He feels that he will go all the way in the Interservice matches.

Reggie Jones believes that hard training and the desire to win makes up part of what a boxer must do to become a champion, but that thinking is equally important. He considers the Air Force's Jessie Valdez to be his biggest threat. Jones said, "I was matched against him once and he won by a close decision.

But this time I know I will beat him." His desires are to win the Interservice again and go to the Olympics.

Two-time All-Marine Paschall Waldo will step into the ring at 106 lbs. for the Marines.

Ronald Mason will be fighting for the Marine Corps in the 139 lb. class, and at 119, Calvin Shepard.

At light-heavyweight, it will be James Williams. Williams began his boxing career two years ago at the age of 16. His won-loss record stands at 9-2 with three KOs.

Under the leadership of Coach Duke Redburn and Trainer Al Wilson, the All-Marine Boxing team will be trying to recapture the Interservice Championship for a second consecutive year.

From Tee to Green

Mr. Webster defines "retired" as being withdrawn from active duty or business. The winner of last week's Billie and Jim Gantz Silver Anniversary Tournament, Col. H.E.L. Zastrow, may have "with-drawn" from active duty, but we'd hardly call a gentleman who's assistant principal at a Durham high school and also working for his Masters Degree "retired." A former regular at the Paradise Point layout, Col. Zastrow edged the Hyslop and Fortie duo for the top-slot.

Winners for the WGA ladies in their Home n' Home with their Cherry Point counterparts were Martha Simerly and Ann Kaasmann in A Flight, with Mary Bransford taking low putts. Low gross winner in B Flight was Marge Larkin, with Mary Cornwall winning low net. Edna Maxwell won low putts. Marge Owens and Mary Ann Hadley were the winners in C, with Pam Maher capturing low putt honors. D Flight saw Judie Ives, Beth Leddy, Ginger Peebles and Joan Gerichten emerge as winners. Still another winner was Shirley Ward, who was closest to the pin on the second hole.

Fagan raps on sports

By PFC Tom Fagan

A former All-Marine halfback, All-Time halfback and backfield coach for the MCRD, Parris Island eleven today takes command of Headquarters Bn., 2d Division.

In a change of command ceremony today at Division Headquarters, LtCol. B. Scott Pickett assumes command of Headquarters Bn. from Col. Gilbert R. Hershey.

LtCol. Pickett commanded 2d Bn., 8th Marines (-) (Rein), Guantanamo Bay, prior to assuming his new duties.

This new position may not be as strenuous as the old one as gridiron halfback and more often than not as a tailback in the single wing. Never again will the number 21 grace the gridiron for the simple reason that it was retired when LtCol. Pickett ended his playing days.

His record is an impressive one. In his first year of play, he pounded out enough yardage to earn the title of All-Marine and be named by Leatherneck magazine to the first All-Time Marine Corps team. Applicants are nominated from all over the country. That year was 1947.

Immediately following, he left the service and commenced his collegiate career at the University of Southern Carolina. Here too he pursued his athletic craving, still as a halfback. Upon graduation he received an appointment to second lieutenant and proceeded to Korea not long afterwards. When he returned stateside, he assumed the responsibilities as backfield coach at Parris Island.

Marcum, Haley, Mason, Jones, Dobbs, Meeks win

All-Marine boxers get it on

By PFC Tom Fagan

The anxiously awaited All-Marine boxing finals took place last Wednesday night at Goettge Field House, with six bouts determining the Interservice contestants. However it was much easier for the five unopposed title holders. Those members are Jimmy James at 112; Calvin Shepard at 119; Paschall Waldo at 106; James Williams at 178; and no report of the team would be complete without the super welterweight Larry Carlisle.

In what was considered the most outstanding match of the night, Reggie Jones recuperated from a first round beating on the ropes to overcome Mike Wyant. With exceptional form and really true boxing skill worthy of any pro, these two battled until the end. When the lights came up during the rounds, the crowd was spellbound. The punches thrown by Wyant were so consistent that he closely resembled a jack-in-the-box. But Jones managed to absorb everything dished out and convinced the referee, the judges, and the crowd that he was the superior fighter. In between blows Larry Carlisle, who coached Reggie's corner, occasionally winced and shifted his head, as if faking, because the pounding Wyant was delivering could be not only felt, but heard, up in the last row of bleachers. The flavor of victory is sweet and Jones was just a little bit hungrier for the light-middleweight All-Marine title.

In the battle for featherweight supremacy, Paul Marcum did his part in overwhelming Lawrence Armendariz. The action was popping from the start, when Marcum dropped Armendariz twice in 1:30 of the first round; each time Armendariz was given the mandatory eight count. Marcum had great form and a very dangerous left which his victim soon learned. But twice wasn't enough as Marcum delivered one more knock-down in the second. Armendariz began to show signs of blood in the neck after being subject to the vicious left hook and right jabbing combination of Paul Marcum.

This win brought his record to 110-20. Really, credit goes to Marcum, who obviously had the match from the moment it started.

Ray Haley fought a cautious bout and took every advantage of the opportunity to weaken the defenses of his foe, Timothy Clark better known as T.C. During the course of the fight, Ray received a sharp blow to the neck which resulted in light bleeding. His revenge was satisfied when T.C. took a bloody nose to his corner. The decision went to Haley in a split for the 132-lb. class title.

Into the third All Marine bout, it was Ronald Mason over John Mitchell in the 139-lb. class. After stopping Mason for a mandatory eight-count midway through the first round, Mitchell missed a punch and threw his right shoulder out of socket. Mitchell continued to battle through the second round, taking a pounding from Mason, but was forced by the pain from his shoulder to a retirement at the end of the round.

Jerry Dobbs was only missing the poetry as he totally punched out Johnnie Luther for the All Marine middleweight title. His style was incredibly smooth as he just ruined Luther's whole day. When asked as to why he didn't go for the KO, Dobbs replied that he knew he had the fight from the start and just wanted to perfect his moves.

In the finale, Harold Meeks, who is looking forward to another crack at big Duane Bobick, defeated Melvin Marshall in a unanimous decision in the heavyweight class.

The All Marine boxing team will compete in the Interservice matches to be hosted here Apr. 11, 12 and 13. The interservice title is the highest service title that a member of the Armed Forces can win.

Division boxers put on six preliminary bouts

By LCpl. Tommy Page

Pugilists from the 2d Marine Division intramural boxing program squared off for six preliminary bouts to the All Marine trials last Wednesday night at Goettge Memorial Field House.

The first matchup was between two heavyweights, David Young and Robert St. Peter, with Young taking a split decision. The bout began with a flurry of fists with St. Peter's roundhouse punches making the best of the first round. Young eluded the force of the attack from that point and began to slip his punches. Young's most impressive showing came in the third round as he dodged St. Peter's wild punches and beat him badly in the face, drawing blood.

In the next bout, it was Isaac Johnson all the way over fellow heavyweight Robert Cutler. Johnson held back in the first round as he felt out his opponent, but took no mercy in the second and final round of the fight. After stopping him for a mandatory eight-count to clear his head, Johnson moved in with a flurry of punches which drove Cutler to his corner and the referee stopped the contest.

Not to take any credit away from the definite winner in the bout, but it is very likely that Cutler was out on his feet before he ever stepped into the ring after spending the whole day on maneuvers in the field.

In a welterweight contest, Nathaniel Steele was the quickest and the deadliest as he won a unanimous decision over Bruce Bradley. The first round was probably the closest as both boxers fired out of their corners to meet in the middle of a slugfest. Bradley took a hard jab to the face as he moved into the attack. Steele sharpened up even more in the second round as his combinations started clicking. In the final round, both boxers were showing signs of weariness, but Steele maintained his poise, occasionally stunning his opponent with forceful jabs.

In the fourth bout of the evening, Bryan Casey and Thomas Flint battled cautiously in the first round with neither fighter taking a definite advantage. Casey unloaded all of his heavyweight equipment in the second round and sent his opponent winding to the canvas for two quick knockdowns. In a minute and 12 seconds of the round, Casey had won by a TKO.

In an apparent mis-match, Andreas Orr TKOed Garry Wantland in a minute and five seconds of the first round. Orr showed skillful moves and good form as he handily beat his light-heavyweight opponent.

In the final intramural bout of the evening, Bill Grombacher won a unanimous decision over his heavyweight opponent John Taylor. Although Taylor was the more aggressive boxer, Grombacher used excellent moves and awesome combinations to outdo his worthy opponent.

Some of the names mentioned in this story are likely to crop up again in the Globe as the fighters are increasing their pace in preparation for the 1972 2d Marine Division intramural boxing championships, slated for Apr. 17 through the 29th. The championship bouts will be held in the Boxing Center, Bldg. 401.

Keglers sharpen skills

The All Camp Bowling championships will be conducted Apr. 12, 13, and 14 at the Bonnyman Bowling Center.

Competition will consist of singles, doubles and team events. American Bowling Congress Rules and Regulations will govern play.

The total pin-fall for 18 games bowled in the team event will determine the champion team and runner-up. Team playing strength is six players. The aggregate score of the high five players on each game will determine the team's score.

The singles and doubles events will also be based on the total pin-fall for the 18 games bowled. In the event of a tie score in a position eligible for an award, total pin-fall for three additional games will determine that position.

Also in the line of bowling: MCAS Cherry Point will host the East Coast Regional Bowling Tournament Apr. 24-28. Marines who have established a minimum average of 180 in league or intramural competition this year are eligible to compete. Women Marines must have a minimum average of 148. Averages will be based on a minimum of 24 games for men and 16 for women.

TV special features Interservice matches

WCTI Channel 12, New Bern, will air the Eagle, Globe and Anchor special, on the Interservice matches, this Sunday evening from 6 to 6:30. Host Sgt. Ted Buetner will have as his guests Marine welterweight Larry Carlisle; Air Force light-middleweight Jessie Valdez; the Navy's heavyweight, Duane Bobick; and the Army's light-heavyweight.

The show, titled "Interservice Boxing 1972, Camp Lejeune," also will present Gene Cooper, Air Force team coach and assistant Olympic coach; and Al Wilson, the Marine Corps Boxing Team trainer.
